Dreer's Select Dahlias

New Quilled Show Dahlia

"Dreer's White"

This new quilled Show Dahlia is probably the most important introduction of the season, not only on account of its color, form and size, but also on account of its remarkable free flowering habit. In our trial grounds the past summer it bloomed as profusely as A. D. Livoni. Its flowers are of large size, frequently measuring 6 inches across, and are borne on stout, stiff stems, nodding lightly, and while it resembles in form in a general way the popular Grand Duke Alexis, it is of a much more refined and perfect build, and never shows a trace of any color, always being of a pure, glistening white. It was shown at the annual exhibition of the New England Dahlia Society, where it received an Honorary Award, the highest award given. The Florists' Exchange, reporting on this exhibition, says: "Among notable exhibits perhaps the most striking was that of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, who exhibited a lot of their new Dahlia Dreer's White, and which were magnificent flowers of a pure white."

We offer strong plants, ready April 15, 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

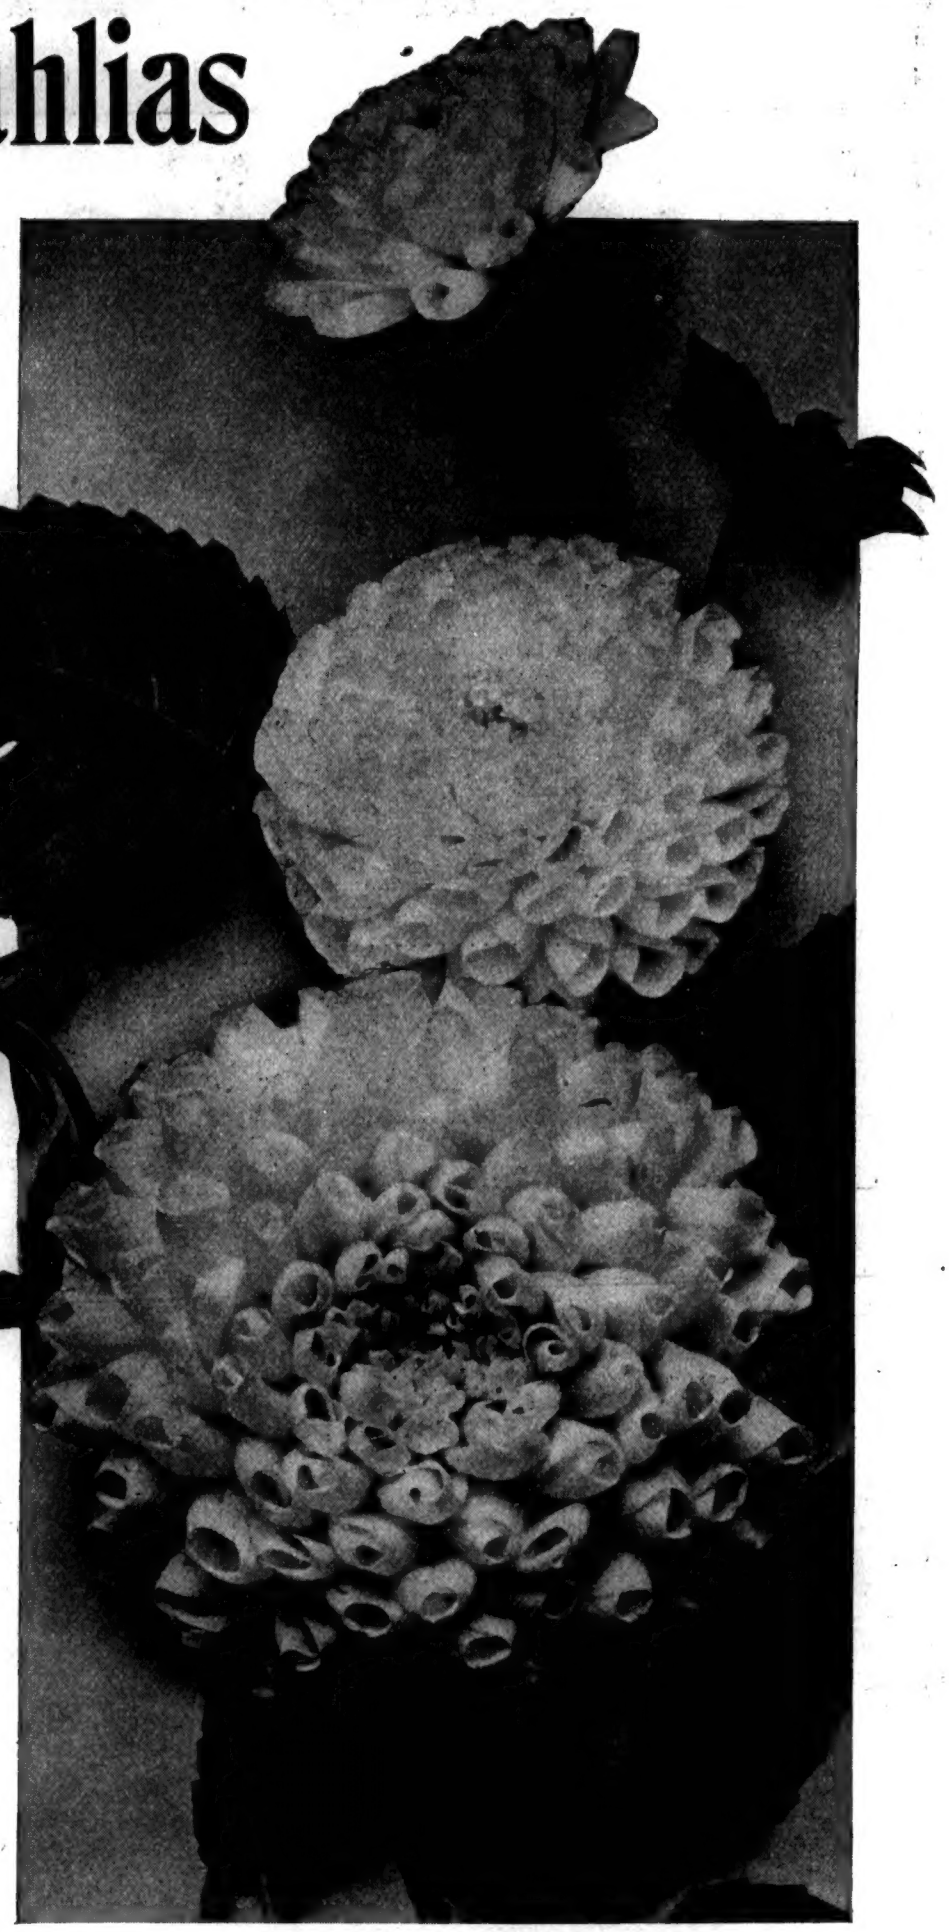
New Decorative Dahlia

"Jack Rose"

Unquestionably the most important addition to the decorative class of Dahlias for many years. In color, a brilliant crimson-red, rich and glowing and which has suggested its name, Jack Rose, on account of the close approach in color to the popular Gen. Jacqueminot Rose, or, as it is more commonly known, the Jack Rose. The habit of the plant is all that can be desired for garden decoration, it being of a uniform compact habit of growth, producing its flowers with the greatest freedom; these are borne on erect, stout stems and always come perfect, a green center or an open flower never having been seen, and under the most ordinary cultivation they will measure five inches or more in diameter. As a cut flower, its rich color, together with its long, stiff stems which hold the flower erect, will at once secure it a place; in fact, the comparatively few flowers placed on the market the past season were quickly disposed of at highest prices. Awarded a certificate of merit by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Oct. 20.

Strong plants, ready April 15, 50c each; $5.00 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

New Cactus Dahlia for Cutting



"Pearlhilde"

Mr. Bassett, the oldest and one of the most extensive growers of Dahlias for cut flowers for the Philadelphia markets, and with whom this variety originated as a sport from Kriemhilde, includes this as one of his best six cut flower varieties. It is identical with its parent except in color, which is a soft blush, so near a white as to pass for such. Strong field roots, 35c each; $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

SHEAF AND SICKLE.

The sheaf of wheat and sickle is a popular combination design carried out with inexpensive material. The lines of both sheaf and sickle, in the accompanying illustration, are faithfully executed with severe simplicity. It is one of the designs by Charles Henry Fox, of the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia, and Mr. Fox filled this order exactly as required, but he says it does not appeal to him. White is ordinarily employed in such a design, though the handle of the sickle may be made with pale pink to contrast with the blade. PHIL.

LUNCHEON BASKETS.

The leading stores are using small handled baskets of spring flowers for luncheon table decorations. Tulips and white lilacs are a popular combination for the purpose. Sweet peas are used in large quantities for luncheon decorations and always are well liked, especially so at this season. Jonquils recently had a leading place for this use, but are less popular since sweet peas became abundant.

A large basket is used for the center of the table, with a small basket at each plate. Usually the baskets are considered as favors and are carried home by the guests.

FLOWER BALLS.

We have an order to make up some floral balls, of Emperor narcissi, for the bridesmaids at a March wedding. Will you kindly tell us how to make same, and how they should be carried during the ceremony? What is the usual price to ask? A. F. C.

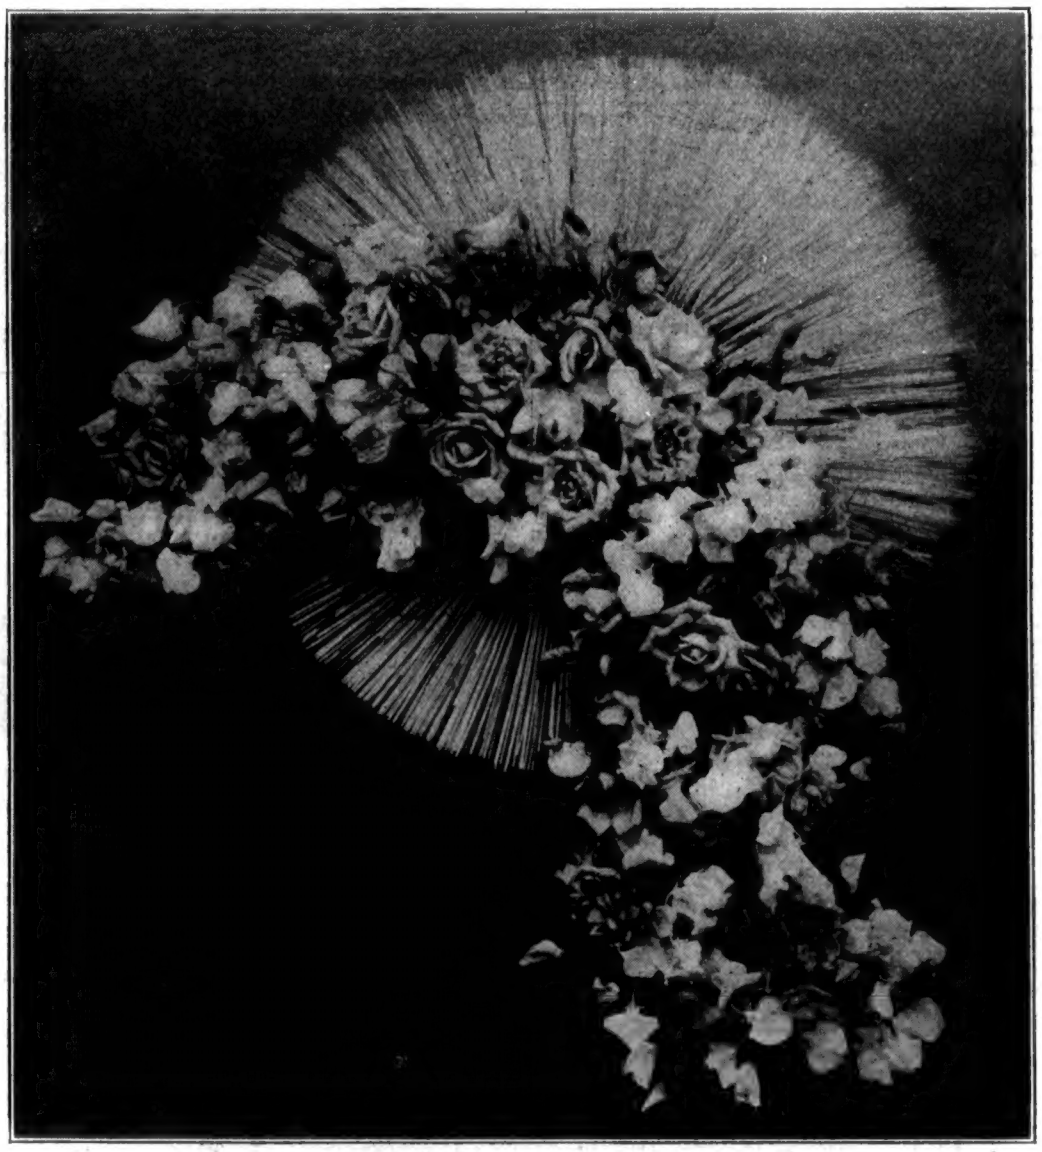
Floral balls, or flowers so arranged as to give the effect of a ball, or sphere, are becoming quite popular for use at weddings or for debutante dances.

The size of the ball will be governed somewhat by the price the florist is to receive and by the wishes of the customer. The conventional size is about from eight to ten inches in diameter when finished. In order to obtain this size, the ball of moss which is to hold the flowers in place should be from four to five inches in diameter. While a frame is not absolutely necessary, still I would have a suitable frame for holding the moss made of light wire. This will give you a good, round ball of moss without its being packed too tightly.

Should you want to get along without the wire frame, then gather up a good handful of dampened, but not dripping, moss and press it into shape, the same as you would make a snowball, only do not pack the moss so tight. When you have the desired size, wind some green string around the moss to keep it in shape. Cover the ball of moss with fern leaves and then lightly with smilax.

Now for the flowers, which in this case are to be Emperor narcissi.

Cut the heads off so as to leave just enough stem so they can be nicely stemmed to toothpicks. You can, of course, stick the toothpicks right into the flowers, if you wish, but this is not advisable, as they are apt to come loose. After you have a sufficient number ready, proceed to insert them in the ball of moss just close enough together so they will cover nicely and still not look crowded. As you work along, be sure to keep the ball round.



The next step is the ribbon by which the ball is to be carried. Use about No. 9 to No. 22 ribbon. The loop should be of such length as to give a nice clearance after the piece is finished. By using about one yard of ribbon you cannot go far wrong. Take two pieces of the green matchsticks and tie one end of the ribbon to each stick; then fasten a bow or rosette of the same ribbon to each stick and insert them on opposite sides into the ball, and you are through.

You can, of course, elaborate upon this piece by using more ribbon, or attaching streamers of ribbon. You also can give a more airy effect by letting some of the flowers project out beyond the others, but here you must be careful or you will lose the round effect.

A ball as described at first will require about fifty narcissi.

The floral balls are carried loosely over the left arm of the lady, the same as a basket would be carried. The moss should not be too wet, for if the ball is heavy it will not swing so gracefully.

The price will, of course, depend entirely upon the number of and variety of flowers used. Whenever called upon to give an estimate upon a piece of this kind, or any piece out of the ordinary, be sure to ask enough, for not having profited by previous experience you may lose money if you give yourself no leeway. HUGO SCHROETER.

Sheaf and Sickle.

THE RETAIL TRADE.

[An abstract of a talk by Edward MacMulkin, of Boston, Mass., before the floricultural classes of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, February 17, 1909, the publication of which was begun in the Review for February 25.]

The Good Salesman.

In regard to the sale of flowers by florists in stores in all the large cities, to make it profitable now requires a certain style of man. The more he knows about his business the more successful he will be. Any ordinary, well-dressed, intelligent person can sell a dozen roses or a box of cut flowers, but the real man must have four necessary qualifications to make him a success. All should be natural ones, but one must be natural and the others may be acquired. They are good taste, good ideas, good manners, and the integrity to carry out in good faith any agreement he may make with a customer.

It is not necessary for a man to be what some florists absurdly call themselves—artists. I know some of the best artists in the country who could not put a bunch of flowers in a vase, and I know men who could not tell the artistic difference between a steel cut and a wood cut, that could arrange a bunch of flowers in such a manner as would compel your admiration. That is the natural taste in the man, and is the foundation upon which he can, if he be so inclined, build all the others. His ideas in general must be good. No customer wants the same thing all the time or even wants what he has seen elsewhere. This makes it imperative on the part of the florist, if he wants to hold his business, to be able to originate new schemes for the arrangement of flowers and new methods of placing them before his customer.

Making Stock Attractive.

There are innumerable ways in which you can add to the attractiveness of your flowers and in that way make a ready sale for flowers that ordinarily would be waste product. All flowers are not perfect and for that reason all of them do not sell readily. Take a rose, for instance; many of them are short-stemmed and not suitable for vases. These same roses, put in a basket that is prettily arranged, form an attractive offering. Glass dishes that can be bought in quantity at a low price are another method for the disposal of short-stemmed flowers. The addition of a ribbon to a bunch of flowers does not materially increase the cost, but does give it a finish it would not have if simply laid in a box. A cheap box is a mistake. It spoils the effect of a good flower.

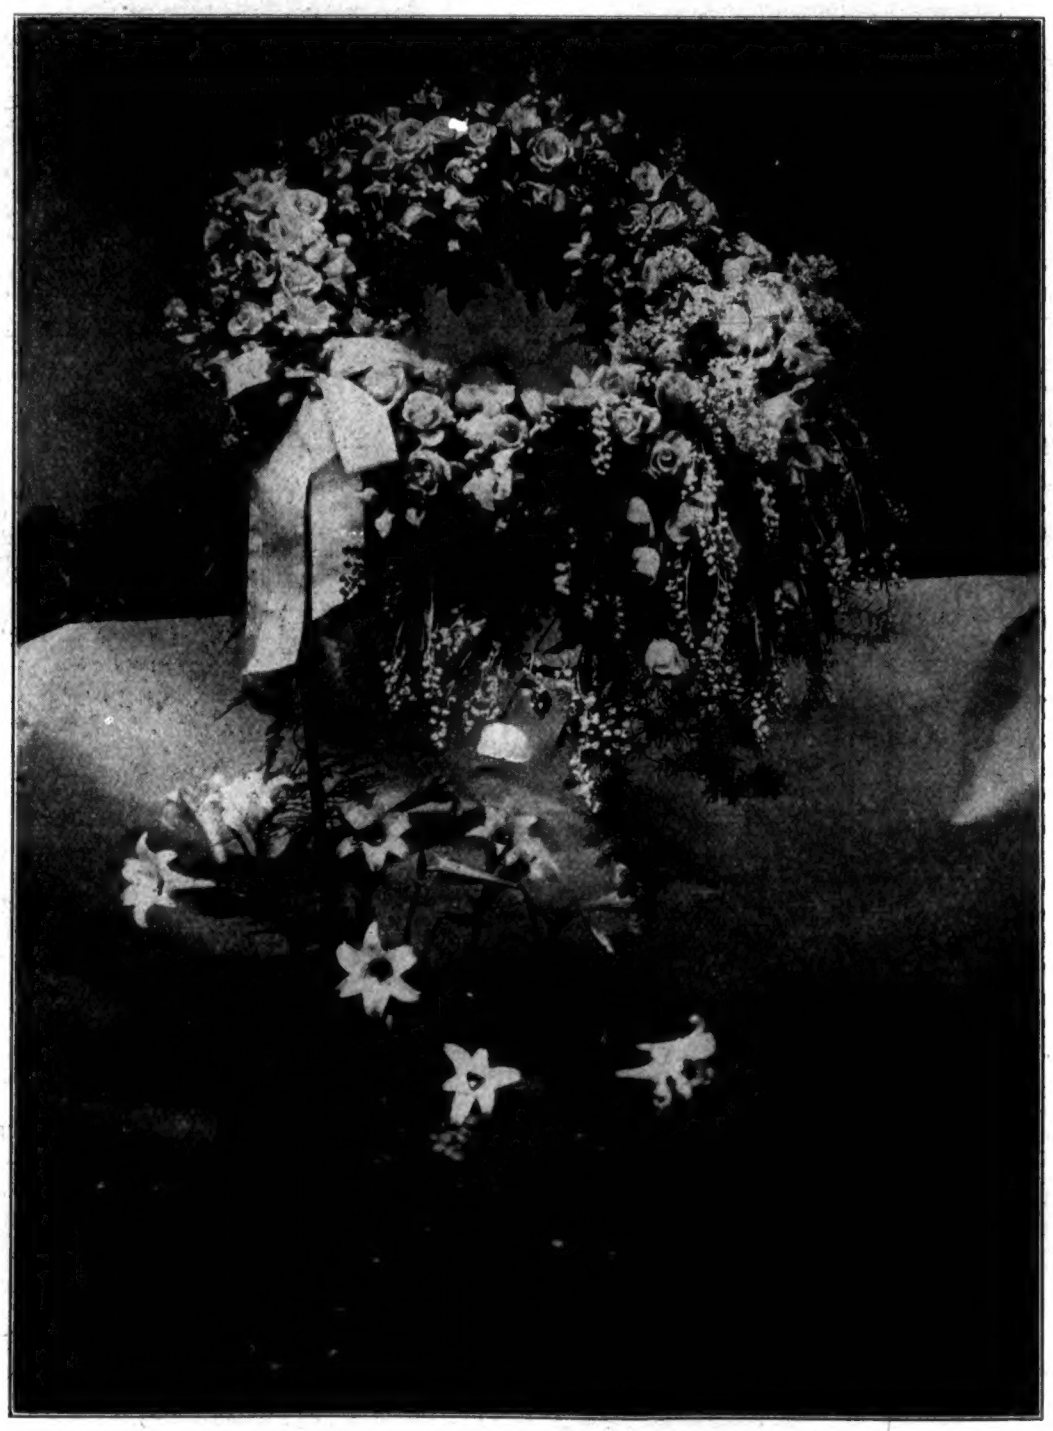
Do not sell old flowers; you make money by throwing them away. Nothing so discourages a man as to buy a few flowers and find them curled up on him the next day. He may stand it once or twice, but in a short time he feels he is throwing away money in buying flowers; so, instead of buying once or twice a week, he only buys when it is absolutely necessary, and then with the feeling that he is not getting what he pays for.

In handling your customers, do not sell them something they ask for simply because they are willing to pay for it, when you know the result will be unsatisfactory to them. Do the right thing by telling them what you know. It will give them confidence in your ability and integrity, and will help to increase your business. If you are in doubt at any time, or you do not understand just what course to pursue, do not pretend you know; find the man that knows and ask him. There is always one to be found. Be big enough to find him and he will be big enough to tell you.

Planning for Permanent Success.

It is to be presumed that if you start in business you are not there for today or tomorrow, but are going to make a life work of it. Your whole object, then, should be to carry on your business in such a manner that your customers feel that nowhere else could they obtain as good results as they could with you. It is a well-known fact that every satisfied customer will make another for you. A short time ago I was asked what I considered the best recommendation that a florist could have, and I answered that in my case I felt more proud of the fact that I was still doing business with the same people I had in the beginning than any other success I had attained.

You are starting under more auspicious circumstances than men of the last decade. Men of the next decade will have an advantage over you, unless you keep up with them. If you attain success, do not fall into a beaten track and think you know it all. Go out among your competitors in other places and see what they are doing. It is not given to one man to know it all. I know of a number of men at the present time who are going back because they will not understand that new methods and new appliances reduce expenses both in labor and material, thus enabling their competitors not only to undersell them, but to give better results more quickly and for a less expenditure of money.



Penny Wise and Pound Foolish.

In the ordinary course of business every man is entitled to a legitimate profit; see that you get it, but do not ask the good fellow to pay for your mistakes. It is not the man who "soaks" a customer when he gets a chance that makes the most money. There is an old saying that if a man fools you once it is his fault, but if he fools you the second time it is your fault, and every man that has been "fooled" or "soaked" knows it. Do not have the impression that a man does not know when he is being taken advantage of. He may not be able to prove it, but he has the idea and to him that is just as good. You can never get him again, and for an insignificant sum you not only cheat yourself and him, but lose a customer.

The florist is called upon now to do a business never thought of a few years ago. Formerly his principal business was the making of a few bouquets, packing up a few flowers for presentation purposes, arranging so-called designs for funerals and occasionally something more pretentious than a bouquet for a large banquet. Now the florist must be prepared to present to the customer ideas for the decoration of the dinner table, house decorations for weddings, receptions, teas, etc.; church decorations for all occasions; the arrangement of flowers in appropriate form for birthdays, anniversaries, funerals, etc., and he must know what is appropriate for the occasion and be able to properly execute the commission. To the average man the selection of flowers for any special occasion is a new experience, and it is the duty of the florist to suggest to his customer what he knows is the best thing for him to have; not only that, but to make the expense so reasonable that he will not be afraid to look in a florist's window ever after. There is more money in selling a man $5 worth a hundred times than in selling him $100 worth one time.

Tact and Discrimination.

The average good florist is more or less an idealist and often finds it hard to draw the line between what he would like to give his customer and what the customer really wants and should have. Very often the addition of a few dollars to the expense would act as the straw that broke the camel's back, and while the customer would pay it and really get his money's worth, he would still feel that he was being compelled to undergo an expense that under the circumstances was uncalled for. The more you educate the general public in the idea that it is the thing to provide flowers for any and all occasions, the better it will be for your business, and the only way to do it is to have them feel that they are getting their money's worth.

While flowers vary in price at different seasons of the year, they always have a price and that price should be the same for everybody. It is too often the habit of the florist to ask a customer a certain price for flowers that his customer will consider is more than he wants to pay, and instead of offering something more in keeping with what is wanted in price will reduce the cost of what he does offer. Practically in no other line of business is this done, and nothing you can do or say will convince your customer that you were not attempting to take advantage of him. By this I do not mean that a large buyer should not receive concessions. It is legitimate in any business to sell to a buyer at a less price per hundred than could be accepted for any single article. There can, however, be no absolute rule in regard to this concession. The different conditions in each case leave it to the judgment and sense of fairness in the dealer.

Do not ever allow one customer to say to another that that one could buy the same thing cheaper than the other could. And when you give a purchaser a price and he tells you he can get it elsewhere for less money, take no notice of it; the elsewhere must have his profit the same as you must, or he could not do business. He certainly should not be able to grow or buy at a lower price than you can, but if he can do it, it is your fault and you should take the necessary steps to be on an equal footing with him.

THE PRESENTATION BASKET.

One of the important features of the business, especially in New York, is the steamer trade. These bon voyage tokens nearly always take the form of baskets of cut flowers, although occasionally a zinc-lined hamper of plants is preferred. The presentation basket shown in the accompanying illustration was made by M. A. Bowe, New York, to go to a newly married couple sailing on the Cedric. The flowers used were Bride roses, white lilac and lilies, with a liberal use of adiantum, and the doves carried sprays of lily of the valley in their bills.

THE CASCADE WREATH.

The cascade wreath shown in the accompanying illustration was made at the store of J. R. Freeman, Washington, D. C. The wreath may be made of almost any material, but the forward portion must be light, airy and graceful, to represent a shower. This design was first used for the funeral of Grover Cleveland and was at that time illustrated in the REVIEW. Some who make this piece put the flowers in the base too far back, so that there is no connection between the two sections of the design, as there should be. In the piece illustrated the supporting rod was draped with a string of asparagus, which hardly suffices for the purpose of concealment.

AVERAGE CROP OF SPRENGERI.

Will you please state what a bench, 4x300 feet, of Asparagus Sprengeri will yield in a season—that is, for the trade? Also state what is the best method of culture. Would it be better to grow in pots or in the bench for cutting? L. K.

If the sprays of Sprengeri are wanted for the market, plant in a 14-inch or 16-inch wire basket, and hang them just over the walks in your greenhouse, high enough so that you will have plenty of headroom. They make much nicer sprays in that way than in a bench and, besides, do not take up any valuable room. A bench 4x300 feet should produce about 35,000 sprays in a year, which in the Chicago market average about 1½ cents per spray. Sprengeri is a gross feeder and, to produce the above results, must have plenty of fertilizer, solid as well as liquid. ALBERT F. AMLING.

HYDRANGEAS.

When and how should I start hydrangeas for Easter blooming, also what varieties and what size plants should I purchase? E. A.

It is now much too late to start any hydrangeas for Easter flowering. If you can put in a good batch of cuttings now and grow them along so that they will be in 6-inch pots before fall, they will make you excellent plants for another year. Failing this, you had better buy plants in the fall. If from the open ground, pot them up and keep in a cool, dry pit over winter. The time to start hydrangeas depends on the date Easter falls on. This year it was necessary to place them in heat early in January. Hydrangea Otaksa is the popular Easter hydrangea, although H. hortensis is becoming a favorite with many. C. W.

TOBACCO TRUST INFLUENCES.

It long has been known that the Conley Foil Co., New York., from which many supply houses buy tinfoil, was owned by the American Tobacco Co., but it was only last week that a report of the U. S. Commissioner of Corporations disclosed the fact that the tobacco trust also controls the Johnson Tinfoil & Metal Co., St. Louis, which also does a large business with florists. The trust owns $445,000 of the $575,000 capital of the Conley Co., and $300,000 of the $400,000 capital of the Johnson Co. The trade has been told that the lead trust was responsible for the advance in price of tinfoil in recent years, which may be true, but the reason for lack of competition is now more apparent than it was.

Among the eighty-four other companies controlled by the tobacco trust is the Kentucky Tobacco Product Co., in which it owns $560,000 of the $1,000,000 capital stock. But instead of advancing the price of nicotine products, this company keeps prices down with a claim for greatest manufacturing efficiency. It has, however, never been as aggressive as the strength of its backing would lead one to expect.

CENSUS OF FLORICULTURE.

The Society of American Florists has for the first time interested itself in the census of floriculture and it is the intention of the government officials in charge to gather in 1910 the most complete and informative figures ever prepared covering our trade.

It is of no little consequence that the true extent of our business should be known. Too many not conversant with the facts look upon the flower business as one of the minor interests, and upon florists as a not important element in the business world. Complete and accurate figures will do much to correct this false impression and establish the trade on its proper footing among the other industries, to give it a voice and influence it does not now possess but to which it is entitled.

In the adjoining column there is presented a first draft of a suggested schedule for florists to be used in connection with the thirteenth census in 1910. In transmitting this L. G. Powers, Chief Statistician of the Bureau of the Census, says: "This is sent for the purpose of eliciting criticisms and suggestions for improvement from those connected with the trade, so that this office may utilize the judgment and experience of the largest number of such persons and thus secure the greatest amount of practical information that is available, relating to the florists' trade."

Anyone in the trade who can offer a suggestion as to how these questions can be made in any way better than they are, is invited to address Mr. Powers at the Bureau of the Census, Washington, D. C. All suggestions will not only have consideration, but will be esteemed as an aid to the bureau in making this work of value to the trade.

The Review has one suggestion to make, not to the Census Bureau, but to the trade. Unless preparation is made, many will find themselves unable to answer these questions when the blanks are received next year. Go over the question carefully. See how many of them you can answer from the records you are keeping. Remember that the census covers the business year of 1909. If your books do not give all the information called for, start now, go back to the first of the year and keep a record. It is important to all florists that the census be complete and accurate.

PRIMROSES.

How do you treat Chinese and obconica primroses during the summer months? They are now blooming in 2-inch pots.

G. C. H.

Primula obconica and Sinensis succeed best during the summer months in coldframes which have a northern exposure. The sashes can be removed during the day, after danger from frost has gone, and lath shadings used in their stead. These give the plants the necessary shade and keep them cool. There is no need to use the sashes unless rain storms threaten. Leave the plants fully exposed at night.

We would advise sowing seeds of these two primulas now, rather than to try to carry over the little blooming plants you now have in 2-inch pots. C. W.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND LABOR,

CENSUS OFFICE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 1, 1910.

This schedule has been prepared to assist in collecting the statistics of floriculture in the United States. By means of this and the general agricultural schedule, it is the purpose of the Census Office to bring out a full and reliable statement of the present conditions in this important branch of horticulture. To this end the Director of the Census solicits the coöperation of all concerned. The Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists at their convention in Niagara Falls in 1908 approved this schedule and urgently recommended that all florists fill it out promptly and as accurately as possible, for the interests of the trade at large would thereby be benefited.

All florists are, therefore, earnestly requested to make their reports as correct as possible. If unable to answer from their book accounts, estimates may and should be given, but such estimates should be made with great care. Producers are assured that their answers will be regarded as strictly confidential, and will not be disclosed to any person not connected with the Census Office. The data will not be used in connection with any system of taxation, or in any way that will affect adversely the interests of those reporting. No publication will be made in census reports which will disclose the names or operations of individuals, firms or corporations.

To aid in securing complete returns from all florists, there is inclosed herewith a list of all persons believed to receive their mail at your postoffice and to be engaged in growing flowers or plants for profit. Please add thereto any omitted names that are known to you and cross out those of persons who are not now growing flowers or plants, and return the corrected list with this schedule.

The Director, while fully acknowledging his obligations to and dependence on florists, desires to impress upon all that the time and labor devoted to supplying the facts requested are in their interest, and that upon the completeness of the returns may depend much of the future progress in this branch of horticulture.

A careful report on this blank and its prompt return in the inclosed envelope, which requires no postage, is solicited.

Approved:
S. N. D. North (Facsimile),
Director of the Census.

Very respectfully,
L. G. Powers (Facsimile),
Chief Statistician in Charge of Agriculture.

GRASSHOPPERS.

In the Review of January 21 H. C. S. inquires as to the best method of preventing grasshoppers from ruining his outdoor crops of asters, gladioli, etc. In the hope of helping him, I offer the following recipe, extracted from a pamphlet issued by the Department of Agriculture: Horse droppings, 100 pounds; common salt, two pounds; Paris green, one pound; one-half pail of water. Mix the whole thoroughly in a barrel and sow broadcast on the edge of the crop and lightly in the crop. This is said to be very effective.

BOSTON TRADE EXHIBITION.

A Distinct Success.

The exhibition held in Horticultural hall, Boston, under the auspices of the Park Street Flower Market, February 27 and 28, was a pronounced success in every way. It proved far and away the best trade show ever seen in New England and it is doubtful if, as an all-around exhibition, it has been surpassed by any similar one in America. The display of carnations alone equaled, if, indeed, it did not surpass that seen on the occasion of the last visit of the American Carnation Society to Boston, while the quality was much superior. The arrangements were excellent and everything went along with a snap from start to finish.

The greatest amount of credit for the wonderful success of the show was due to the untiring energy of the secretary-treasurer, E. Allan Peirce, who has worked hard to make this exhibition stand out head and shoulders over all its predecessors. His enthusiasm was contagious and everyone worked with a vim and energy pleasing to witness. The committee working with Mr. Peirce was W. H. Elliott, George Cartwright, S. J. Goddard, Thomas Roland, William Sim and W. R. Nicholson. The judges, whose decisions gave general satisfaction, were S. J. Reuter, Thomas Roland, A. H. Fewkes, E. A. Wood, A. H. Lange and T. D. Hatfield.

The small exhibition hall was devoted to baskets, table centerpieces, bouquets and tables. The main hall was filled to repletion with the other exhibits, carnations as usual being seen in the greatest numbers. The hall presented a very pleasing appearance, the arrangement of the exhibits being very good.

The Carnations.

For fifty white carnations, F. R. Pierson Co. led, with fine White Perfection; William Nicholson second, with White Enchantress. For fifty flesh-pink, Peter Fisher was first and S. J. Goddard second in a strong class, each showing Enchantress. In the light pink class, F. R. Pierson Co. led, M. A. Patten & Co. second, both showing Winsor. For dark pink, F. R. Pierson Co. was first on Afterglow, S. J. Goddard second with Helen Goddard. Cottage Gardens Co. won in a strong class of scarlets, with Beacon; M. A. Patten & Co. second, with the same variety. William Nicholson led in the crimson class, with Fenn; Wilfrid Wheeler, second. William Nicholson also won the variegated class, with Mrs. Patten; M. A. Patten & Co. second, with Variegated Lawson.

In the classes calling for twenty-five blooms each, Lemoine Bros. had the best whites in White Perfection, F. R. Pierson Co. following with President Seelye. Lemoine Bros. also won the flesh-pink class, with Enchantress; M. A. Patten & Co. second, with Enchantress. For light pinks, Lemoine Bros. were again in the lead, F. R. Pierson Co. second, each showing Winsor. M. A. Patten & Co. won in the dark pink class with Afterglow, C. S. Strout second, with the same variety. For scarlets, Lemoine Bros. won with Victory, A. Batley & Son second, with Beacon. Edward Winkler led in crimsons with Fenn, Lemoine Bros. second, with the same variety. M. A. Patten & Co. won the variegated class with Variegated Lawson.

For 100 blooms in a vase, not less than six varieties, Peirce Bros. won the prize of $25, F. R. Pierson Co. second. A. Roper won the T. J. Grey trophy for 100 blooms of one variety, with Bay State; Cottage Gardens Co. second, with Alma Ward. The A. H. Hews Co. cup for six varieties, fifty in a vase, was won by the Cottage Gardens Co. with a superb lot mostly of their own seedlings. The Peter Fisher special for fifty Beacon went to William Nicholson, Cottage Gardens Co. second. For twenty-five Beacon, C. S. Strout was first and B. P. Ulrich second. The Cottage Gardens Co. special for fifty Beacon went to S. J. Goddard. The Witterstaetter specials for Afterglow went to the F. R. Pierson Co. and William Nicholson. The F. R. Pierson specials for Winsor were secured by Peirce Bros. and C. S. Strout.

For twelve blooms of an unnamed seedling, there was a numerous entry. Peter Fisher won with an immense scarlet, a much improved Beacon, No. 409; F. R. Pierson Co. second, with a dark sport of Winsor, and third with a fine crimson, No. 60.

For single blooms on short stems, prizes went as follows: White, Peirce Bros. first, with White Perfection; F. R. Pierson Co. second, with the same variety. Flesh pink, Peirce Bros. first, with Enchantress; S. J. Goddard second, with the same variety. Light pink, Peirce Bros. first, with Rose-pink Enchantress; F. R. Pierson Co. second, with seedling No. 50. Dark pink, F. R. Pierson Co.

first, with seedling No. 80; Peirce Bros. second, with Aristocrat. Scarlet, Peirce Bros. first, on Beacon; F. R. Pierson Co. second, on Victory. Crimson, S. J. Reuter & Son first, for Ruby; F. R. Pierson Co. second. Variegated, A. Roper first, on Bay State; S. J. Goddard second, on Priscilla.

Sanderson led with Farquhar. For Princess of Wales there was a big entry, Esty Bros. first and William Sim second. Any other single, William Sim first, with Boston. For the William Sim special for best display of Boston violet there were some splendid entries. Sidney Hoffman was first and Penn Bros. third.

Thomas Roland's Cyclamens at the Boston Trade Show.

The Roses.

In the rose classes, Waban Rose Conservatories had the best American Beauties. On pink, Montrose Greenhouses won with fine Bridesmaid, beating W. H. Elliott with Killarney. Montrose Greenhouses also led for white, W. H. Elliott second, each showing Bride. For red, W. H. Elliott won with Richmond, also any other color with fine Perle. For vase of fifty assorted roses, A. N. Pierson won, Montrose Greenhouses second.

There was no competition in the classes allotted to small growers with less than 30,000 feet of glass.

Waban Rose Conservatories took the Park Street Market special for a new rose, with White Killarney. W. H. Elliott had fine vases of Isabella Sprunt, Bon Silene, Rhea Reid and Safrano. S. J. Reuter and A. N. Pierson showed My Maryland. All these received gratuities.

The Sweet Peas.

There was a splendid lot of sweet peas shown. William Sim swept the deck, with magnificent flowers in every class. He was first for 100 pink, 100 light pink, 100 lavender, 100 white, 100 any other color, for the Flower Market prize and certificate for best new variety, for the Zvolanek trophy for 100 each of not less than six varieties, and for the Zvolanek special for a Zvolanek collection of five standard varieties. Passaic Avenue Greenhouses, Clifton, N. J., was second on 100 white and 100 pink. William Sim's varieties were F. Denzer, Mrs. A. Wallace, Governor Fort, Greenbrook, W. W. Smalley, Mrs. F. J. Dolansky, Christmas Captain, Mrs. G. W. Lewis, Mrs. C. H. Totty, Mrs. William Sim, Christmas Pink and Watchung.

The Violets.

Violets made a big showing. Each class called for two bunches of 100 flowers each. H. F. Calder had the finest Campbell. For any other double, H. M. William Sim took the special for the best new violet, with Kaiser Wilhelm, Baronne Rothschild pressing it closely.

Lilies and Bulbous Stock.

H. M. Robinson & Co. had the best lily of the valley, J. T. Butterworth second. Mann Bros. won for twelve bunches of bulbous flowers with an excellent lot. J. T. Butterworth won for fifty tulips, with Flamingo; Mann Bros. second, with La Reine. William Nicholson had the best fifty marguerites, S. J. Goddard second. W. C. Ward had the best 200 pansies. William Nicholson, with magnificent spikes, captured the mignonette prize; H. Waldecker second. Mann Bros. and Mrs. W. S. Fraleigh had the best narcissi.

The H. F. Michell trophy for twelve pots of Easter lilies went to Peirce Bros. Thomas Roland had the best dozen cyclamen, which captured the Page Pottery Co. prize. His group of sixty magnificently grown plants was one of the features of the show and also took the Gardeners' and Florists' Club special for the most meritorious exhibit in the show.

Retailers' Work.

For best decorative basket of carnations, not over 100 flowers to be used, F. E. Palmer led eight other competitors. He used Beacon to good effect. The same exhibitor had the best table centerpiece, using light pink carnations and cœlogyne. H. R. Comley was second for basket, with Winsor.

The Goddard special for best bouquet of carnations went to Penn Bros., who had a shower bouquet of white flowers.

The baskets and other decorations were numerous and one of the features of the show.

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

Miscellaneous exhibits were numerous and included fine groups of flowering and foliage plants from W. W. Edgar Co. and A. Leuthy & Co. F. R. Pierson Co. had a fine assortment of nephrolepis and numerous carnations, including some fine novelties. Joshua Lawson had a dozen fine specimen cyclamen. Michael Sullivan had a table of specimen cinerarias. Julius Roehrs Co. had orchids in bloom and samples of newly imported stock. Thomas Watt had a fine specimen of Lælia anceps and an assortment of cut orchids. W. W. Rawson Co. had pink annual lupins and Cheiranthus Kewensis. Peirce Bros. had a group of palms and Easter lilies and W. A. Manda had cut orchids.

Carnation Novelties.

There were numerous carnation novelties. Dorothy Gordon, from Joseph Heacock Co., showed up well. Shasta, from Baur & Smith, looked very fresh after its long journey from Indianapolis. E. H. Richards showed Viola Sinclair. M.

Part of the Retail Work at the Boston Trade Show.

The Roses at the Boston Trade Show.

A. Patten & Co. had fine vases of Genevieve, white, and Hattie Starrett, variegated yellow. H. A. Jahn had a variety of seedlings, some very good. J. D. Cockcroft had Georgia in good shape. Among unnamed seedlings, a light pink from Leonard Cousins looked well, also crimson from L. E. Small and Samuel Kinder & Son. N. D. Pierce had a promising yellow. F. R. Pierson had some fine things, several Winsor sports being specially taking. Henry Schrade had his yellow, Kanarienbird, and Wanoka Greenhouses had Apple Blossom.

Thomas Pegler, for Buxton & Allard, showed the popular economy bracket. Daniel Iliffe had a section of a greenhouse to show how his new ventilating apparatus worked, also other greenhouse sundries.

Visitors.

The attendance was very large, the halls being crowded during the whole time the exhibition was open, some thousands visiting it on the second day. Among the trade visitors from a distance were:

PRESERVING GREENHOUSE WOOD

I should like to know if experience has proved that pine tar applied to greennouse benches is injurious to plants. Pine tar is a good wood preserver, and as it is a vegetable matter it might not be detrimental. I am paying $35 per thousand feet for rough pine fencing and am consequently interested in wood preservatives. J. A. W.

If J. A. W. is using rough pine fencing for greenhouse benches, and paying the price he mentions, he should sit down at once and write to some of the advertisers of pecky cypress who offer this bench material in the REVIEW. But it will be a matter of general interest to hear from any reader who has used pine tar on the woodwork of his greenhouse.

Carbolineum.

In the REVIEW of February 11 A. J. Pennock asks for information regarding the value of S. P. F. Carbolineum for preserving wooden benches in greenhouses. I used Carbolineum on the posts and framework of my benches, and to the fumes from the Carbolineum I attribute the fact that a bench of smilax and one of asparagus were killed. I think my bedding plants in the same house are also beginning to show the effects of the fumes. E. J. HULL.

Experiments by the National Government.

The United States Forest Service made some investigations on the preservation of greenhouse timbers during the last year, and has treated timbers experimentally with various wood preservatives, but of course no results could yet be obtained on the relative efficiency of the different preservatives used.

An investigation of the open tank process of treating was tried in these tests and found feasible. This process, which has been used successfully with fence posts, poles and other timbers, consists ordinarily of a thorough heating of the timber in a hot preservative, followed by an immersion in a cold preservative. The modification consists in using oven heating in place of heating in the preservative. It was found that by two to four hours' heating and two hours in cold solution, almost complete penetration of the sap pine boards could be obtained. The advantage of oven heating is that it makes possible the use of the principle of the hot and cold bath with corrosive salts, like mercuric chloride and copper sulphate.

Creosote has long been the standard preservative, both in this country and abroad, for timbers which come in contact with much moisture. In comparatively dry situations antiseptic salts may be used to advantage. If appearance is a prime consideration, creosote should not be used, as wood so treated will not take paint.

The following is an estimated cost of treating lumber on a small scale:

Salt.	Absorption of solution, per cu. ft. (lbs.).	Dry salt per 1000 ft. B. M. (lbs.).	Cost of salt per pound.	Strength of solution (per cent).	Cost of preservative per 1000 ft. B. M.
Zinc chloride	16	53.1	$0.10	4	$5.31
Copper sulphate ...	16	13.2	.08	1	1.06
Mercuric chloride...	16	6.6	.80	0.5	5.28

The Forest Service has not made any experiments with crude petroleum for the treatment of greenhouse timbers, which has been used to a limited extent in treating fence posts and poles. I am informed that a railway company operating in the southwest is obtaining good results from the use of crude petroleum for treating ties.

The Forest Service has issued a number of circulars describing the open tank process of treating in its application to posts and other timbers. Any of these may be obtained on request.

TEMPERATURE FOR ASPARAGUS.

Would carnation temperature be all right for asparagus ferns? D. S.

Asparagus will grow in carnation temperature, but will grow much more rapidly, and of as good quality, in a temperature 10 degrees higher. A. F. J. B.

ALBANY, N. Y.—At the annual banquet of the Albany Florists' Club, February 18, there were present President Fred Goldring, John A. Howe, Jr., Fred A. Danker, James H. Snyder, Rhinebeck; John C. McAllister, and Patrick C. Hyde.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—Friday morning, February 26, about half-past five, the hot water boiler at Relyea's greenhouses, on Orchard place, burst beyond repair. Owing to the mild weather, not much damage resulted. A new boiler was installed in time to have fire up in it by four o'clock the same day.

CROP FOR SMALL HOUSE.

My house is 21x50, arranged with two center benches four feet and six inches wide, and two side benches three feet wide. I intend to grow either roses or carnations on the center benches, and, if possible, to grow other general stock on the side benches. If this is possible, what would you advise me to grow? Or do you think it would pay better to fill the house with only roses or carnations? There is headroom of two feet six inches on the side benches, with glass sides.

W. H. B.

In such a house as you have, I would not recommend you to grow roses at all. Their culture is better left to specialists who have larger houses to devote to them. Carnations would do well. They require a night temperature of 50 to 54 degrees, according to the varieties you may plan to grow. The Lawson and Enchantress varieties can be grown successfully in a minimum of 48 to 50 degrees. If you wish to utilize the side benches for other crops, such as stocks, or the growing of bedding plants, spiræas, azaleas, bulbous stock and other flowering plants, you could do so. My own choice would be to fill the house with carnations, if you have a good market for these flowers. You could pull out some of the plants on the side benches if you needed extra room in spring.

C. W.

KUHL'S KUT.

George A. Kuhl, at Pekin, Ill., thinks the house pictured in the accompanying illustration is entitled to consideration among the claimants for the record for production in the last few months. The house contains 3,450 plants, the varieties being Enchantress, Sarah Hill and Lawson-Enchantress, about one-third of each. During the months of November, December, January and February the cut was as follows:

Lawson-Enchantress	6,800
Sarah Hill	7,000
Enchantress	7,300
Total	21,100

This is an average of more than six blooms to the plant.

LEAF-SPOT DISEASES.

Please tell me what is the trouble with my carnations, the cause and the remedy. The tips are dry, even in the short shoots or cuttings. Enclosed you will find samples. Some of the buds are affected also. We have steam heat. We have been watering once a week so far this winter, and we soak them well. We keep them in a temperature of 50 degrees at night, 60 degrees on cloudy days and 70 degrees on bright days. The Enchantress seem to be affected most. I also spray them once a week with nicotine solution, for greenfly. C. U.

The specimens were too badly dried up when they reached here for me to be entirely certain of the disease affecting your carnation plants. It is apparently, however, a leaf-spot disease, most likely fairy ring. Like all the leaf-spots, this disease is usually started by too much humidity in the atmosphere where they are growing. Standing wet overnight, or a heavy drenching of the soil during cloudy weather, will produce such atmospheric conditions.

To begin with, have all the spotted leaves picked off and burnt. Get some lime, slake it dry, and scatter it under the benches and along the paths to sweeten the atmosphere. Dust the plants with Grape Dust and paint one of the steam pipes with a sulphur and lime dope. Get some Bordeaux mixture and spray them once each week. Keep up this treatment until you have the disease under control. With the days getting longer and more sunshine, you ought soon to get the disease under control.

IN FAVOR OF INDOOR CULTURE.

In the Review of February 25, page 25, a correspondent spoke of our success in growing carnations in the houses all summer. I wish to say, with reference to the different varieties of the Lawson carnation, that if they are properly treated and grown indoors all summer, and if care has been exercised in taking cuttings, they will give just as good results as they originally did. I am cutting White, Pink and Variegated Lawson with 2-foot stems and with flowers three inches and over, with a greater quantity of cut. The plants are strong and vigorous. I have a bench of Boston Markets grown the same way, with 2-foot stems, and they sold for $3 per hundred in New York city. We had just as good results with the several varieties of Enchantress, Lady Bountiful, Beacon, Winsor, Kingston Pet, etc. We shall grow all varieties in the houses this year. If properly cared for, success is certain. Of the cuttings from these plants we do not lose over one per cent, on account of their natural vigor.

LOCATION OF VARIETIES.

Our carnation house will run east and west and have five benches. By using one bench for each kind, in what order should the following be arranged, commencing with the south bench: Winsor, White Lawson, Enchantress, Beacon and Harlowarden? D. S.

If your house is even-span, I would advise you to plant your benches as follows, beginning at the south side of the house: White Lawson, Beacon, Harlowarden, Enchantress, Winsor.

The two pink ones will be better on the north side, because the sun will not hit them so strongly and better colored blooms will be cut. Always plant white carnations where they will get the full sun, especially those which have more or less pink mottling in the petals.

A. F. J. B.

RESULTS FROM TOP CUTTINGS.

I have received several hundred unrooted carnation cuttings, but I believe they are all top cuttings. What am I to expect from them next year? Why are top cuttings not as good as those from side shoots? And if not so good, will side shoots from those plants be all right? J. M.

It is generally conceded that top cuttings are not so desirable as those taken from the base of the flower stems. They do not root as readily as those with a heel, and it is claimed that if only top cuttings are taken year after year the plants will gradually grow more and more grassy. Another advantage in using side breaks is that one is more apt to get the cuttings in a uniform condition and size, consequently a more even lot of plants. We do not hesitate to use top cuttings when propagating scarce varieties, providing we can get them in proper condition. In no case should they be used if they have begun to run up.

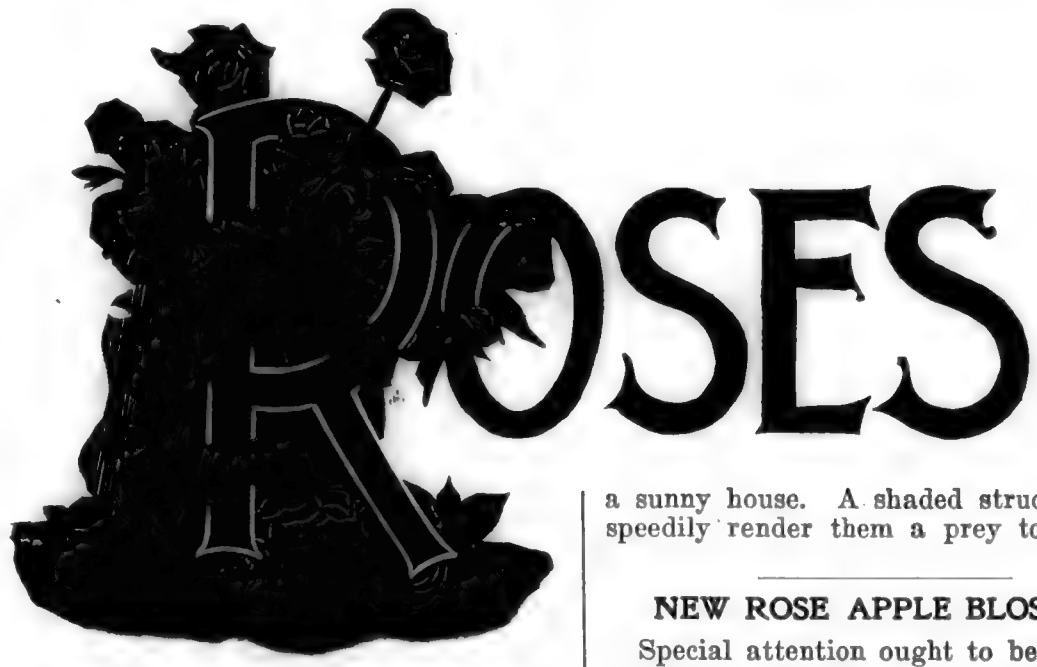
I would root these cuttings and next year select breaks from the flower stems. No harm should result from this.

A. F. J. B.

OVERFEEDING.

What result has too heavy feeding on carnations; stem, flower and the plant in general? How soon may overfeeding be detected? What are the symptoms that show that a carnation plant is "running out"? Has mild, sunny winter weather a tendency to soften carnation growth, even though the temperature has been kept at the proper mark with proper ventilation?



I have two benches of Enchantress. One was planted August 20 and the plants for the other bench were lifted August 20 and carried over in pots and planted in the bench October 15. I have had a heavy cut of flowers from both benches. A large percentage of the old stems which bore fine quality of flowers are now sending up weak, spindling growths at every node. Can you tell me why they are weak and spindling? I feel certain that it is not because of too close planting or a dark house with poor exposure. In January I began feeding with liquid manure, using about three pecks of strawy horse manure to fifty gallons of water and diluting this about three times. I have fed them three times at intervals of ten days. I have given them also a dressing of bone flour. I can see no difference in the growth of the plants in the two benches. L. R. K.

Too much feeding will soften the growth of carnation plants. It will also cause many varieties to split a large proportion of the calyxes. The blooms, too, will be soft and flimsy and will have poor substance. They will bruise easily and will keep poorly. Usually overfeeding will show first in the blooms in the manner suggested above.

I said overfeeding, but I do not mean exactly that. Not many plants are overfed in point of quantity applied. The trouble is, they are fed at the wrong time. A mulch or liquid food is applied when all such should be withheld. If the plants are handled properly from the time they are set on the benches until the middle of November, no extra food need be applied through December and January unless the weather is unusually bright for those months. That is the period of time when nine-tenths of the cases of overfeeding are developed. This year February, too, has been too dark to do much feeding, as is shown by stock we have seen from growers who are in the habit of feeding over-much. Great, large, fine-looking blooms, with poor keeping qualities, are the products of such places.

What are the symptoms of running out? How does an athlete look when he is "all in"? Most varieties have a tendency toward some fault, defect or disease. As the variety weakens this fault becomes more pronounced, and every little neglect in culture sends it off into a spell of misbehavior. Some varieties will split, others will show streaks in the color. Others will take rust or

TO RETARD ROSES.

I have some H. M. Stanley and Enchantress roses in a bench in one of my houses and I want the room for other purposes. How can I keep them until summer? L. C.

You do not state whether these roses are in a semi-dormant state or are actively growing. If the former, place in a cold pit just clear of freezing, to retard them. If they are growing, you cannot do this, but must gradually inure them to cooler treatment. Any quick change will cause mildew to attack and ruin them. If growing, be sure to give them a sunny house. A shaded structure will speedily render them a prey to mildew.

NEW ROSE APPLE BLOSSOM.

Special attention ought to be given to the new sport of the famous little polyantha rose, Mme. Norbert Levavasseur, which received the name of Apple Blossom. It is really worth quite special notice, as it is as strong a grower as the parent plant and shows the same bushy habit. The color of the flowers, which have a fine odor and form large panicles, is a lovely light pink, exactly the same lovely hue as a real apple blossom. The name is certainly well chosen.

The new rose, Apple Blossom, will find favor with a good many growers on account of its good qualities, but it will no doubt be given special attention on account of the fact that it can be forced with good results. For Christmas and Easter it will certainly find ready sale everywhere. I should say it would be very effective to plant nice, bushy plants of Mme. Norbert Levavasseur and of the new variety, Apple Blossom, together in good sized hampers.

Apple Blossom was raised by a firm of rose growers in the southwest of Germany. This new variety will be welcome to a good many and will undoubtedly find as great favor as did Mrs. Cutbush, light red, and Anny Muller, deep pink, two other seedlings from Mme. Norbert Levavasseur. Anny Muller, especially, has won thousands of friends in the United States. W. H.

OUTSIDE ROSES FOR CUTTING.

What are the three best roses, in white, pink and red, to grow outside for summer cutting, here in Indiana? Should young or old stock be used? I should like to have some directions as to the culture of these varieties. H. S. W.

It is a hard problem to select the best varieties in these colors for outside work, since so many of them possess special merit in the different localities and also in different grades of soil.

In teas and hybrid teas, Richmond is a fine red, as also is Liberty and Gruss

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Lemon Verbenas.

If you have not yet put in a batch of cuttings of lemon verbenas, place the old plants, lifted in the fall, in a warm house. Do not water at the root too freely, as dormant plants are often killed by an excess of moisture in the soil. Syringe freely and when the little shoots are about two inches long, rub them off with a heel and place in a cutting bench with a good bottom heat. In this way they will root in about three weeks and, if potted off and kept growing, will make nice little stock to sell in May. The cuttings will need one pinching to make them bushy.

While referring to lemon verbenas, it is not too late to root a quantity of scented-leaved geraniums. These are always in demand and never seem to lose any popularity.

Lantanas.

Lantanas are perhaps less in evidence than a decade ago. They are, however, still largely planted and their persistent flowering qualities render them extremely serviceable and useful. There is still nicé time in which to root a good quantity of cuttings, which will produce salable little plants before Jack Frost makes his final adieu for the season. In rooting lantanas, a strong bottom heat is not required, while a top heat of 55 degrees is ample.

Petunias.

Petunia seed is extremely small and no matter how carefully you sowed it, the seedlings will probably come up thickly in parts of the pans. These must be transplanted just as soon as they can be handled; first, rather closely in flats of light soil and later into 3-inch pots. Petunias, while they may grow a little slowly now, make rapid headway in April and May, and even if you have not sown any seed yet, you can do so and have big salable plants in May.

Double varieties cannot, of course, be reproduced from seed. A small percentage only of doubles will come in packets of so-called double seed. Probably you have carried over some plants of extra good doubles and singles in pots and these will now give you a good crop of cuttings, which root readily in an ordinary cutting bench where carnations are propagated. Petunias are the most satisfactory of all annuals. As bedders they flower from early summer until destroyed by frost. For piazza and window-boxes, vases, hanging-baskets and as pot plants, they are also excellent.

Sweet Alyssum.

Perhaps you have a sufficient number of seedlings of that useful, sweet-scented plant, sweet alyssum. If not, you can now take cuttings from any plants you may have in pots or growing around the sides of the benches. They will do all right in the same bench with petunias and carnations. Alyssum may be old-fashioned, but it is just this class of flower which is never likely to die out in popularity.

Cannas.

The advent of March reminds us that it is time to overhaul and start the cannas. We hope the roots have been kept where they were not exposed to drip from benches to start them into premature growth and cause decay. Shake all soil away from the clumps. Use a strong, sharp knife and cut up the plants so that a single eye is left to each portion.

An excellent way to start cannas is to scatter a layer of sphagnum moss over a bench, under which hot water or steam pipes run. Lay the divided roots in this moss and scatter a thin layer over them. Dampen the moss a little each day, but do not attempt any soaking waterings, which are liable to cause the roots to rot. In a house kept at 60 to 65 degrees at night, with a nice, steady bottom heat, it will not be many days before both roots and shoots appear. Pot up the little plants before the roots are more than three inches long, using 4-inch pots. Stand on a bench where they can get some bottom heat and they will speedily root around the sides of the pots.

When dividing the canna roots, be sure to discard any showing signs of canker or decay. Even if the eye looks sound, such portions will never make plants, usually rotting when moisture strikes them.

Mignonette.

The changeable winter we have had has not suited mignonette so well as a steadily cold one would have done.

Mignonette succeeds best in a house where the night temperature in winter holds about 40 degrees. Now that we are approaching spring, with a higher temperature, the spikes will not attain the size of the midwinter ones, but it is possible to get a nice crop for some weeks yet. Careful disbudding, removal of any decaying shoots, scratching over of the surface soil, a top-dressing of bone and soot, with waterings with liquid manure every ten days, will help to keep the plants toned up. Air abundantly and when watering keep the hose off the foliage as much as possible.

Marguerites.

Rapid is the growth now being made by the marguerite plants, and they will require frequent spacing apart. If allowed to stand crowded, a lot of foliage will decay and the plants will lose that beautiful appearance so characteristic of well grown specimens. Neither marguerites nor any other plants look well with half the foliage gone. So, in addition to keeping the pots well apart, never neglect the watering, and use liquid manure twice a week. If the plants are likely to be a little early, move them into a cooler and more shaded house, but do not try forcing tactics on backward ones, or you will only spoil them; 50 degrees at night is as warm as marguerites like to be.

Gladioli.

Batches of the early-flowering gladioli of the Colvillei and cardinalis types should be brought into heat every ten days. They do not like much forcing and nothing higher than a carnation temperature should be given them.

The later-flowering gladioli of the Gandavensis and Childsii types in benches are now making good growth. Those planted at Christmas are already in some cases pushing flower spikes. If these show any signs of falling over, use a support for them, as bent spikes are not salable. If you have any bench vacant which you are not likely to need before July, you can plant in a batch of bulbs, which will give you a nice lot of spikes for June; some may get in for Memorial day.

ARAUCARIA EXCELSA.

Can Araucaria excelsa be made to branch so slips will form by cutting the top out? G. C. H.

Yes, Araucaria excelsa usually forms several branches around the upper part of the stem after having been cut back, and these young shoots may be used for cuttings. The cuttings should be taken off with a heel of the old wood at the bottom, and planted singly in small pots filled with sand. Cuttings take a considerable time to root, and need to be kept moist and well protected from sun and wind. W. H. T.

FUCHSIA EMILE DE WILDEMAN.

Victor Lemoine, the well-known French florist in Nancy, has brought into the trade a fuchsia that really deserves to be known everywhere. Anything coming into commerce from his place is worth having. His name has been made world-famous by the lovely Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, the sale and culture of which have attained truly magnificent dimensions, not only in old Europe, but in the United States as well. Is there really any gardener who does not now know of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine? I doubt whether there is any.

The new fuchsia, Emile de Wildeman, was brought into the trade by Victor Lemoine in 1905. It can be used for planting beds as well as for decorating balcony and window-boxes. It grows in a nice, pyramidal shape and flowers freely. The blooms are of a light carmine color outside, while the double inside is of a light pink.

Fuchsia Emile de Wildeman is best propagated in February or March. After a few weeks the cuttings will be rooted well enough to be potted off in thumbs in a light and good leaf-mold. Then the plants can be given a warm foot and be put into larger sized pots, as soon as they have rooted through properly. Later a more substantial soil will suit the plants well.

It is worth mentioning, too, that this fuchsia can be grown easily into a high-stemmed form, in which shape the plants are really very effective. W. H.

LEAF CURL ON CINERARIAS.

We should like some information as to leaf curl on cinerarias. We have a fine lot in 6-inch pots, some in full bloom and nearly all in bud. Lately the leaves began to curl in at the edges, some closing right up. We have to keep them in a house with other plants, which makes it necessary to maintain a temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees. We suppose this is rather too warm for them. Is there any way of overcoming this tendency to leaf curling, under these conditions? The cinerarias are the dwarf variety, having quite large leaves. The greenhouse is one of the King Construction type, 30x100, running east and west and heated by steam. The plants are on benches. J. S. & S.

I am afraid the main cause of your leaf curl is too high a temperature. Cinerarias succeed best in a house kept at 40 to 45 degrees at night and cannot possibly do themselves justice in a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees in midwinter. If you have no cooler house to grow them in, it would be best to drop their cultivation. If, however, you want to continue their culture, all you can do is to stand them in the coldest end of the house and shade them from the sun's direct rays. Spray overhead lightly on bright days.

To grow cinerarias successfully, a cold house is required. If it has a north aspect, it will answer well, although a span house will produce stockier plants. A night temperature of 40 to 42 degrees is far better than one 10 degrees higher. In a cool house they grow with a vigor entirely lacking in a higher temperature. C. W.

BOSTONS ON BENCH.

I would like to know when is the best time to plant small Boston ferns on benches so as to have them large enough for 6-inch pots by next fall, say October 1. E. A. M.

Small Boston ferns planted on benches in May will make good plants for 6-inch or 7-inch pots by October 1, this period allowing time to establish them in the pots before offering them for sale. W. H. T.

PLANTING FOR A CITY LOT.

Please give us the kind of flowers and designs for the best effects in a city lot that slopes to the street. The lot is seventy-five feet wide and about the same in length. There are two small shade trees in front and one at the side, with a driveway on the other side. O. H. T.

To insure privacy, a belt of shrubbery on each side of your lot would be desirable. Make this of irregular width; carefully avoid straight lines. For planting in such borders, philadelphus, lilacs and althæas are suitable for the back. Among the lower growers, Deutzia Lemoinei, some of the spiræas, berberis, hydrangeas, Rosa rugosa and azaleas are a few of the many sorts available. The ground for all these should be well trenched and enriched. The crape myrtle, Lagerstrœmia Indica, is another subject which would probably succeed with you.

Do not cut up the lawn into small beds. This is too often done. If you wish, you could plant a low hedge of some kind, such as Berberis Thunbergii or California privet, on the street side in lieu of a wooden or iron fence. Around the dwelling house itself a rather narrow border of low shrubs, with annuals in front, will be in good taste. We would prefer to grow any flowers in front of the house or in the borders suggested on the two sides, rather than to make any circular or oval beds in the lawn. Cannas and geraniums are the most satisfactory flowering bedding plants, but asters, gladioli, salvias and many other annuals and bulbous plants may be used. The shrubs will require thinning out in time. The endeavor should be to leave a few nice, shapely specimens, rather than a tangled mass. C. W.

CYCLAMEN.

What kind of cyclamen is best to grow, and in planting is it always necessary to leave the bulb on top of the earth in the pots? G. C.

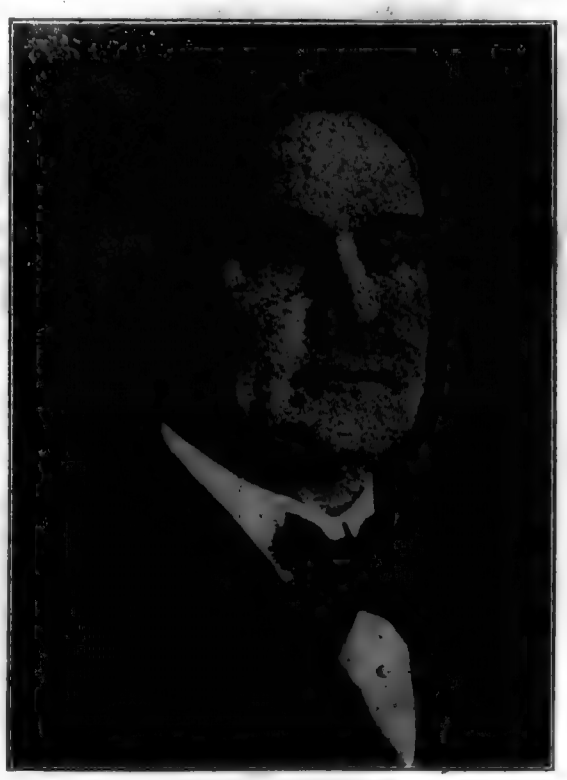
The giganteum form of Cyclamen persicum is the best. Seeds can be had either in mixture or separate colors. The latter are to be preferred. A few specially good sorts are: Mont Blanc, pure white; Princess May, pink; Crimson Queen, deep red; Salmon Queen, salmon pink. The bulbs of cyclamens should not be buried, or you will have poor success with them. They should stand just on the surface of the pots. The roots will keep them rigid. C. W.

MANURE FOR ASTERS.

What kind of manure is best for asters, both indoor and outdoor grown? Is there a commercial phosphate better than fresh cow manure, and if so what is it? W. H. K.

Well decayed cow or horse manure is much better for asters than any commercial phosphate, both for indoor and outdoor culture. If you can obtain sheep manure at a reasonable price, it will also be found excellent. Prepare the ground by plowing in a good dressing of manure, as soon as it can be worked. Then harrow it and leave until ready for planting. C. W.

SUMMER FLOWERS UNDER GLASS



Can the following flowers be grown successfully in a greenhouse during the summer months, for cut blooms: Dahlias in 7-inch or 8-inch pots, asters in 6-inch or 7-inch pots, Gladiolus America in flats five inches deep? We grow all of our plants in pots and none in benches. We have no use for part of the houses from June 1 until September. Could the dahlias or gladioli be started under the bench sometime previous to June 1 and thus be brought into bloom sooner? Give growing directions for each, for summer greenhouse culture. We have been growing these flowers in the open field the last few years, here in southeastern Wisconsin, but, on account of not being able to water them, have had poor results and they have not been profitable. Our object in growing them in the greenhouses is to get them more under our control and be able to give them plenty of water. W. W. T.

While it is possible to grow any of the flowers under glass during the summer months, they will all do much better in benches or solid beds, rather than in pots. We doubt if you will find it profitable to cultivate dahlias or asters in pots. They will take an immense amount of water and not give you a fourth of the flowers obtainable from benched plants.

We do not see any reason why you cannot grow good asters outside in your state, by planting in land deeply plowed and well enriched, if you keep the surface soil constantly cultivated. You can get a nice, early crop of these under glass if you will plant in benches. Seed can be started now of Queen of the Earlies. Transplant into flats and from these later to benches. If you must grow them in pots, they should be placed in 3-inch to 3½-inch pots from flats and later to the 6-inch size to flower in, but this will mean a lot of labor.

Dahlias do fairly well under glass. They do not naturally bloom freely until the cooler autumn nights come, but can be started early and had in bloom in April and May if required. Start a few roots now on the bench, not below it. When nicely grown, plant in benches or solid beds, two feet apart each way. Start securely, to avoid breakages among the brittle shoots. As the weather becomes warm, shade the glass a little and air abundantly. You will get flowers for a long time from dahlias under glass, if you keep them well supplied with water.

Gladiolus America will do well in flats containing five inches of soil. These could be started now under the bench for an early batch. Others could be planted in flats or benches, later, for succession. There is no reason why this fine gladiolus will not succeed outdoors with you. It needs no soaking waterings or irrigation, but keep the surface soil tickled frequently. I should certainly advise trying some of the gladioli outdoors, planting the bulbs in April and May. Under glass they need little shade, an ordinary greenhouse temperature and plenty of fresh air. C. W.

E. V. Hallock.

Summit, N. J.—John N. May is adding five connected houses to his place this season, each 28x225, of the King iron-frame construction.

OBITUARY.

E. V. Hallock.

Leaving a meeting of the bowlers in New York city Monday evening, E. V. Hallock was stricken with apoplexy while riding in the subway and died before medical aid could reach him. Mr. Hallock had seemed in perfect health during the evening and was never more magnetic and brilliant than at the annual banquet of the New York Florists' Club, at which he presided Saturday evening, February 27.

E. V. Hallock was born in Dutchess county, New York, fifty-seven years ago. His boyhood was spent on the home place and in Brooklyn and New York, where he obtained his education. In the late 60's he went to the Pacific coast and for three years was engaged in railroading. Returning to New York, he became associated with V. H. Hallock, his father, succeeding to the long established seed business of C. L. Allen at Queens, L. I. The Hallocks specialized in bulbous and tuberous-rooted plants and E. V. Hallock came to be known as one of the best authorities in this country on these genera. Practically everything new in these lines which has come out in the last thirty years, has had a trial on the farm at Queens, and the work has gone on uninterruptedly through several changes in the ownership of the original property. Mr. Hallock gave his personal attention to this work from 1875 to 1892, building up a large trade and a large stock, the latter being sold to John Lewis Childs. At the time the Hallocks took hold of these specialties there was no large collection of gladioli in the United States and they did much toward popularizing the plant. It is said that when the stock was sold to Childs in 1892 it contained about 1,500 varieties. Of Max Leichtlin the Hallocks bought the stock of Gladiolus Childsii and it is told that the transaction was by cable. The firm also worked up what was probably the largest collection of lilies in this country and was recognized as the source of supply for a large number of bulbous and tuberous rooted plants not generally handled in the trade. Of recent years Mr. Hallock has been called upon a number of times to deliver lectures upon these specialties and was scheduled to deliver one before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at Boston next week.

Mr. Hallock was a life member of the S. A. F. and in the last four years had served as a director, having been appointed in 1905 by J. C. Vaughan, and reappointed in 1908 by F. H. Traendly to fill the unexpired term occasioned by Mr. Traendly's elevation to the presidency. During the last few years Mr. Hallock has been active in the school garden movement in New York and has been chairman of the S. A. F. committee which is seeking to further this work. The committee now has a bill pending in the New York legislature, seeking to have gardening added to the normal school curriculum. December 14 Mr. Hallock was elected president of the New York Florists' Club and assumed the duty of the office January 11. Since his election he has given a large proportion of his time to the affairs of the club, having presided at its annual banquet Saturday evening, February 27, and participated in its bowling on the night of his death.

Mr. Hallock's residence was at Queens, where the headquarters are of the seed and catalogue business. He was a widower, Mrs. Hallock having died last year. The funeral will be held Thursday, March 4, and will be largely attended, for he had the respect and friendship of everyone in the trade and a host of people in other walks of life.

H. A. Terry.

Henry A. Terry, one of the oldest nurserymen in the United States, died February 14 at his home in Crescent, Pottawattamie county, Iowa. Mr. Terry was born July 12, 1826, and was therefore approaching his eighty-third birthday. He had been engaged in the nursery business at Crescent for upwards of forty years, working quietly, and was little known outside his own county and in the circle of those interested in the peony.

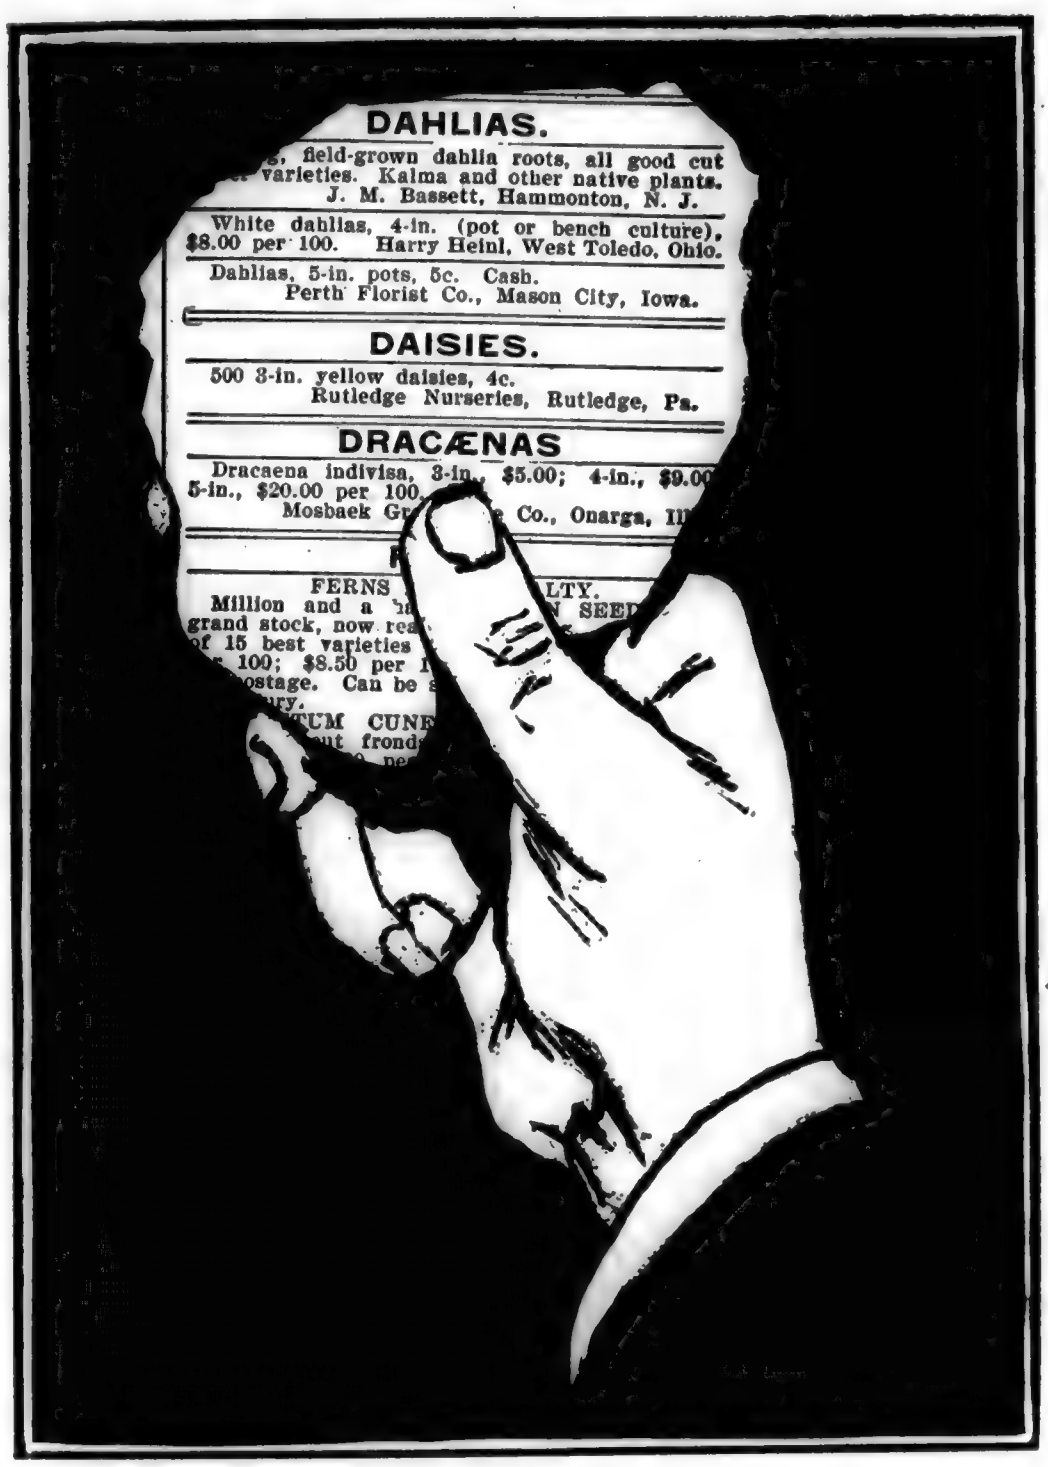
Although Mr. Terry had originated and to a certain extent distributed almost fifty kinds of improved plums, his reputation rests rather as a grower of peonies. Possibly 100 new varieties of peonies have been sent out among western planters from his grounds at Crescent. August 4, 1904, the REVIEW published a photograph of Mr. Terry standing in the midst of his acres of peonies, gorgeously in bloom at the time the picture was made. No great number of Terry's varieties are widely known in the trade, because he worked quietly, reaped little and used no printer's ink. C. S. Harrison, one of his closest friends, says he was one of those in whom the commercial instinct was entirely dormant.

Eugene Germain.

Los Angeles, Cal., lost a leading citizen February 18 in the death by heart failure of Eugene Germain. He was president of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., but that business had occupied little of his attention in recent years, as he had made a fortune in real estate and other outside operations. He was 61 years of age and a pioneer resident of the city, having located in California in 1870. He had been president of the Produce Exchange and president of the Board of Trade.

The seed business had for some years been under the direction of Fred H. Hunter and will continue without change.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.



[The Scientific Aspects of Luther Burbank's Work. by David Starr Jordan and Vernon Lyman Kellogg; A. M. Robertson, San Francisco, publisher.]

This volume is evidently an attempt to exactly determine Mr. Burbank's status by the voice of scientific authority and thereby put a quietus upon the "wizard" stories that have appeared in print. Dr. Jordan gives brief records of a number of Mr. Burbank's experiments in crossing and hybridizing, and quotes freely from the writings of the plant breeder. In a summing up he says: "Luther Burbank, while primarily an artist, is, in his general attitude, essentially a man of science. Academic he doubtless is not, but the qualities we call scientific are not necessarily bred in the academy. Science is human experience tested and set in order. Within the range of his profession of molding plant life, Mr. Burbank has read carefully, and thought carefully, maturing his own generalizations and resting them on the basis of his own knowledge."

In summing up on the scientific aspect of Mr. Burbank's work, Dr. Kellogg says: "No new revelations to science of an overturning character; but the revelation of the possibilities of accomplishment, based on general principles already known, by an unusual man. No new laws of evolution, but new facts, new data, new canons for special cases. No new principle or process to substitute for selection, but a new proof of the possibilities of the effectiveness of the old principle."

An excellent portrait of Mr. Burbank appears as a frontispiece, and the 115 pages of the book contain thirty-seven illustrations of plant variations that have resulted from his work. It is a volume that every one interested in plant breeding will want to add to his library.

These Are the Little Liners That Do the Business

CONVENTION PREPARATIONS.

The Cincinnati Florists' Society is planning large doings for the week in August when the S. A. F. will meet in their city. Selections for chairmen of the different committees have been made as follows:

President's Reception—Albert McCullough, Charles McCullough and Peter Olinger.
Entertainment—J. A. Peterson.
Badges—E. A. Forter.
Program—A. Sunderbruch.
Transportation—G. Adrian.
Hall—J. W. Rodgers.
Women's Entertainment—E. G. Gillett and C. E. Critchell.
Ball Game—Frank Dellar.
Bowling—C. E. Critchell.

William Murphy has been recommended to the S. A. F. executive committee for superintendent of the trade exhibition.

GIRARD, O.—William Gerke has let the contracts for the building of a residence on Washington street.

CHILLICOTHE, O.—C. F. Brehmer is building a new range consisting of three houses, each eighty-three feet long, two of them twenty-five feet wide and one forty-two feet. A lean-to, 10x92, also is to be built. The King Construction Co. has the order and it is understood their new iron-frame pattern is to be employed.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—W. L. Cukerski, former superintendent of city parks, has begun work on his greenhouses at Valley avenue and Fulton street. The first building will cover 18,000 square feet and this will be added to during the summer.

Entered as second class matter December 3, 1897, at the post-office at Chicago, Ill., under the act of March 3, 1879.

This paper is a member of the Chicago Trade Press Association.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress March 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19 to 22, 1909.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

Rochester, N. Y., wants the S. A. F. convention in 1910.

March came in like a lamb—and you know the old saying.

The white paper consumed in printing this issue of the Review weighed 5,940 pounds, or only sixty pounds short of three tons.

From a dispassionate viewpoint it looks as though there is more room for new dark pink carnations than for those of any other color.

If W. W., La Crosse, Wis., will send his full name the Review will do its best to help him with his phœnix. Anonymous queries receive no attention.

Well, Teddy has gone to hunt lions and Taft has come in as the Prosperity President, so it's time everybody got ready for a big spring season.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the Review $2, $3, or occasionally $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

If Constant Reader, who dates his letter Pittsburg, February 23, will supply his name, the Review will be glad to answer his questions, but if he will consult the leading trade catalogues he will find part of the information for himself.

Good men again are in demand in all departments of the trade. Last spring retrenchment made idle many men who had left gardening for some other employment, and experienced help was abundant, but better times, both out and in the business, seem likely to send wages up again this spring.

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

The United States Civil Service Commission has issued announcements of two examinations on subjects connected with the horticultural trades. Both examinations will be held March 30, 1909. The purpose of one of the examinations is "to fill a vacancy in the position of assistant curator (male), Division of Plants, National Museum, at $1,200 per annum, and vacancies requiring similar qualifications as they may occur." Among the requirements for this examination are "a general knowledge of systematic botany, Latin, and preferably also of French or German." Age limit, 20 years or over. Those desiring to take this examination should apply to the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C., for application "Form 304 and special form."

The other examination is for the purpose of "filling a vacancy in the position of laboratory aid in agricultural technology (male), at $50 a month, in the Bureau of Plant Industry." Age limit, 17 to 25 years. Application blanks, Form 304, may in this case be secured either at Washington, D. C., or at certain leading postoffices in each state.

EVERYTHING RIGHT.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time:

Please discontinue our Classified Ad of gladiolus bulbs until further notice, that we may have an opportunity to catch up with our correspondence. When one has the right goods at the right price, the Review is the right paper to do the business. We have tried the same ad in another trade paper and have not even received an inquiry therefrom.

THE W. E. KIRCHHOFF COMPANY.
Pembroke, N. Y., February 27, 1909.

A WORD WITH ADVERTISERS.

The next two months are the heaviest of the year with the Review—the ones in which advertising patronage is greatest.

The Review aims to take care of every advertising order, for any issue, received up to 12 o'clock, noon, on Wednesday, the day of going to press. This permits advertisers to mail "copy" on the 18-hour trains that leave New York at 3:45 on Tuesday afternoon, Philadelphia at 4:55, and be in time.

The Review will be found as prompt to discontinue advertisements that have served their purpose, as to insert new ones.

But to give this prompt service to all patrons it is necessary that we have their coöperation. Don't ask us to do regularly on Wednesday what you might as well give us to do on Tuesday, or on Monday. Make it a rule to mail your advertising instructions to reach us Monday, or Tuesday at the latest. Then we shall have the decks cleared for you on the occasional weeks that you have important instructions you cannot place in our hands until Wednesday.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

It may be true, as often said, that Lent no longer is observed as it was years ago, but it is, nevertheless, the fact that business in the Chicago market took a decided drop Ash Wednesday, and in the two or three days before the buyers came back the bright, warm days produced a considerable increase in supplies, so that prices went down to a somewhat alarming extent. Friday and Saturday proved to be good days, however, and the market was well cleaned up Saturday night. Now that prices are down to where the department stores can be interested, it is possible to ship out an immense amount of stock on Fridays.

The current week opens with the mar-

Finest — Freshest — Most Sweet Peas

For years we have had the largest supply and finest Sweet Peas to be found in the west—but this season we have more of them and they are better than ever. Nothing in the market to compare with our Fancy grade. Can supply splendid long-stemmed white, pink and lavender, by the thousands. Try some; they make a hit wherever used. We do a big shipping business in these.

To be sure you get them in best condition, we pick specially each afternoon the stock to fill all shipping orders on file at 12 o'clock.

Roses

Maid, Killarney, Richmond and Bride are in extra fine form. Our supply is large and we can meet any requirements. Fancy long stock, and fine heads on the shorter stems. Note our prices and order liberally. You can use a lot.

Carnations

Don't lose sight of quality when you consider price. We have the largest lot of strictly fancy Carnations to be found on this market. Splendid value at this week's prices. Meet competition by offering the best goods—you get them when you order of us.

Violets

Push the Violet trade—there's money in it. We handle the cream of the stock, both New York Doubles and Home-grown Singles, and can supply in quantity. Write or wire for prices on special large lots.

Bulb Stock

Tulips in all colors—long-stemmed, fancy stock. Fine Jonquils and Daffodils; popular for table work. Plenty of Easter Lilies and Callas. Fancy Valley ALWAYS on hand.

Green Goods

We have a large supply of Smilax, fine, long, heavy strings. Can furnish Asparagus Sprays in bunches. Also, the best Hardy cut Ferns in this market. All other Greens of highest quality.

ket heavily supplied in all departments and with demand apparently light. The salesmen will tell you the buyers take little interest, but in the offices it is figured sales are totaling up a quite satisfactory sum; if prices are where the buyer can pick and choose, the quantity of stock handled is so great that it runs into good money by night. It frequently occurs at this season of the year that Monday will be a good day, Tuesday and the two days following light, with an active shipping demand on Friday and a good city trade Saturday.

Quality is excellent throughout the market. All flowers are fine. There are quite a few split carnations and, of course, more or less weak roses, but practically every grower is cutting as good stock as he ever did in his life. The single exception is with the Beauties; these are not good except in the long grade. Even of Beauties the supply has increased largely, so that prices have fallen about twenty per cent. Maids and Brides are splendid and the most critical buyer can be supplied with Killarney and Richmond. The cut has so increased that all grades are cheaper, but the short stock has suffered most. During the time that roses were so scarce, short roses commanded a premium; now long stock is so plentiful that the shorts have had to be put down to what looks like decidedly cheap prices, compared to recent rates.

Carnations are coming in so heavily that they are accumulating, in spite of the best efforts of the wholesalers. In general, the stock is fine, but it stacked up so badly last week that it was only the department store orders and the Greek buyers that saved a congestion. The large buyers for special sales paid anywhere from $9 to $12.50 per thousand last week.

Violets, unless of good quality, were practically unsalable last week, and this week sees the condition little improved. The receipts of both New York and local stock are extremely heavy and prices in proportion. Sweet peas are another item on which there has been a slump in prices and on which the lower grades are practically unsalable. Long fancy peas go well, but there are so many thousands of the short-stemmed that little can be done with them. Bulbous stock is in good supply and going at prices that hardly can be profitable to the growers. Lilies, however, show a tendency to advance, the crop being lighter and the quality higher.

There is a good business in green goods and smilax is selling specially well for spring decorations.

Vaughan & Sperry to Move.

Vaughan & Sperry have made a lease upon the large double basement at 52 and 54 Wabash avenue, which they will occupy after May 1. The increasing quantities of stock the firm has handled have overcrowded its space in the Flower Growers' Market and made necessary this move to larger quarters. It is likely that for a time the stand in the market will be continued, but there is room for a still further expansion of the business at the new location, which is next door to the establishment of Kennicott Bros. Co. The quarters are to be thoroughly overhauled and will be in first-class shape when occupied. The basement proper is 40x90, but there is a large and valuable space beneath the sidewalk, excellently adapted to the business.

February Business.

February was an excellent month in the Chicago market. Roses were in light supply at the beginning of the month and commanded excellent prices, helping the value of other stock clear down the list. Valentine's day made a specially good record and the Lincoln and Washington anniversaries each did their share. Business continued good up to Ash Wednesday, when two or three quiet days ensued, but on the whole the month was the most satisfactory of the season to date. A majority of the wholesale houses increased their sales over those of February last year.

February Weather.

February was a warm month and the draughts on the coal bins were not as heavy as usual. The mean temperature was 32 degrees, against a normal of 27 degrees. The wind movement also was a mile an hour less than last year and the direction was southwest, instead of from the northwest as last February. There were, however, only four clear days, three partly cloudy and twenty-one cloudy. In the month there was only thirty-one per cent of the possible number of hours of sunshine.

Various Notes.

Venerable Dominic Degnan died March 1. He was the father of John Degnan, of the E. F. Winterson Co., who has the sympathy of a large circle of friends. The funeral was held Wednesday morning from the residence, 5727 Shields avenue, interment at Mount Olivet. Mr. Degnan's mother died only a little more than a year ago. Miss Josephine E. Eastman, one of Mr. Degnan's closest friends for years, died February 27.

paring to add considerably to their range of glass this season.

John Michelsen, of E. C. Amling's staff, welcomed a son at his home February 27.

The Flower Growers' Market last week paid a dividend of twenty per cent to its stockholders.

The condition of H. Bauske's rose houses is attracting a great deal of attention among the growers north of town. Apparently gas is leaking into the houses, for the entire west end of the range is in a condition which nothing else will account for. The ground outside, of course, is frozen solid, but the soil is sandy, so that a leak in the street might easily find its outlet through the unfrozen floor of the greenhouses. Nick Kruchten's place on the other side of the street is not affected, however.

The A. L. Randall Co. has installed a new system of accounting, employing the Elliott-Fisher billing machine. Carl N. Thomas, of the Randall force, has been at home for a day or two, mastering an attack of the grippe. Frank Johnson returned March 1 from a trip to the Twin Cities.

Mrs. W. E. Lynch has been quite ill for several days and it was at one time feared she would have diphtheria.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports its largest shipping order of the season for single violets February 26. Great quantities of both single and double are now being shipped out of this market.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has been supplying some of the retailers with forced pussy willow. They say Beauties are coming rapidly into crop again.

Ernest Oechslin is getting along nicely at the Oak Park hospital.

Chris Blameuser, of Niles Center, has taken the stand in the Flower Growers' Market formerly occupied by Dinstel Bros., who have dissolved partnership. John Dinstel will carry on the business and give up selling his own stock to devote his time to the greenhouses, consigning now to the Sinner Bros.

Peter Reinberg visited his carnation establishment on "The Farm" February 28 for the first time since Christmas. He did not like the looks of the place; there seemed to him to be a bare spot, which would just about hold four new greenhouses, so he decided to go ahead with the work.

E. Fransen says Scheiden & Schoos are having an excellent business in carnation cuttings.

The Horticultural Society of Chicago is planning an exhibition of roses and bulb stock, to be held at the Art Institute the latter part of this month.

F. F. Benthey says he is of the opinion there has been more shipping out of this market this season than in any previous year.

The E. F. Winterson Co. has been receiving large consignments of fine jonquils from the District of Columbia, where they are grown in deep frames.

E. R. Chappell, formerly with C. A. Samuelson, who is now with Clarke Bros., at Portland, Ore., writes that he is doing well there and likes the Pacific northwest very much.

C. L. Washburn was 51 years of age February 27. In company with O. P. Bassett, he went to West Baden March 3 to try to get rid of the cold that has hung on since the Indianapolis carnation convention.

G. Hylkema, of Van Zanten Bros., Hillegom, Holland, says that other bulb salesmen say, and his own experience backs it up, that Chicago florists are ordering bulbs much lighter than they are in other cities. Elsewhere the orders are only slightly reduced; here the cut is heavy, as a result of conditions in the cut flower market.

to expire, arranged to put up greenhouses and store of his own at Chicago and Sixty-fourth avenues, one of the best corners in that suburb. But the town authorities have refused to issue a building permit. This is said to be the second time they have refused to sanction greenhouse building enterprises.

John Braje, 865 Ballou street, is building concrete benches and thinks they will in time become universally used.

F. R. Hills wishes to dispose of his place at Maywood, so that the entire family can remove to a milder climate.

Visitors.

Alpha Elberfield and his wife, of Kansas City, have been in town for several days and apparently enjoying themselves.

Will Graff returned to Columbus, O., March 2, after a visit of five days. He reports business good and says stock has been coming through in fine shape; only two boxes frozen all winter. Charles Balluff is with him at Columbus.

Mrs. H. B. Dudley, with H. F. Drury, at Galesburg, Ill., was in town March 1.

Max Spanner, of Toledo, has been here for several days buying for the new store he is preparing to open at 246 Summit street. He recently sold out his interest in the Youngstown Floral Co. to his partner, William Feniger.

John L. Wyland, of De Haven, Pa., was a visitor last week. He brought his wife and daughter to visit a married daughter who lives in South Chicago.

Charles Frueh and Charles Frueh, Jr., of Saginaw, Mich., were in town for two days last week, getting figures on the cost of some new greenhouses.

George Vatter, of Marinette, Wis., was here last week and bought 200 boxes of glass, with the other fixin's for a new greenhouse.

John Bourgaise, Racine, Wis., was a recent visitor.

W. J. Lawrence, of Eglinton, Ont., is here this week with the great Mendelssohn Choir, of Toronto, a chorus of 240 voices, giving a series of three concerts at Orchestra hall.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

March opens with glorious spring weather, and winter seems to be over almost before it has begun. It has been the most remarkable season ever known in New York, with hardly enough freezing weather to raise our average temperature above that of any popular winter resort in the country. Cut flower growers must have made a nice saving on their coal bills, even if prices have not been quite up to their expectations.

In the cut flower market this week spring prices prevail. Beauties are down to 40 cents for the best and Bride and Maid to 6 cents. All other varieties of roses have fallen accordingly. There seems to be an abundance of every kind. Carnations have fallen rapidly, the finest novelties reaching only 3 cents, while as low as 75 cents a hundred has been accepted for the common varieties; 2 cents will buy in quantity about the best there is in the market. Violets are a tremendous drug again and the streets are blue with sidewalk offerings. These pay venders as low as $1.50 per thousand for the left-overs in quantity, and 40 cents per hundred will land the best stock now coming to the market. Lilies, valley, tulips, narcissi and all other bulbous flowers now feel the strain of quantity and the southern daffodils weigh heavily upon the local offerings. Sweet peas and freesia are abundant. Of lilac there is enough, with the southern supply not far away.

Sweet Peas and Violets

A fine combination, that is if the stock is good. DID you ever try our stock? You ought to, it pleases.

Of course we have everything else in flowers, such as Valley, Tulips, Daffodils, Lilies, Carnations and Roses.

Death of E. V. Hallock.

The greatest shock the trade has suffered in years came Monday night in the sudden death of E. V. Hallock, president of the Florists' Club. Mr. Hallock had participated in the session of the bowlers and shortly after 11 o'clock started for his home in Queens. He was stricken with apoplexy while on the train in the subway and died before medical assistance could be secured. Mr. Drew, his friend, was with him at the time. He seemed in perfect health during the evening and his death was wholly without warning. Further particulars will be found in the obituary column.

Club Dinner.

The banquet of the Florists' Club took place Saturday evening, February 27, in Shanley's beautifully decorated Roman hall, and 160 sat down to the best dinner and the grandest success the club has ever known in its twenty-two years of annual celebrations. The room was like fairyland, with its wealth of smilax wreathing, forsythia, roses, orchids, acacia, carnations and every other seasonable flower. The twenty tables were all perfectly decorated, Alex. McConnell, Alfred Zeller and J. B. Nugent, Jr., having charge.

President Hallock's reception was much appreciated and from 6 to 7 o'clock the large company spent the time in the large room set apart for the purpose of social converse. When President Hallock and his daughter led the way to the banquet promptly at 7:30, every seat had been allotted and every diner knew the table at which he would be seated and the congenial company around it. The arrangements were excellent and no more universally happy company ever sat down to a banquet in this country. In addition to the wealth of flowers sent by many of the wholesale and retail florists and the Long Island growers, a great box of Peter Crowe's best roses and Croweanum came all the way from Utica.

Visitors from a distance included Charles Vick and George B. Hart, of Rochester, and Leonard Vaughan, of Chicago. During the evening a telegram from Boston arrived with the names and congratulations of over fifty of the visitors of the flower show there. Van Vleet's orchestra did splendidly from 6 until 1 o'clock Sunday morning. The seven hours flew so rapidly that none grew weary and few had departed when at that hour the long program was completed and Auld Lang Syne sped the happy company on its homeward way. There were over seventy ladies in attendance, a perpetual demonstration of the value of their presence at all future Florists' Club banquets in New York.

to be present were read from Governor Hughes, Mayor McClellan, several New York congressmen, President Valentine, Mayor Breitmeyer, Sarah Hill, of Richmond; W. J. Stewart, J. C. Vaughan, E. G. Hill, W. F. Kasting, Peter Crowe and others.

President Hallock made an ideal toastmaster and opened the proceedings at the close of the splendid dinner with a stirring address of welcome. The toasts were responded to in happy vein, as follows: "Our Night," by Patrick O'Mara; "The S. A. F.," by Charles Vick, of Rochester, who made an eloquent plea for the convention in 1910; "The Chrysanthemum," by C. H. Totty; "The Press," by S. S. Butterfield; "The Auction Industry," by W. J. Elliott; "The Ladies," by A. J. Guttman, Harry Turner and John T. Withers. Secretary Young gave a rousing speech of congratulation. Votes of thanks were unanimous for the artists and the dinner committee.

Walter Sheridan presented C. B. Weathered with a handsome selection of solid silver from the club as retiring president, to which he feelingly responded. The artists were all high class and aroused the audience to constant enthusiasm throughout the evening. They included Mme. Edith Harcke, prima donna, a sister of Clarke brothers, the florists of Portland, Ore., after a three years' absence and study in Germany. Louis Schmutz, Anton Schultheis and John Birnie made the rafters ring with the Wacht am Rhein, the Marseillaise and Annie Laurie. The ladies were toasted and cheered to their hearts' content.

Among those present were: Messrs. and Mesdames W. F. Sheridan, F. H. Traendly, C. B. Weathered, W. J. Elliott, John Donaldson, John Birnie, W. H. Siebrecht, A. L. Miss Barnett, Mr. Rickards and lady, A. M. Henshaw and lady, and several others who were guests of those who engaged complete tables for their friends. The arrangements for the seating of friends together gave universal satisfaction.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club will hold its monthly meeting March 8, in its rooms in the Grand Opera House on West Twenty-third street. This is rose night, and Harry May, secretary of the exhibition committee, says a large number of exhibits is assured. Shipments made in care of Secretary Young, 51 West Twenty-eighth street, will be properly staged and cared for. W. H. Elliott, of Brighton, Mass., will be the speaker.

The auction houses open March 16. Importations are already arriving. W. J. Elliott says this year will overtop all others in the quantity and quality of offerings. Ambrose Cleary says the Cleary Horticultural Co. is doing a large jobbing and shipping business in advance of the auction season. John P. Cleary, of the Fruit Auction Co., is home from a two months' European trip, where he arranged for the shipments of about everything that interests the florist and which it is the firm's intention to offer at daily auctions, to begin about the middle of the month.

Thomas Young, Jr., has contracted with the King Construction Co. for two detached iron-frame houses, each 25x500, at his place at Bound Brook, N. J.

J. Metz, of 182 East One Hundred and Sixteenth street, over 80 years of age and an old-time florist, died Saturday, February 27. He leaves a widow and five children. He has done a retail business at this address during the last fifteen years and was highly esteemed in the community.

Alex. McConnell's big store is a gold exhibit these days, with forsythia in plant and bloom. These, with grand branches of acacia from W. Siebrecht, Jr., of Astoria, added greatly to the beauty of the club's banquet decorations.

J. B. Nugent's windows on West Twenty-eighth street have been gorgeous lately.

ROSES

In last week's column we called attention to our excellent supply of Roses. We again emphasize the fact that in this direction you cannot do better elsewhere. We wish to make special mention of our stock of Richmond and Killarney. It is the grade of stock that is a credit to everyone handling it—the grower, wholesaler and retailer; it is needless to say that it will please your customer. In medium grades of Roses we are offering equally good value.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The whir of the social wheels has ceased with a suddenness that jarred the cut flower market. A leading retailer described the situation exactly when he said that something seemed to happen to all his customers at once. Business ceased with the advent of Lent. A few days of the changed conditions and matters gradually adjusted themselves. Market street bloomed and business revived. In other words, prices fell, bringing more buyers into the market; tone was restored, and a healthy activity has resulted.

Beauties continue a wonder. For awhile almost nobody had any, and now it really seems that nobody has any at all. So limited is the supply that the pre-lenten figures have been maintained for the first week in Lent. Other roses are much more plentiful and lower in price. In some wholesale centers it is claimed that Bride is selling better than colored roses, while in others no difference is noted. White carnations appear to be more in demand than the colored varieties, Enchantress suffering the most.

Violets are still in tremendous supply, with sufficient demand to use a part only. The best Easter lilies sell to advantage; the poorer ones drag. Callas are not so popular. Cattleyas are scarce and advancing in price. Gardenias are plentiful and in demand at lower prices. Valley and sweet peas are abundant indeed, the best selling fairly well. Bulbous flowers have suffered more than any other variety since the arrival of Lent. Emperor daffodils are the strongest feature of this branch of the list. Ordinary daffs, freesias and tulips hang fire.

Asparagus plumosus is not equal to the demand. Sprengeri goes begging. Smilax is rarely required. Arbutus has made its appearance and is eagerly welcomed.

The Month of February.

The volume of business during the month just concluded has been larger in the Rising Eastern Market than that of any preceding February, and, in many cases, has even rivaled December, with its holiday week. It is safe to say that nearly all retailers, wholesalers and growers have had a splendid February. There are, of course, exceptions. There must be exceptions to every rule, but the feeling is general that business is improving, and that the outlook for the spring is hopeful.

Miss Gordon's Debut.

There are a few things that all the world wants to know. And among them is the time set for the coming out of a belle. So everybody will be eager to know that it has been finally decided that Miss Dorothy Gordon will come out in the spring of 1910. But, you ask, why is the coming out of Miss Dorothy Gordon so important an event? Well, you see, Miss Dorothy has made quite a stir in the floral world. The most fastidious buyers cheerfully paid $12 per hundred at the holidays for this improved Rose-pink Enchantress, as Miss Dorothy Gordon has been described, and have been paying $6 per hundred for the flowers until Lent interfered. When it is further considered that Carnation Miss Dorothy Gordon produces nearly one-third more flowers than Enchantress (this fact is does not mean what it did in former years. The supply of flowers is now very much larger and greater quantities are being sold than during the month or two preceding Lent. Prices, accordingly, are more reasonable, thereby attracting the masses as buyers.

Lent, to the Flower Business,

officially given out by the Joseph Heacock Co.), you will see what a really important event is the coming out of Miss Dorothy Gordon, and what it means to the carnation world.

Club Meeting.

President Hahman called a good sized meeting of the Florists' Club to order Tuesday evening, March 2. William Kleinheinz read an excellent paper on "Gardenias," which was followed by a lively discussion on all sorts of topics. The Pennock-Meehan Co. exhibited a vase of White Killarney grown by Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass. Mr. Kleinheinz exhibited a white seedling carnation of the Robert Craig Co. It is large, fragrant and prolific. William H. Allabaugh, of Percassie, also made an exhibit. Chairman Garkelow is collecting subscriptions for a club piano.

John Westcott received a hearty welcome home from his trip to the Isle of Pines.

Adolph Farenwald, of Hillside.

Everyone interested in roses goes out to Hillside, in Montgomery county, to see Mr. Farenwald, who is recognized as a past master in the art of rose growing. Mr. Farenwald's success lies primarily in his judgment as to the varieties of roses to grow and how to grow them. When the hybrid tea class, now so rapidly replacing the pure teas, first came strongly into prominence in this section of the country, Mr. Farenwald selected Liberty as the variety having the greatest commercial possibilities and grew it in a way that no one hereabouts had grown it before. He induced Liberty to break at the base with a freedom that was astonishing and secured these breaks at just the right time, bringing in heavy crops of long-stemmed special blooms at the holidays and during midwinter. These flowers were so much prized by the discriminating buyers and were so difficult to obtain that they brought amazingly good prices, prices that have been rarely equaled and never eclipsed. Liberty has now been displaced by Richmond and Killarney. The American Beauty, once a feature of this place, has had its day, and in one of the houses, formerly devoted to this rose, Mr. Farenwald sowed last August some of the improved early-flowering sweet peas in three of the Zvolanek varieties. These sweet peas grew in the rich rose soil with extraor-

The Bon-ton Florists Are Pleased

Our efforts to popularize Prepared Foliage have met surprising success. The leading florists all over the country are taking up our prepared Magnolia Leaves in preference to galax. Our Fern Fronds, comprising all the leading varieties, are used wherever it is desired to combine grace with durability either in made-up designs, in vases with flowers or in jardinieres and ferneries. Have you seen our natural Willow urn-shaped baskets for large azaleas or other flowering plants? We make them to order in our factory. Tiny French Handle Baskets for luncheon favors, just the thing for sweet peas, violets or pansies. Chiffons always add to the lightness and grace of floral work. It pays to use them. Watch for our offer of Easter novelties.

dinary vigor and attained a height of perhaps fifteen feet, necessitating several bends in the vines to prevent their going through the roof of the greenhouse. They have bloomed with great freedom, producing magnificent flowers on long stems, ranging from fifteen to eighteen and even twenty inches. The roses all look well, two novelties not yet ready for description being of especial interest.

Edward Towill, of Roslyn.

Edward Towill is one of those cheery, happy chaps (I did not say happy-go-lucky) who are always on the crest of the wave, no matter what happens. Mr. Towill is a good grower and the condition of his stock fully justifies his cheerful disposition, but experience teaches that every grower has his downs as well as ups, and I do not know of any grower who would take these downs more philosophically than Mr. Towill. His specialty is Richmond, which he grows in a way that makes the Great Sam proud. The eastern experts agree that his Richmonds are in the front rank. It was, therefore, a great surprise when Mr. Towill put his new house, built last summer, into American Beauties. His explanation, somehow, did not clearly explain this move. He said, "You may have too many Richmonds," whereas it is generally understood that it is pretty hard to have too many of anything well grown in this rapidly broadening market. Mr. Towill has of late years dabbled in novelties most successfully. He took up Richmond when it was in its infancy and immediately thereafter built a handsome stable and barn. He took up Joseph Hill and built another greenhouse. This year he is taking up Mrs. Jardine and My Maryland; the results will, Deo volente, be chronicled in this column at some future day.

Victor Groshens, of Glenside.

Victor Groshens has, as Review readers know, earned his spurs by many floral successes achieved at Logan. He there forced Ulrich Brunner successfully each Easter; he there grew superb carnations and introduced seedlings notable in their day. Two years ago Mr. Groshens purchased twenty acres of ground at Glenside, and, as Review readers will recall, erected two houses, 29x500 each, planting them in Brides, Maids and Richmonds. Last fall Mr. Groshens added one-half of another house, 29x500, the remaining half to be finished this season. The completed portion has been planted in sweet peas of three Zvolanek varieties, which are getting along nicely and should bloom by Easter. A portion of the house is devoted to lettuce. These are merely catch crops, so to speak, the house being completed too late for roses this season. Mr. Groshens' houses are remarkably light; his stock is clean and healthy. There are a number of devices connected with the installing and heating plant that will please the grower who aims to combine utility with neatness.

Various Notes.

Theodore Edwards, of Bridgeton, has been sending superbly grown Emperor daffodils to William J. Baker.

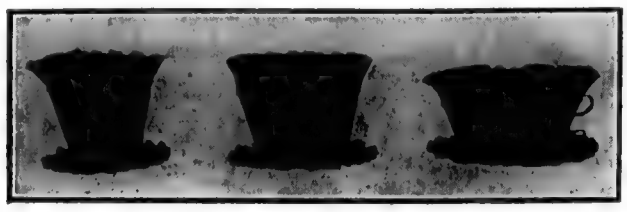
The Highland Rose Co. has been sending such splendid Bride roses to the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. that George Auegle finds great difficulty in securing any material for his cheaper orders.

Acacia pubescens is over. Leo Niessen Co. has been obliged to turn down many orders for this popular decorative flower during the last few days.

George Samtman has resigned his position as superintendent of the Florex Gardens at North Wales.

William P. Lindeman, well known for many years past, was buried this week.

M. Rice & Co. have a sterling supply in their adjustable pot cover, now in its second year; it does the work well, but best of all, it saves time, and time is money at times like Easter.



Henry Bauer is recognized as one of the brightest buyers in the Philadelphia cut flower market. Mr. Bauer combines a level head with a pleasing manner. Many a salesman has admitted that he

A number of prominent visitors have been in the city during the last few days. Who? Well, you see, they wanted to travel incog., as great men sometimes do, and their wish has been respected.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have had some exceptionally heavy shipping orders recently. The buyers are taking hold of their prepared foliage with a will.

J. Otto Thilow ascribes the improved business in the seed store to the fact that the public feels "springy."

Walter P. Stokes reports a gratifying increase in the mail orders for seeds.

Arthur Zirkman, of M. Rice & Co., has just returned from a successful western trip. Mr. Zirkman finds the buyers are ordering with increased confidence everywhere.

Smith, Lineaweaver & Co. report activity in the steaming sizes of anthracite coal. The suspension of several collieries, due to lack of demand for domestic sizes, has caused a scarcity in the smaller sizes.

There was some demand for choice flowers in Washington for the inauguration of President Taft.

A Valentine.

A prominent grower, whose stock comes into the Philadelphia market, sent his wholesaler a valentine. It was cleverly conceived, the card showing the picture of a little dog carrying a note in his mouth. In this note were the following lines:

Dear ——:

In the mouth of my little dog Billie
Is this note, which you may think is silly;
But I just want to say,
This St. Valentine's Day
That I love; do you love me?

Willie.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Seeds and Seedlings.

Be sure to keep all seeds, until they germinate, protected from the sun's rays. Covering with glass for fine seeds and paper over this, or paper itself for the larger seeds, is better than shading the glass. Use the watering-pot with great care and be sure that none of the little seedlings are allowed to dry out. A few hours' neglect may mean a heavy loss. Go slow on using the hose among seeds and seedlings. A careless man will speedily ruin a host of little plants by using it.

The work of transplanting seedlings should be taken in hand as soon as they can be handled. It never pays to put off until tomorrow what can be as well, or better, done today.

Vegetable Seeds.

The average country florist has a call for more or less vegetable plants each season. They are easily raised, and there is a good profit in them. Tomatoes, for an early crop, should now be sown; also celery, lettuce and cabbage. Sow early varieties of these. It is rather early yet to start melon, cucumber, pepper or eggplants in the northern states, which are to be used outdoors.

Rambler Roses.

Rambler roses being grown for Easter flowering should now be starting to show the little flower buds in the ends of the shoots. If they are doing so, they will be along in good season, if kept in a night temperature of 55 degrees. If the plants seem a little backward, give them a warmer house for a few days. Look out for mildew, which will rapidly disfigure and render almost unsalable the finest plants. Dust with flowers of sulphur with the first appearance of it and keep a little scattered on the main steam pipe.

C. LAWRITZEN,
RHINEBECK, N. Y.

As the pots will now be well filled with roots if potted last fall, they will be benefited by a little liquid manure, which can be continued until the flowers start to open. A top-dressing of cow manure, not too green, can also be given with advantage.

Allamanda Williamsi.

Allamanda Williamsi might profitably be more largely grown by florists. It comes in well at a season when the supply of flowering plants is limited and there could be no more effective dinner-table decoration than one or two low, well-flowered plants.

Allamandas, which have been resting during the winter, should now be shaken out, and repotted in a compost of fibrous loam, dried cow manure and sharp sand.

A dash of bone meal may also be added. Trim the plants into shape a little and start them in a brisk, moist heat, using care not to water much at the roots until growth has started. Soft wood cuttings rubbed off with a heel will root readily in a sharp bottom heat and make nice flowering plants by August, if kept growing right along.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR CLAIMS.

I want a little advice in the matter of a shipment of a quantity of fertilizer ordered from one of the traveling salesmen for one of the big manufacturers. This was shipped in bags, and in transit the car is said to have broken down and been wrecked, so that a number of the bags were broken and only a portion of the shipment was received, and some of the fertilizer had been resacked and was mixed with dirt. But the manufacturer wants us to pay the full amount of the bill and directs us to take up the loss with the railroad company. Of course that means trouble and delay. Nothing was said about it at the time we gave the order, but we understood that we were to pay the freight in addition to the cost of the stock. Under the circumstances, have we a right to expect the seller to push this claim for us, or can we withhold payment? N. Y. C.

An attorney says: "One who makes a sale of goods is not bound to deliver them at any other place than that in which they are at the time of the sale, unless he has agreed to do so. Where the sale is f. o. b. shipping point there is not only this presumption as to the place of delivery, but it is expressly agreed that the goods shall be delivered to the buyer at the place of shipment; that is what f. o. b. shipping point means. It is the buyer's business to have an agent at that place, a carrier or other agent, to accept the goods. If he makes no such appointment, then it becomes the seller's duty to select a reasonably proper and efficient carrier for the purpose and to deliver the goods to him as agent of the buyer, taking his receipt therefor. When this has been done and the buyer informed, the seller's task is at an end. He has delivered the goods in good condition to the buyer's agent, and that is precisely as effective as if he had delivered them into the buyer's own hands. The buyer is to pay for the goods, as his contract provides, whether they ever reach him or not. If there is any complaint to be made of the carrier, that is simply a dispute between the buyer and his own agent, and there is no reason why the seller should be expected to concern himself with it."

Nobody but a lawyer would put it like that. While the law is undoubtedly as stated—and it covers shipments of cut flowers and plants by express as well as shipments of less perishable stock by freight—yet if this buyer had placed his order with probably any one of the florists' supply houses that handle fertilizers and advertise them in the Review, he would not have found them so cold-blooded about it. Strict business methods are to be commended, but it is not always good policy to deal with a house that is so big it doesn't know you from Adam and has no thought as to your second order; you may save a dollar or two now and then, but you will miss the helpful interest smaller concerns take in their customers.

SOME PROBLEMS IN ROOTS.

[Synopsis of a paper by G. D. Black, of Independence, Ia., read at a joint session of the Society of Iowa Florists and the Iowa Horticultural Society, at Des Moines, December 9, 1908.]

The word root, in botany, means that part of a plant that is usually below the surface of the ground, and includes bulbs, tubers, corms and rhizomes, as well as the roots proper with their rootlets and fibrils.

As we look upon the symmetrical plant or tree and admire its beauty, as we enjoy the fragrance and charm of its flowers, and as we feast upon its delicious fruits, how little thought do we give to that part that is buried and out of sight in the ground! The roots are just as important and often greater in extent than what we see above the surface of the ground.

The roots take from the great storehouse of nature the food elements necessary for the nourishment and building up of the plant. If the plant is rooted in soil containing an abundance of its particular kinds of food, it will flourish; if not, it will have a starved appearance.

How Plants are Nourished.

Plants obtain their nourishment in much the same way as we do, except that we have in our system machinery much more highly organized and intricate. We have a pumping station, the heart; the plant has to depend on capillary attraction, absorption and some other mysterious force which is one of the unsolved problems. The air is drawn into our lungs by respiration, and the plant has its leaves or lungs spread out in the open air. We have an alimentary canal through which the food passes, and the stomach of the plant, or place of digestion, is the earth in which it is rooted.

We have something like a telegraphic system of nerves, including sensation, memory, etc., which most of us have been unable to discern in plants. Prof. Francis Darwin, a son of the noted biologist, says he has discovered and solved this problem, but his proof is not entirely satisfactory to us. One of his arguments is that roots will travel long distances in poor soil in search of food, avoid stone walls, and descend deep wells in order to obtain water, if I remember correctly; but I think the initial cause lies in the environments of the roots, and not in the roots themselves. We frequently find masses of roots penetrating the mulching beneath fruit trees. To my mind, it is more reasonable to think that the abundance of food causes many rootlets to grow, than that the tree grows the mass of rootlets for the purpose of appropriating the unusual amount of nourishment.

The fibrils, which are very small, hair-like branches on the rootlets, absorb food in a soluble state and send it by means of the sap to the leaves, where it is acted upon and changed by the air and sunshine, in about the same way as the lacteals in our own system absorb food and send it by means of the blood to the lungs.

Mysterious Behavior of Roots.

The deeper we dig into this subject, the more problems we encounter that we are unable to solve. Life itself in the roots is a great problem.

We cannot fully understand how a small piece of root can form new buds, but we take advantage of this fact in our work in propagation.

We have planted apple grafts made from roots which had remained dormant in the cellar two winters and a summer, and their long rest did not seem to affect them in the least. A box of dahlia roots was overlooked and left in the cellar, where it produced perfect flowers except in color. As an experiment we left the same roots there again during last summer, and a few imperfect flowers were produced. They are still alive, and it is our intention to plant some of them in the field next spring and watch their behavior. The problem in my mind is: Why do these roots keep in this manner during three winters and two summers, while boxes of some other varieties do not keep through the first winter?

In the same manner, a box containing about two bushels of gladiolus cormlets, mixed with soil, remained in the cellar during the summer of 1907. Sometime during March we used them to fill a depression in the ground near the pump. They were trampled on daily; they were frozen and thawed several times, and kept continually wet by the surplus water pumped by the windmill, but when warm weather came they nearly all sprouted and grew, while some of the same lot that were planted a year before sprouted poorly and made a poor stand.

There are probably good reasons for the unusual behavior of these roots, and when we have solved the problems connected with them we may change our ideas and methods of storing them through the winter.

ROSES.

an Teplitz. In pink, Killarney, La France and Chatenay are good producers. Kaiserin Augusta Victoria is one of the purest whites, and under good conditions produces well.

Among hybrid perpetuals the varieties of merit are numerous. Any good catalogue will give you the description and character of these, which makes it easy to make a selection.

Two-year-old stock is preferable for making quick returns.

Roses will do well in any fertile soil, if the drainage is good and the bed thoroughly prepared and fertilized. The best soil is sod from an old pasture, with the addition of well rotted cow manure. The bed should be dug out at least two feet deep and filled with this compost, four parts of sod to one of manure, thoroughly mixed. The best time to plant is just after the danger of frost is past in spring. Ribes.

GARDEN ROSES.

Which are better for planting out in the garden, field grown two-year-old roses or 4-inch pots of the hybrid perpetuals and hybrid teas? Which is the best time for planting out for field and for pot? How high should a well grown 4-inch pot rose be? G. O.

For planting out in the garden, field-grown hybrid perpetual two-year-old roses are much superior to those grown in 4-inch pots. The latter are usually grown from cuttings and my experience has been that these latter lack the vigor and are much shorter lived than stock which has been grafted on such stocks as Manetti or seedling briar. While somewhat better results may be had with the hybrid teas grown in pots, they cannot compare with what can be had from strong field-grown grafted stock.

The best time to plant hybrid perpetual or hybrid tea roses is, in my opinion, the early part of November; next to that, in spring, just as soon as frost has left the ground and it can be worked. This, of course, applies only to field-grown stock. So much depends on the condition of the 4-inch plants that it is difficult to say just how soon it can be planted. Such as I have seen have been too delicate to go out before the middle of May. Possibly, however, dormant pot plants might be procurable which could go out a little earlier. The pot plants cost much less at the outset, but will never give the results of the field-grown stock.

A well-grown 4-inch rose plant should be eight to twelve inches high from the top of the pot, the hybrid perpetuals being taller than the hybrid teas.

The Buffalo Exhibition.

President Poehlmann has appointed a committee to consider the examination and requirements of new roses. Robert Simpson, of Clifton, N. J., is chairman. The value of the prizes for the Buffalo exhibition, as computed by Mr. Pierson, is equal to $1,000. The Iroquois hotel will be the headquarters. Papers are being prepared by five persons upon matters of pertinent interest. Leonard Baron has offered to give an illustrated lecture on this occasion.

All entries from a distance may be sent in care of Vice-President Wm. F. Kasting, 385 Ellicott street, Buffalo, N. Y. The exhibition will open Wednesday afternoon, March 17, at 5 o'clock, in the Iroquois hotel, and continue over March 18 and 19.

WATERPROOF CREPE PAPER.

The protest of A. Herrmann, of New York, before the United States Board of General Appraisers has been overruled by Appraiser Fischer. The merchandise in question was a heavy crepe paper, said to be waterproof, such as is used by florists in wrapping around flower pots. It was classified by the collector as crepe paper and assessed with duty at the rate of 5 cents per pound and fifteen per cent ad valorem under the specific provision therefor in paragraph 397, tariff act of 1897. The importer claimed it to be dutiable properly at twenty-five per cent ad valorem under paragraph 402 of said act, as paper not specifically provided for. The appraiser decided that the term crepe paper in the tariff act is not confined to crepe tissue paper, but applies as well to similar and heavier papers which have been subjected to the creping process.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market was much overcrowded with stock last week. The consignments were so heavy that prices suffered greatly. Business was not so slow with the retailers, as they bought heavily each morning, but the supply was so great that they could not consume all that came in.

The glut was especially noticeable in California violets. These came in by hundreds of thousands and had to be sold, so the wholesalers put the price down as low as $1 per thousand; the retailers doubled their money at 5 cents per bunch of twenty-five.

Carnations, too, were a glut and sold as low as $7.50 to $10 per thousand, quality being of the best, Enchantress and white making up the glut.

Roses have not as yet been overstocked and the best of them are selling well. Medium-stemmed American Beauties are most plentiful.

In bulb stock, everything in season is more than enough for the demand. Tulips and Dutch hyacinths are coming in fine. Lilies are plentiful, both Harrisii and callas. Sweet peas are fine, with extra long stems, and all the light

Various Notes.

T. W. Carlton, of Alvin, Tex., was a visitor last week. Mr. Carlton says that his cape jasmine will be ready for shipment early this year.

Mrs. William Ellison, of the Ellison Floral Co., has returned home from her visit to her daughter, Mrs. Wordy, at Cleveland, and brought the news that she is being called Grandma now.

George Waldbart, son of Alex Waldbart, is still ill.

Hugo Gross, of Kirkwood, is sending a grand lot of long sweet peas to Smith & Co.

W. J. Pilcher is having great success with Beacon this season. He can not grow enough for the demand, as every buyer wants Pilcher's Beacon.

C. A. Kuehn is now the local distributer of the Burton-Allison carnation green dye, of which the local trade is buying heavily. This dye had a great run last year.

J. H. Ahner, of Kirkwood, cut thousands of California violets last week; in fact, so many that he had to bunch them at the wholesale market each morning.

John Burke has returned home after a short trip to California, and may open a store again soon.

Henry Ostertag was busy all of last week canvassing votes for his nomination to the House of Delegates and was rewarded for his work on Friday, when he was notified that he was the nominee from the Twenty-eighth ward, defeating his man 513 to 360. The election takes place in April.

C. Young & Sons Co. made a fine show last week of white lilac plants in full bloom, also other spring blooming plants, which attracted a great deal of attention.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-seventh annual convention, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 22 to 24, 1909.

THE Holmes Seed Co., Harrisburg, Pa., will increase its capital stock from $50,000 to $75,000.

H. A. BUNYARD, with Arthur T. Boddington, has returned to New York after a most successful western trip.

A CANVASS of the onion set situation shows the supply to be less than it was at this time last year. The demand is strong and everything points to steadily rising prices.

THE wholesalers are reporting very satisfactory trade. Aside from some varieties of muskmelon that are hard to secure, and some others of the same article that test very poorly, no trouble to fill orders is experienced.

THE mail order seed business is surely good. One Illinois mail order seed house reports the receipt of 29,000 orders during February. Some other may have done much better than this, but a thousand or more orders a day is not so bad.

THE market garden seedsmen are quite satisfied with the trade they are doing. Some of the good stocks of onion and other standard articles called for by gardeners are in short supply, but as a rule orders can be taken care of satisfactorily.

TUCKER'S SEED HOUSE, of Carthage, Mo., has opened a branch store in Webb City, starting business there February 22. It is located at 205 South Allen street, and C. T. Tucker is in charge. The firm hopes to reach much business in the west end of the county through this store.

WILLIAM GRAFF has leased the entire four-story building at Columbus, O., in which his flower store has been located, and will put in a general line of seeds and bulbs. Next season he intends to issue a catalogue and go into the mail order branch of the business.

LATEST reports from California indicate that the floods have not done as much damage to the crops as was feared they might do. The worst is now over with and from now on normal conditions are expected, and it is thought that most of the plantings will come through and make fair crops.

THE catalogue houses say February made a better record than a year ago, in spite of heavy storms that shut off orders from a large section of the Mississippi valley and lake region for a week or so in the middle of the month. Generally, the month was a mild and pleasant one, the kind that makes early seed orders.

BEANS, peas and sweet corn seem to be causing less uneasiness to those who are supplied and to those who are not. The outlook for a good bean trade is bright, most of the canners are now supplied with peas, and sweet corn has not come to the point where it is safe to say whether it is scarce or the reverse. The easy feeling referred to above is therefore due more to a condition of rest than to anything else.

GRABER & SON, Findlay, O., are shippers of Kentucky blue grass seed.

AT Philadelphia counter trade has begun to pick up and a big season is looked for.

David C. Frost died recently in Louisville, Ky., and was buried in Lexington, Ky. He had been in the seed business in Lexington for several years.

E. V. HALLOCK, of Queens, N. Y., died of apoplexy in a train in the subway in New York city on the evening of March 1. Further particulars will be found in the obituary column on page 16.

LAST year's pack of cucumber pickles is pretty well cleaned up, especially the medium sizes, and the seed trade is already feeling the call for the planting of a liberal acreage of the pickling varieties for 1909 pack.

IT is reported from San Francisco that Luther Burbank has made an arrangement giving the sole right to the distribution of his plant discoveries of the future to Herbert Law, Hartland Law and Oscar E. Dinner, who will organize a corporation for the purpose.

AT its new store, 518 Market street, Philadelphia, the H. F. Michell Co. has erected a striking glass and iron marquee (canopy or awning) over the sidewalk. Ten large opal glass globes adorn the top and the words, "Michell's Seeds," stand out prominently, especially at night when the marquee is lighted up.

SEED for onion sets is said to be pretty well cleaned up. The reports have it that more than usual will be planted and that a good year will bring a great supply of sets. This, however, is always talked of and yet the supply has been below the demand; at least this has been so for the past three seasons.

G. HYLKEMA, of Van Zanten Bros., Hillegom, Holland, who sailed from home January 28, says the bulb fields have come through the winter in good shape and that prices for the present are about as last season—a little lower on fancy tulips and a little higher on the cheaper sorts. He estimates the number of Holland salesmen now in the United States as fifty, representing some thirty firms. Mr. Hylkema says the florists are ordering bulbs on the whole lighter than they did last year, but that he looks for the seed house trade to show an increase, because of the excellent clean-up made last fall as a result of the good call for bulbs for bedding purposes.

THE DICKINSON FIRE.

February 26 the Albert Dickinson Co. added one more to the long list of spectacular Chicago fires, when its No. 2 warehouse was completely destroyed, with all its contents, imperiling the lives of a large number of girls, workmen, and firemen, and entailing a money loss that may run up to $300,000.

Warehouse No. 2 is one of eighteen used by the company at Chicago, and the interruption to business in so large an establishment was slight. The warehouse was built in 1890, originally for flax cleaning and storage, but recently has been used for seed grain and the storage of stock for poultry foods. The only loss in the grass seed and clover departments was a little damage by water in the basements of warehouses No. 1, No. 3, No. 4, No. 11 and No. 12; also the loss of a few cars on track that were crushed when the walls fell.

Warehouse No. 2 was eight stories high—ten, including the cupola—and the fire, originating in a friction clutch on the elevator, sprang up the shaft in a moment, so that the building was afire from top to bottom when the fire department arrived. That only No. 2 warehouse was destroyed the Dickinson Co. gives credit to the fact there was little wind and to the good work of the department, for No. 2 was separated from No. 1 and No. 3 only by party walls, and from the big grass seed warehouse by a narrow alley. No. 2 was heavily stocked and the putting out of the fire was all the more difficult because the building was full of the dry lumber of storage bins. Indeed, one engine was still pumping on the ruins March 2, more than four days after the start of the fire and after a good start had been made at clearing up the wreckage.

When the walls fell, it simply obliterated the freight cars on track beneath and the weight of bricks shored through the big steel beams supporting the teaming level, above the tracks on the south side. One of the items lost was some twenty-five cars of beans, just in from the Danube.

The building was owned by the Chicago Tunnel Co., to which the Dickinson Co. sold it some two years ago. The loss on stock is fully provided for by insurance, it being the policy to keep everything covered, even to the stock in cars waiting to be unloaded.

FREIGHTS ON JAP LILIES.

Robert Fulton, of Henry & Lee, has been in Chicago for a week on his way to New York from his annual trip to Japan. He says the most important change in the Japanese lily bulb situation is the advance in freight rates, which has come as a result of a ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The shippers of the Pacific northwest filed a complaint with the commission because the freight rate from their section to the east was not in proportion to the rates from Yokohama and other Pacific Ocean points to New York. Instead of getting a reduction in the rates from the Pacific coast cities, an increase was made on the ocean freights and this year bulbs from Japan will pay 65 cents per hundred pounds more freight than they did last season, if shipped in less than carload lots, and on carload lots the advance is about 25 cents per hundred pounds. This is figured to mean an increased freight of about $1 per case on the entire imports of Japanese bulbs.

Mr. Fulton says there will be some increase in the quantity of Formosa bulbs, which he recently inspected and for which he says there is such an active demand that there certainly will not be enough bulbs to go around, and as a result prices are slightly higher. He reports the longiflorum multiflorum and giganteum crops about as usual, with prices averaging about as last year.

NEW YORK PURE SEED LAW.

In the New York state legislature the following bill was introduced February 22, by Assemblyman Callan, of Columbia county, and referred to the committee on agriculture:

An Act

To amend the agricultural law, entitled "An act in relation to agriculture, constituting chapter one of the consolidated laws," in relation to inspection and sale of seeds.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. Chapter nine of the laws of 1909, entitled "An act in relation to agriculture, constituting chapter one of the consolidated laws," is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof a new article to be known as article sixteen to read as follows:

§ 360. Inspection and sale of seeds.—No person shall sell, offer, expose or have in his possession for sale for the purposes of seeding, any seeds of cereals, grasses, clovers or forage plants in quantities exceeding one pound, unless every receptacle, package, sack or bag containing such seeds, or a label securely attached thereto, is marked in a plain indelible manner as follows:

a. With the full name and address of the seller.

b. With the name of the kind or kinds of seeds.

c. The per centum of purity of the sample.

d. With the common name or names of the weeds, the seeds of which, if any, are present in the seed sold, offered, exposed or held in possession for sale.

For the purposes of this act such seed so offered or exposed for sale shall be deemed to be free from prohibited seeds if they do not exist in greater proportion than five of any one kind to 1,000 of the seed being sold, offered, exposed or held in possession for sale. The provisions of this act shall not apply to any person selling seeds direct to merchants to be cleaned or graded before being offered for sale for the purposes of seeding, nor to seed that is held in storage for the purpose of being recleaned and which has not been offered, exposed or held in possession for sale for the purpose of seeding, nor to seed marked "not absolutely clean" and held or sold for export only.

§ 2. This act shall take effect immediately.

Commissioner Raymond A. Pearson, of the State Department of Agriculture, says the purpose of the bill is to guard against fraud and to prevent New York being made a dumping ground for low grade seed. "Canada and many states of this country," said Commissioner Pearson, "have a very clever law by which they prohibit the sale of low grade seed within their territory but allow it to be sold in other states and countries. The result is that New York state for some time has been a dumping ground for all the cheap, sterile seed of Canada and these other states. The bill does not prevent the sale of low grade seed but provides that it must be marked so that a purchaser will know what he is getting."

GERMAN SEED NOTES.

The wholesale seedsmen at Erfurt have by now got pretty well through their annual rush. The export orders are practically all dispatched. The brassicas have been in strong demand. Peas also have sold exceptionally well. Parsnips have cleaned up quickly and onions had a good season. For leek, kohlrabi, endive, parsley, carrot, beet and spinach there has been about an average demand, while radishes have not moved off as rapidly as was expected. Mangels have been in strong demand. There has been a good demand for asters, and shortages are beginning to be felt. The same may be said of stocks. Pansies, which yielded well last summer, have had about an average sale. As a general rule annuals have gone off freely. Mignonettes suffered greatly and the choicer kinds, particularly the Machet section, are cleared out. Perennials have had a good sale. The greenhouse and stage flowers, petunias, calceolarias, cinerarias, etc., were short crops and higher in price, but the demand has been quite up to average.

At Quedlinburg the trade has been doing a good business and many sorts of seeds, of which there was a surplus the last several years, are already cleared out. Peas have not for many years sold as readily as this season, and contracts for crop 1909 had to be refused for want of stock seed. Broad beans met with an unusual demand. Chervil, cress, dill, thyme, tarragon, etc., have been so much demanded that the supplies were far from covering the orders. Beets, cabbages, carrots, celeriac, corn salad, kohlrabi, leek, onions, parsley and parsnip met with a brisk sale and many sorts are exhausted already. Borecole, Brussels sprouts, cauliflower, endives, gourds, radishes and spinach met with the usual demand. Flower seeds on the whole met with an increased demand, and many of the sorts will be sold out before the end of the season. Severe cold at the end of October did considerable damage to root crops, of which at that time a large

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $2,843.

HAARLEM JUBILEE FLOWER SHOW

The complete schedule has now been published for the jubilee flower show at Haarlem in 1910. It is a volume of eighty pages, in the Dutch language, because the competition is only open to Dutch exhibitors. It is expected that many special prizes of honor will be given by patrons, societies, etc. The awards offered in the schedule are seventy-five golden medals and about 2,500 other prizes. The judges will be chosen among the horticulturists of all nations.

The permanent show in the open (from March 23 to May 16), according to the schedule, will consist of 200 classes for beds and groups of hyacinths, tulips, narcissi, crocuses and other bulbous plants, herbaceous perennials, rockeries, conifers, aucubas, azaleas and rhododendrons, buxus, ilex, prunus, and other shrubs.

The first special show, March 23 to 31, will contain 275 classes, principally for hyacinths, tulips, narcissi, crocuses, amaryllis and other bulbous plants in pots. A special feature will be the class for bulbs and plants, retarded in ice, and there are also important classes for Azalea mollis and rhododendrons, roses, lilacs and other forced shrubs, stove and greenhouse plants and cut flowers.

The second special show, April 15 to 24, will have 300 classes of the same general character as those of the first show, but the third special show, May 4 to 12, will not afford an opportunity for showing hyacinths, but will probably have the character of a special show of orchids and decorative floral art.

The regular meetings of the committee judging new bulbous plants will also be held in the show buildings every week.

The permanent exhibition in the open will doubtless be of the highest interest to foreign visitors, and although the artistic and suitable arrangement of bulbous stuff is a rather difficult task, there is every chance of obtaining good results, because four local exhibitions of the same nature have been organized before in the bulb district. The Noorduijk section of the Bulb Growers' Society did so twice some years ago, the Sassenheim section quite recently, and the Hillegom section is this season preparing a local show, which may be considered as a valuable trial for the large jubilee flower show, to be held next year.

Legislative and Tariff Committee.

The legislative and tariff committee of the S. A. F. met Wednesday, February 24, at 35 Cortlandt street, New York. Those present were Frank R. Pierson, Patrick O'Mara, J. D. Eisele, Benjamin Hammond and Patrick Welch. There was a mass of correspondence and Mr. Hammond suggested that Frank R. Pierson act as chairman and he would act as secretary.

The following were adopted: Resolved, That it is the sense of this committee that the S. A. F. recommend wherever possible that a specific duty upon bulbs and plants be imposed.

Resolved, That the schedule be by count and not by measure.

Resolved, That this committee do recommend that the following specific duty be levied on a ratio per thousand, namely:

THE FRENCH TRUMPET MAJOR.

The scarcity of single daffodils in the cut flower market during the middle of this month suggests possibilities in forcing this beautiful yellow flower during the three or four weeks following Christmas. The demand for yellow flowers is satisfied during the early fall by the decorative dahlias, in late fall and early winter by the showy chrysanthemums, and in late winter and early spring by the single and double daffodils. There is a gap between the late chrysanthemums and the early daffodils which is sufficiently covered by a few Campernelles and scattering Trumpet Majors. This gap may be readily bridged by the French-grown Trumpet Major narcissi. They reach this country at the same time as the French-grown Paper White narcissi, are as readily forced and can therefore be easily brought into bloom early, provided they are treated like the Paper Whites. The important point is that those required for early forcing should be planted out in boxes early to insure ample roots, a necessity in successful forcing.

Walter P. Stokes, who has been successful in forcing many varieties of bulbs and roots in his Floracroft Greenhouses, at Moorestown, N. J., tried 6,000 Trumpet Majors, French-grown, this season. All were flowered before the middle of January and all sold at satisfactory prices. Mr. Stokes is enthusiastic over these bulbs, believing they will become more popular when better known.

The Market.

While business is less brisk than a week ago, it is satisfactory on the whole. More material is arriving and prices show a softening tendency, but there is no congestion of supplies, such as existed a year ago. Roses are not of as good quality as last winter, but good crops are now coming along and supplies will be greater in a few days. Prices have yielded a little this week, especially on medium and short-stemmed grades. Carnations are in better supply, but clear out in pretty good shape. Violets are increasing in supply and few now pass 50 cents per hundred; 60 cents is top price for best singles and these are of superb quality.

Bulbous stock is now quite varied and sells satisfactorily. Narcissi most in evidence are Emperor, Victoria, Golden Spur, double Von Sion, princeps and ornatus. In tulips popular sorts are La Reine, Murillo, Couronne d'Or and Thomas Moore. Sweet peas are fine and sell as well as anything in the market. Easter lilies are of splendid quality. Lily of the valley is good and meets with a steady sale. Pansies are quite abundant, and of English primroses, forget-me-nots, wallflowers and other spring flowers there is a fairly good supply arriving.

Out-of-Door Decorative Stock

It pays to have something to cut in mid-summer. I have a special stock of PLUMED CELOSIA, "Reid's Perfection." It is a brilliant scarlet and sells readily. Per trade packet, 25c; per oz., $1.50.

Various Notes.

E. V. Hallock, president of the New York Florists' Club and widely known as a seedsman at Queens, N. Y., had been announced to speak before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club at its next meeting, discussing his specialty, "Bulbous Plants." Monday night Mr. Hallock died of apoplexy in the New York subway. Details will be found in the obituary column of this issue.

Mrs. George S. Ladd delivered the regular Saturday lecture at Horticultural hall, February 27, on "Rural New England." This proved one of the best of the season. In the discussion following the lecture, Governor N. J. Batchelder, of New Hampshire, master of the Na-

The members of the Boston Coöperative Flower Market have secured a score of silver cups and other trophies for their market show, which will occur Saturday, March 20.

E. Allan Peirce is already formulating plans for a trade exhibition in 1910 which will surpass that of 1909, and there is not the slightest doubt that he will succeed. The Park Street market is fortunate in having a secretary with such energy and enthusiasm.

Thomas J. Grey has returned from a business trip through Connecticut and reports good business.

The executive committee of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club is busy with plans for the coming banquet, March 31, which it is intended to make the best ever.

Dutch bulb travelers are around in force and report an improved business over a year ago.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. are having a heavy trade in cut flowers and greenery, much ahead of 1908.

William Aylward is handling some fine Acacia pubescens at the Park street market.

Thomas Roland, of Nahant, has 17,000 cyclamens in small pots coming along for next winter's crop. The fine specimens he exhibited at the trade show this week were in 2½-inch pots a year ago.

John P. Mossman, an orchid grower at Langwater, North Easton, lost the sight of his right eye February 26 as the result of an accident.

Henry R. Comley is having good business since opening his store at 6 Park street. W. N. CRAIG.

SWEET PEAS.

Can sweet peas be flowered successfully under glass by October 1, and how long will the crop last under good treatment? How should I proceed? Please state best varieties in pink, white and lavender. G. T. S.

Start sweet peas about the middle of July for October flowering. Seed can either be sown in small pots or in flats of sand and transplanted from there to where they are to flower. They succeed best in a wide house, where they can have ample headroom. Solid beds are preferred to benches by all the best specialists. Rows should be five feet apart to give the plants full justice. Some prefer to allow them six feet. Single plants two inches apart are sufficiently thick.

A compost of good loam, well enriched with decayed manure, suits sweet peas. While growing, an occasional surfacing of fine bone or sheep manure can be forked in lightly. The temperature in summer will, of course, fluctuate much, but plenty of ventilation should be afforded

Forcing Gladiolus

Gladiolus Gandavensis Hybrids

Many florists plant these in boxes, or among their carnations, in the winter. They are excellent for decorative purposes and realize good prices, either wholesale or retail. Gladioli are a good catch crop and take up but little room. The following are the best for this purpose:

America. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color. $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000.

Augusta. The florists' best white Gladiolus. First size bulbs, 1¾ inches and up. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.75 per 100; $16.00 per 1000.

Shakespeare. White and rose. $4.75 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

May. Pure white, flaked rosy crimson; the best forcer. Selected bulbs, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis (true). Fiery scarlet. Selected bulbs, $1.50 per 100; $13.00 per 1000. First size bulbs, $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Boddington's White and Light. Extra selected bulbs. 1¾ in. and up. $1.50 per 100; $14.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

American Hybrids. A mixture of the choicest varieties of Gladiolus in cultivation. $1.00 per 100; $9.00 per 1000.

whenever climatic conditions allow. In winter 48 degrees at night is a suitable temperature for plants in flower. The crop of sweet peas will last for several months. Those starting to bloom in October will flower until February. It pays to have another batch coming along to follow these, sown in October.

Suitable forcing varieties are Mont Blanc or Christmas White, white; Christmas Pink or Extra Earliest of All, pink and white; Sunbeams, pale yellow. There are also several other colors of the Zvolanek varieties now being used for forcing. C. W.

FORGET-ME-NOTS IN WINTER.

Can forget-me-nots be flowered during the winter months? If they can, please give me cultural directions. I wish to grow them for funeral purposes.

J. B.

The forget-me-nots, myosotis, can be satisfactorily flowered in winter. Plants can be raised either from seed or cuttings. The latter is the easier method. If you prefer to use seed, sow in a shaded coldframe in July. Transplant to the field and keep well cultivated; lift and plant in the benches in October. If you take cuttings, the end of August is sufficiently early to insert them. Forget-me-nots succeed well in a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night, but must not be grown any warmer. They can be grown in a violet house, in which, however, they will not flower so early.

The best winter blooming variety is Myosotis dissitiflora. M. alpestris Victoria makes a pretty, compact pot plant, useful for spring sales.

A common method of growing for-get-me-nots is to plant them on the edges of benches containing other crops, in the same way as alyssum and candytuft are often cultivated. C. W.

CHLIDANTHUS FRAGRANS.

I have been growing Chlidanthus fragrans for some years in the black corn belt soil of Illinois, treating them like the gladiolus. They make many and fine bulbs, but not one in a thousand ever blooms. Can someone tell me why?

L. S. S.

These South American bulbs should grow well in your soil. The bulbs should be kept cool and dry in winter, like gladioli. Try potting some of them in a mixture of loam, leaf-mold and sand and place in a greenhouse kept at 50 to 55 degrees. After flowering, plunge the pots outdoors in a bed of ashes and keep watered during the summer. If you prefer to plant right outdoors, use some sand in the soil, and a mulching of old manure, when hot weather comes along, will be found beneficial. C. W.

Chrysanthemum

By Arthur Herrington

Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated, 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

PACIFIC COAST.

CARNATIONS IN CALIFORNIA.

A tour among some of our largest carnation growers gives a good insight as to the varieties that are being propagated for next season, as well as a few ideas regarding the various degrees of success which different growers have with our usual assortment of kinds.

It is safe to say that fully half the bench room in this section of California is devoted to the culture of Enchantress, and from present prospects it will be planted as fully again for next season. Following closely on Enchantress, the Rose-pink variety comes up to expectations with most growers and will be much more heavily planted next season than it is this year. Winsor and Mrs. Lawson are next in line, with probably a larger amount of the latter. Nelson Fisher is not planted as much as it was last year, and E. Schwerin and some other old sorts are practically discarded.

In scarlets, Estelle is by far the most profitable, apparently, as fully seventy-five per cent of the bench room devoted to red colored sorts is planted with this variety. Red Lawson and Beacon are doing well and a few patches of Victory are shown. Robert Craig will not be grown extensively next season, and Harlowarden seems to have displaced all other crimson sorts.

There are but few yellow carnations grown here. In a visit to more than twenty establishments, I found only one place that devoted any space to them, and this was taken up by J. Carbone, one of the oldest yellow sorts here and one of the best as well.

In white varieties I find that White Enchantress will be the heaviest planted next season again. White Lawson follows this closely and Gov. Wolcott is third in the list. Queen Louise and Boston Market, particularly the latter variety, are still grown extensively by some of the smaller growers, but Flora Hill is practically out of the race, having been superseded by better winter blooming kinds.

From appearances, the tendency seems to be to grow less and less white sorts every year. This has been remarked by many retailers recently, and there is a possibility that there will be a decided scarcity unless the carnation men soon devote more space to their culture. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business shows a decided change for the better since sunshine has replaced the rain. The weather has turned slightly colder, with frequent drying winds.

Flowers are not overplentiful, with the exception of violets and daffodils, which are far in excess of the demand. White narcissi, which have proven such a boon to the retailers in the funeral design work, are over for the season, with the exception of a few of the late sorts. Valley and Lilium longiflorum are well bought up and are being largely used in sprays.

Roses, with the exception of some short-stemmed stock, have not been equal to the demand since the weather moderated. Carnations, although not scarce, cannot be called plentiful either, but we can expect a full supply in a few days.

Fruit blossoms and a few varieties of early wild flowers seem to hit the popular idea of a seasonable flower and are in excellent demand, as well as all varieties of green goods. Smilax, asparagus and maidenhair are all scarce articles with the dealers, and were it not for the fact that the wild ferns have made their appearance in appreciable quantities, the dearth would have a serious effect on trade.

Heavily bloomed azaleas are being used lavishly in the shop windows and the effect is good.

Various Notes.

Louis Larson, who is accused of having passed spurious checks on fifteen florists during the last three days, was arrested in the store of the Wickstrom Floral Co., 810 Van Ness avenue, on Saturday, February 20. Larson had just bought a floral piece for $5 and in payment had tendered a check for $16.50. Fifteen florists in San Francisco, Oakland and Berkeley have complained to the police in their respective localities that they have been defrauded by a man who, after purchasing a floral design, had always given a worthless check. In each case the man bought $5 worth of flowers and his checks were invariably drawn for $16.50 and signed by some prominent business man. Pelicano & Rossi and Podesta & Baldocchi were among the dealers who were victimized.

The San Francisco Evergreen Co. has become well established and reports a good demand for green stuff of all kinds.

J. T. Morris, of the Morris & Snow Seed Co., of Los Angeles, is in town on a business trip. He reports everything lively in southern California.

The Sievers Floral Co. will move on Geary street and locate between Kearney street and Grant avenue in the near future.

J. B. Boland is reported seriously ill at his home. G.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus

Last year, owing to the almost total failure of the Asparagus Plumosus to seed, I was unable to fill my orders, but this season I am to the front with about 2,000,000 seed.

The plants, after a year's rest, blossomed freely and matured a heavy crop of what I believe will be the strongest seed ever sent out of California. The Asparagus Plumosus grown here needs no introduction to you, however, as you are already fully acquainted with its merits. You can get seed promptly, as they are being harvested now, and can be delivered upon receipt of your order.

Seeds will be sold by count, with the usual guarantee as to germination, and I will again sell at my usual low, cash-with-order prices as per following list:

1,000 seeds	$ 2.00	13,000 seeds	$20.00
6,000 seeds	10.00	25,000 seeds	35.00
50,000 seeds			62.50

I shall be glad to receive your order and know you will be pleased with the results.

GLADIOLI

Best New and Standard Varieties

Those who are not acquainted with the beauty and grace of Gladioli blossoms have missed one of the beautiful things of this world. Their easy culture and free-flowering habit make them distinctly "the people's flower."

To introduce Gladioli to those who are as yet not acquainted with these lovely flowers, I herewith offer some of the finest new and best standard varieties at prices within the reach of all. The brilliant flowers of these sorts with their delicate colorings and markings have created quite a sensation in Santa Cruz, where some of them were never seen before.

NEW NAMED GLADIOLUS BULBS

GLADIOLI

Best New and Standard Varieties

Those who are not acquainted with the beauty and grace of Gladioli blossoms have missed one of the beautiful things of this world. Their easy culture and free-flowering habit make them distinctly "the people's flower."

To introduce Gladioli to those who are as yet not acquainted with these lovely flowers, I herewith offer some of the finest new and best standard varieties at prices within the reach of all. The brilliant flowers of these sorts with their delicate colorings and markings have created quite a sensation in Santa Cruz, where some of them were never seen before.

NEW NAMED GLADIOLUS BULBS

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

D. Hill, Dundee, Ill., has issued a neat 8-page folder entitled, "Catalpa Growing for Profit."

E. Runyan, president of the Elizabeth Nursery Co., Elizabeth, N. J., is in Cuba, where he has nursery interests.

J. A. Young, of the Aurora Nursery Co., Aurora, Ill., reports a constantly increasing volume of business in the landscape department.

The nurseries that make a specialty of moving large trees are finding quite a little of this class of work this winter. The demand for trees for immediate effect is steadily increasing.

The Peterson Nursery now has a suite of offices in the Stock Exchange building, Chicago, that gives the visitor the idea that nurserymen don't always wear their trousers tucked into their boots.

Some western New York nurseries say the call for apple trees has fallen off, but out beyond the Mississippi they will tell you the demand for apple trees never was so strong, nor were prices ever so high.

Intensive basket willow culture is being successfully tried at Arlington, Va., by the national Department of Agriculture. Hitherto about all the willow ware manufactured has been imported from Europe.

James Cocker & Sons, Aberdeen, Scotland, are introducing a new rambler rose, Christian Curle, designated as an improved Dorothy Perkins, from which variety it is a sport, resembling it in every way except color, which is a pale flesh pink.

The following officers of the Miami Valley Nurserymen's Association have been elected: President, T. I. Dinsmore, of Troy; secretary and treasurer, W. N. Scarff, New Carlisle. Frank E. Freeman was toastmaster at the annual banquet following the meeting at Dayton, O., at which these elections were made.

Henry Kallen, for six years with the late August Rhotert and his successor, H. Frank Darrow, of New York, is reported to have successfully combined two of the largest nurseries of Boskoop, Holland, with the owners of which he went into partnership. Mr. Kallen will visit the United States again this spring in the interest of the new firm, which will be operated under the name of Kallen & Lunnemann. The name of Lunnemann was well known as an exporter of nursery stock to this country.

RHODE ISLAND INSPECTION.

The treatment of tree pests takes up a large part of the annual report of the State Board of Agriculture just presented to the General Assembly, and the work carried on by Prof. A. E. Stene is heartily commended. It is recommended that the appropriation of $10,000, which is an amount equal to that set aside last year, be made this year for carrying on the work of exterminating the gypsy and brown tail moths.

In pointing out the desirability of the enactment of nursery inspection laws, the report says that the demand for such a law is stronger than ever. "There are," it says, "a number of nurseries situated in the neighborhood of orchards which abound with San Jose scale and other pests. The owner of the nursery has no way of keeping his stock clean unless the adjacent breeding places are cleaned up."

The board also recommends sweeping changes in the present nursery inspection law, which it terms "highly inadequate." The proposed law provides for the appointment of a state entomologist, who shall have power to inspect all fruit trees and to order that trees be sprayed. It shall be his duty to inspect all nursery stock at least once a year. The law also makes provision for the inspection of shipments of nursery stock and the licensing of persons, other than growers, who sell nursery stock. In order that a thorough campaign may be made against the San Jose scale, a special appropriation of $2,500 is asked.

The last census shows an increase of $26,500 in orchard products within the state in the ten years from 1895 to 1905. Secretary Dunn, of the board, says: "This seems to show a material progress in orchard work, but if we wish to consider the condition of the whole state we will find little improvement. Taking the state as a whole, orchard work has been at a standstill, if not on the downward grade, for the past ten years. The principal cause of this is the San Jose scale. Seventy to ninety per cent of the orchards and nurseries of the state have more or less scale." W. H. M.

AN OSAGE HEDGE FROM SEED.

I should like to know how long it would take to grow an osage hedge from seed. It is for a lawn. Or could you recommend any other kind that would keep loose stock out? Privet and Japanese quince I am afraid would not turn them. B. P. M.

Seed of osage orange, sown in drills in the spring, will produce nice plants in less than a year. Two-year-old plants are suitable for permanent planting for hedges.

There are other plants that would make hedges which would act as barriers against the encroachments of stock, but all of them are of such slow growth that it would be useless to consider them when rapidity of growth is of account.

The osage orange is of rapid growth from the start, and with a little attention in the way of cultivation and a cutting back for one or two seasons, will make just the right kind of hedge for the desired purpose. D. M.

A LIME SULPHUR WASH.

In the Review of February 4 you gave a recipe for a lime-sulphur wash for spraying fruit trees, but did not state the quantity of water used for dissolving and spraying. Would you please give me this information?

Use lime, sulphur and salt in the following proportions: Fresh, unslaked lime, fifteen pounds; sulphur, thirteen pounds; salt, five to ten pounds.

Slake the lime in four or five gallons of hot water, using an iron kettle with a capacity of twenty gallons. When the slaking is in full process, sift in the sulphur gradually, meanwhile stirring the mixture thoroughly. Mix well and add sufficient water to make a thick paste. Add the salt and six or eight gallons of hot water and boil for one hour. Pour through a strainer of tin or brass wire, add thirty to forty gallons of water and the mixture is ready for use.

Larger or smaller quantities can be made in the same proportions.

PELARGONIUMS AS BEDDERS.

Would pelargoniums do all right bedded out during the summer? C. C.

Pelargoniums of the show types are not successes as bedding plants. They do not stand sunshine well and their flowering period is limited to about two months, April to June. They are useful as house plants or for piazza-boxes, but should always have some shade. The plants will grow freely if planted out, but will not bloom at all after the early part of June. C. W.

CINERARIAS FOR CHRISTMAS.

When is the proper time to sow Cineraria stellata to obtain Chistmas plants in full bloom? W. H. S.

I am afraid you will find it somewhat difficult to get Cineraria stellata in flower as early as Christmas. The natural flowering time for these plants is from February until the early part of May, and we find the large-flowered varieties come in season earlier than the stellatas. However, if you wish to try to get some in for Christmas, sow the seeds in a north house, or frame with a northern exposure, about the middle of June. Great care will be required to prevent the plants damping off in warm weather. August is a safer month in which to sow the seed, but these would not be along in time for Christmas. C. W.

SWEET WILLIAM DRYING OFF.

I grow from 800 to 1,000 sweet william plants to sell every year and there is something which cuts them off at the top of the soil. Some years I lose from 200 to 300. They appear all right and in two or three days they are turned yellow and withered and by taking hold of them I find they are separated at the top of the soil. They are grown in a rich, moist, sandy loam. Will you kindly tell me what is the trouble and what is a good remedy? J. E. B.

Cutworms are probably responsible for your loss of so many sweet williams each year. The soil you speak of should be ideal for the culture of these hardy plants. We would advise liming your soil before you work it over this spring at the rate of 1,000 pounds per acre. The work of cutworms is mainly done at night. You can poison many of them by making a poisoned mash of shorts, molasses and Paris green and dropping it here and there among the plants. The use of lime and soot is also recommended as being a good protection. This can be scattered on the surface and hoed in. C. W.

STARTING CUCUMBERS INSIDE.

When is the best time to plant cucumber seed in the greenhouse to have the plants ready for the field, and what is the proper care for them? Is it better to sow the seed and transplant into 4-inch pots or to plant the seed in the pots? I can get good, sandy sod, but, as I want them extra early, I thought of starting them in the greenhouse first and transplanting into the field. I am located in Indiana. W. C. W.

The time for planting the seed should be three to four weeks before you can plant tender plants out in the field. In your locality I believe you plant tender hothouse plants out early in May, but farther north it is not safe to put out tender plants until Decoration day. It is an excellent plan to plant the seed in flats, lift them carefully as soon as up and pot them into 4-inch pots, two in a pot. If the night temperature cannot well be kept above 60 degrees, it will take four weeks from the date of planting the seed, but in 65 to 68 degrees they will be ready to plant out in three weeks.

A piece of sandy sod ground, properly prepared, makes the finest kind of soil for cucumbers. The plants should not be planted the old way, with four in a hill. They do much better in rows, two plants in a place, two or two and one-half feet apart.

The greatest difficulty in using hothouse-grown plants is that they are liable to be too tall and soft and be ruined the first day or two outside. Therefore, it is better to grow them cool, well ventilated and not too wet. Take pots and all to the field, remove the plants carefully, and plant and water them immediately and carefully. It is best to select a warm, still day and plant late in the day. They will be revived before the next morning and stand the removal much better. A second watering may be necessary. Plant some seed at the same time, so that if part of the plants do not grow you will have some from seed to take their places, and you can hoe off all that are not wanted later. H. G.

INSECTS ON CAULIFLOWER.

I have cauliflower, just beginning to head, on which there are black mites about as thick as hairs and about one-eighth of an inch long. Will they injure the heads of cauliflower, and what will destroy the pests? I have a house sixteen feet high at the ridge, six feet at the gutter and fifty feet wide, planted in lettuce. The house is now running at 42 to 45 degrees at night and 65 degrees on clear days. By leaving the ventilators open to insure a good circulation of air, would it be well to put on a few degrees more heat, making the temperature 50 to 53 degrees at night and 70 degrees on clear days, to push the lettuce along a little faster? E. B.

I have never had any experience with these insects, but understand that they are very injurious to the cauliflower plants in some localities, especially in seasons when there are not many rain storms, which seem to destroy so many of them that they do not get numerous enough to do much harm.

Do not use any arsenical poisons; that would be dangerous business. I think that the small compressed-air sprayers, which hold about three gallons of insecticide, would be good to use on the cauliflower, filling the sprayer with some of the nicotine or tobacco liquid insecticides. A very weak solution will kill all the insects that are wet with it from the fine spray nozzle. These sprayers are an excellent thing for all gardeners to have. The can is filled about two-thirds full of dope, then closed up and pumped up with a bicyle-tire pump, compressing the air so that when the trigger is pulled the pressure forces all the liquid out through the small hose and nozzle.

Perhaps some reader who has had experience in exterminating these cauliflower insects can give E. B. a better remedy.

As to the lettuce temperature, I would advise 45 to 50 degrees as the best night temperature, and 65 degrees on bright days when well ventilated. If you are in a hurry to finish up a crop, the temperature may be run 5 or even 10 degrees warmer, both day and night, without any serious danger, if plenty of ventilation is given. H. G.

FORCING GREEN ONIONS.

A brother florist told me that the best way to grow green onions was to plant what is usually termed "pickle onions." These are the small onions which are grown from seed and are too large to sell as sets the following season. He told me to give them a carnation temperature and to set them in two inches of soil and cover with about one inch. I tried four bushels in this way and the largest onions are not larger than a lead pencil. What is the trouble? Is the temperature too high or did I plant them too close together? I should have added that I set them as close together as I could.

There is a space on the north side of my greenhouse about 25x100 feet. I have been thinking of planting this to onions next spring and cultivating them in the usual way. Next fall I would cover this space with hotbed sash and run a line of steam pipes around the outside. I would let them freeze up and not turn on the steam until about January 1, and in this way I believe I could produce a fine crop of onions and have them harvested before I would need the sash for the hotbeds, which we usually start March 10. Then I could spade up this plot and plant it to onions for next winter's crop. We are going to put up three new houses for onions, radishes and lettuce this coming spring. Will someone please help me out on this subject? I am sure others will be interested. Please say what kind of onions are best to plant. I live in Nebraska. L. M. B.

I prefer the large sets, the same as you used for forcing, but usually get the yellow kinds, as I like them better than the white. Medium sized sets, such as are sold for planting out in gardens in spring, are all right, but the smallest ones are too slow and make too small sprouts for nice green onions. Your temperature was about right, but deeper soil would be better, and I think you probably have the sets a little too close together. Perhaps the place where they are is not as light as it might be, causing them to grow tall and weak.

I think that for growing in frames outside you would do much better to plant these frames to sets (or small onions too large for sets and too small to sell for eating onions), late in the fall, so that they would just get to sprouting before freezing up. Leave the glass off until all chance of good weather is over; then cover them up and leave them until ready to turn on the steam in January, to start them up. I have left them out all winter in this way and started them up without heat in the spring and had a fine crop. At first I was afraid that they would all be killed by the freezing, but they were not hurt.

For the benefit of L. M. B., and any others who missed the articles on radish forcing in the past, I will give in some future issue a complete article on the forcing of radishes in greenhouses.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive aud most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000

The Market.

Trade has been keeping up steadily for the last two or three weeks. Funeral work has been heavy and has used up a big lot of stock. There has also been a good call for decorative stock for weddings and receptions. Several dances lately have used up a big lot of violets, sweet peas and valley. The hardware men's convention, at the Southern hotel last week, made a good demand for carnations as souvenirs and for palms for decorating their booths, etc.

Roses are coming in and they give promise of a good crop for Easter. Carnations are doing finely, and no doubt there will be heavy crops from now on. Violets, sweet peas and valley are fine and find a ready sale. Bulb stock has been moving nicely and there has been no glut at any time. All indications point to a nice lot of it for Easter. Several of the growers report serious trouble with the lily disease and some have thrown out as much as half of their stock, which is a bad showing.

Various Notes.

The dance given by the club February 24 was not the success it should have been, but the date fell on Ash Wednesday, which helped to keep a good many away.

James McKellar, of the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., has been down with appendicitis for the last ten days, but is getting along nicely at present.

William Graff is in Chicago for a few days. J. M.

BUFFALO.

Lent has at once shown its effect on business. Although not so noticeable as in other years, trade has dropped off considerably. Stock, as a result, is plentiful and the usual bulb stock sales have appeared. Funeral work, however, is very heavy and the bulk of the white stock is cleaned up every day.

A trip to Conrad Forbach's found him complaining of a misfortune last week. On one of the cold nights, when firing hard, the flues gave out in one of his boilers, and being protected in no way he lost the stock of two houses. Fortunately, it happened to be his spring stock and not Easter plants. However, the loss was severe enough in addition to the damage to his boiler. R. A. S.

Paris, Tex. — The greenhouses of Charles Cawley, truck farmer, with several thousands of young plants, were destroyed by fire February 14. There was no insurance.

DETROIT.

The Market.

"Pretty brisk" is the general report this week. There has been considerable funeral work and, even though we are now in Lent, the demand for cut stock is good. All stock, from roses and valley to the most common bulbous stock, is moving nicely.

Club Meeting.

Mr. Ellis, of Leamington, Ontario, was unanimously elected a member of the club at the last meeting. The attendance was not so large as was expected, when the fall show was being planned. The preliminary premium list as submitted by Chairman Browne was ordered printed and distributed among the members for further discussion. Messrs. Dilger and Flowerday were requested to submit plans, prices of hall, etc., at the meeting March 14.

One of the belated exhibits for the club's recent carnation show was Baur & Smith's Shasta, and there was no lot of flowers sent that the club would rather have seen on time and in best condition. All reports on this variety are favorable and the delayed train kept many from seeing it.

Various Notes.

A neat florists' wagon appeared upon the streets last week, bearing the name E. C. Fetters in neat gold letters.

Richard Lietz, for some time with the Bemb Floral Co., has embarked in business for himself. He will be found at 774 Woodward avenue, having opened a department in the Northwestern stores.

George Rackham is up and around again.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

Harry Connelly, of Boston, also is with Hoffmeir, who finds the Atlantic City branch of the New York store a success even in winter. A new and stylish wagon was put on the street March 1. The prospects are for a good spring season here.

A new flower store was opened here February 22, under the name of the Newport Flower Shop. The location on the Boardwalk is a good one.

The New Carnation LUCILLE

White overlaid with Pink

A strictly fancy Carnation, possessing all the best qualities of our leading commercial varieties. It commands the highest prices on the market, owing to its beautiful color, size, stem and magnificent form. It is profitable to grow, because its habit and prolificness are all that could be desired, and its keeping qualities are unequaled. $12 per 100, $100 per 1000.

Write for descriptive circular.

A. F. LONGREN, Des Plaines, Ill. HIGHLAND PARK GREENHOUSES, Highland Park, Ill.

New Carnations--1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The color of Mrs. Chas. Knopf is somewhat darker than Enchantress during the winter months. The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal; closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Immediate delivery.

It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100 $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The Lenten season is now on and everyone in the business knew it, as trade dropped off at once, but this is always the case. After a few days, no doubt, it will come all right, as the good weather always brings a good deal of small trade, and as the decorative business was not much this season, anyhow, it will not be missed.

Stock of all kinds is plentiful. Prices got quite a shock, and though flowers are better, prices are lower.

The retail stores are all looking attractive, with the spring flowers and blooming plants. The street stands are all profiting by the cheaper prices and are making a fine show.

Various Notes.

There are some people who evidently have great faith in the flower business, as the following newspaper item shows: "Articles of incorporation were filed February 25 for the United States Floral Co., of Pittsburg, to erect, maintain and operate flower gardens, etc. Incorporators, A. T. Lorch, De Haven, Pa.; H. F. Borchy, Pittsburg; George F. Hofmeister, Carrick. Capital stock, $325,000."

The happiest man in this city today is P. J. Demas, of the Pittsburg Florists' Exchange. The cause was the arrival of a son and heir on Friday, February 26.

Mr. Bruns and Mr. Wienhoeber, of Chicago, were visitors last week.

Hoo-Hoo.

Geneva., N. Y.—Smith & Gannett, who are among the leading florists in this city, have moved into a new store in the Geneva Times building.

Crestline, O.—The Crestline Floral Co., of which J. A. Rosengren is manager, rebuilt its range of greenhouses last summer and now has six short-span houses, each 100 feet long. The material was furnished by the A. Dietsch Co. Mr. Rosengren says that this vicinity has had its share of the hard times and business during the last year has only been fair, but he now sees prospects of greatly increased trade. He grows a general line of stock for local trade.

Single Chrysanthemums
From Seed

I am offering seed of Wells' new early flowering singles, in original sealed packets, at 25c and $1.00 each. These can be sown any time and, planted outside in the spring, will give you bushels of flowers in early fall, or plants can be lifted and potted when in flower.

ALSO

Wells' New Hybrid Pentstemons

This is a new race that shows the most glorious combinations of colors in scarlet, crimson, pink and white. The plants grow 2½ feet high and the flower spike is 18 inches long. No one who has not seen it can form any idea of the brilliant display a bed of these plants presents. No trouble to grow. Simply prick off the seedlings, like asters, and plant outside in May.

Trade packets, 25c and $1.00 each. Hundreds of seeds in a packet.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The supply of all cut flowers is on the increase, but prices have remained stationary, as there were quantities of funeral work in town last week. Shipping trade was also good, which caused a clean market on all good stock, especially white flowers, which were scarce the latter part of the week.

The rose crop is increasing steadily, and one can now be assured of having orders filled by the wholesalers. Lilies, both Harrisii and callas, were picked up clean during the entire week. Violets were unsteady, the call being heavy one day and down flat the next.

Various Notes.

Stewart McLean, of Youngstown, was a visitor last week and reports some good funeral orders lately.

C. Merkel & Son, of Mentor, are sending in some fine azalea plants.

John Kirchner reports some good funeral orders during the last week.

The automobile show used large quantities of flowers. Some dealers used flowers as souvenirs. The White Steamer Co. gave away white carnations each day.

B.

FAIRMOUNT, IND.

E. C. McKeever, Indiana manager of the interests of the Snider Preserve Co., has been in Fairmount looking after the local situation. The company has taken steps which it believes will effectually do away with the shortage of tomato plants which has confronted the growers, both in the Fairmount and Marion fields, for the last two years. Contracts have been made with both the Joseph Shane and Cyrus Doherty greenhouses for the raising of more than one million plants, which will be used for emergency purposes and distributed as needed, to the growers not only in this part of the state but at other points. It is said that the production of tomatoes in this locality was greatly retarded, owing to the farmers being unable last year to get tomato plants after the seed which they sowed had failed to bring forth the desired results, as soon as needed. At the Fairmount factory more than 14,000 feet of lumber is being worked up into hotbeds which will be used exclusively by the two firms in starting tomato plants, and it is said that at least a portion of the seed will be sown not later than March 15.

PREPARE FOR EASTER

FROM WHOM WILL WE PURCHASE OUR EASTER SUPPLY?

This seems now to be the daily talk of every florist. "I know what I am going to do," a wise man remarked the other day. "I have been so often deceived I will be no more, but I shall send in my order direct to our friend Godfrey Aschmann He shall be my man this Easter. He has everything full and plenty and what he advertises is no BLUFF. We can always depend on him to get what we need, and cheap, too. As much as we know, he goes himself to Europe and selects in Belgium the cream of Azaleas, Palms and Araucarias He does all that for the sake of his customers, to please them."

An immense stock of choice Easter plants, blooming Easter week, or earlier, if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment. Come yourself or mail your order direct to headquarters.

Our reputation in growing Easter plants for the wholesale market, to which we ship all over the entire country, Canada and Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Oceans, for many years past, is sufficient guarantee to prove our ability.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas

Azalea Indica is a specialty with us, grown for us under contract by an Azalea specialist in Belgium for the last twenty years. Have three houses full of the choicest. Only best, well-known American varieties are imported, planted in the fall as soon as they arrive from Belgium into 6-in., 7-in and 8-in. pots, placed in greenhouses and kept cool in the winter, and are now in excellent condition, covered with buds, just right for Easter. Please bear in mind the fact (mostly unknown to some azalea consumers) that fully 30 per cent to 40 per cent of the newly imported azaleas in dormant state will lose their buds and leaves during sea voyage and during winter up to February 1, and have to be kept over for another year. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers, and, therefore, you can't expect an azalea at this time as big and as cheap as if you would buy them in dormant state in the fall.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Van der Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tip-top condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade. All sizes in the following prices—75c, $1.00 $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Bernard Andrea alba (white). We have mostly big plants, $1.50, $2.00, $3.00 to $3.50 each; a few smaller sizes, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25. Niobe, also white, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Vervaeneana, De Schryveriana (double variegated), 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Dr. Moore and Memoire de L. Van Houtte (double pink), $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Professeur Wolters, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Empress of India, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Apollo (red), 50c. 60c, 75c to $1.00. Other good varieties, such as John Llewellyn, Empereur du Bresil, Talisman, Helene Thelemann, Juliette, etc., 75c, $1.00 to $1.25. When we are out of one color, we send the next similar color; also, if we are out of the size ordered, we send the next size either above or below the price mentioned.

Easter Lilies, Lilium Multiflorum, the genuine Japanese Easter Lily, directly imported by us. We have a friend in Japan who looks after our interests there. He picks out for us only the good, healthy ones, and marks them while they are growing, the 10-in. bulbs, and therefore he ships to us the cream of the plants of Japan. We have lilies this year to burn; can supply, if nothing happens, every customer and others who want lilies. If you see them growing in our greenhouses you must all admit they are "crackerjacks." We sell them cheap, too. Where other florists get 15c per bud, we only charge you 10c per bud, for plants in 6-in. pots, having 5, 8, 10 and more buds to the plant. Plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud, 6-in. pots.

Tournesol Tulips, best double tulips, variegated, three bulbs in a pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $14 00 per 100.

Begonia, new, improved Erfordii, 5-in. pots, $2.50 per dozen. Flambeau, 5-in., $2.00 per dozen.

Primula obconica, 5-in., $2.00 to $2.50 dozen.

Yellow and White Daisies, 5-in. pots, $2.00 dozen.

Cineraria Hybrida, best plants, 4-in. pots, $10.00 per 100; 5¼ to 6-in. pots, for Easter, at $3.00, $4.00 to $5 00 per dozen.

Spiraea Gladstone. We have a house full in very fine condition, in bud now, just right for Easter, large plants, full of buds. Remember Gladstone is scarce this year, owing to the dry weather in Holland last year, but we were fortunate to have received enough to supply all of our customers; price, 6 to 7-in. pots. 50c, 75c, $1.00.

Superba, Japonica, Floribunda, 6-in. pots, 25c to 50c.

Jerusalem Cherries for Washington's birthday, 6-in. pots, full of berries, 35c. 50c to 75c.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moonflower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5 00 per 100.

Hyacinths, four best colors, King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, in cold frame, 4-in. pots, 10c to 12c.

Daffodil Von Sion, best double, three bulbs, $2.50 per doz.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful evergreen decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 19th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, 7 to 8-in. pots, 4 to 5 years old, 3, 4 and 5 tiers, 20, 25 and 30 inches high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca. This is a beautiful blue variety, very graceful and beautiful. Specimen plants, 6-in., 7-in., 8-in. pots, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25, 30 and 32 in. high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 6-in. pots, 20, 25, 30 and 35 in. high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. Can meet all applications.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in. pots, 3 plants in a pot, 25c.

Ficus Elastica (rubbers), 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25c, 30c, 40c and 50c.

Two houses of ferns. Whitmani ferns, 8-in. to 9-in. pans, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50; 7-in. pots, very large, $1.25 to $1.50.

Boston Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. pots. 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Scottii Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. 40c, 50c, 75c. $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Amerpohlii, very fine, 6-in., 50c to 75c.

Wilsoni in pans, 35c.

Asparagus Plumosus, large, 3-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5 good leaves, 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c and 75c; 4-in., 35c.

Kentia Forsteriana, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25, 30, 40 to 45 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each; 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 20 to 25 in. high, 50c to 60c.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The supply of all cut flowers is on the increase, but prices have remained stationary, as there were quantities of funeral work in town last week. Shipping trade was also good, which caused a clean market on all good stock, especially white flowers, which were scarce the latter part of the week.

The rose crop is increasing steadily, and one can now be assured of having orders filled by the wholesalers. Lilies, both Harrisii and callas, were picked up clean during the entire week. Violets were unsteady, the call being heavy one day and down flat the next.

Various Notes.

Stewart McLean, of Youngstown, was a visitor last week and reports some good funeral orders lately.

C. Merkel & Son, of Mentor, are sending in some fine azalea plants.

John Kirchner reports some good funeral orders during the last week.

The automobile show used large quantities of flowers. Some dealers used flowers as souvenirs. The White Steamer Co. gave away white carnations each day.

B.

FAIRMOUNT, IND.

E. C. McKeever, Indiana manager of the interests of the Snider Preserve Co., has been in Fairmount looking after the local situation. The company has taken steps which it believes will effectually do away with the shortage of tomato plants which has confronted the growers, both in the Fairmount and Marion fields, for the last two years. Contracts have been made with both the Joseph Shane and Cyrus Doherty greenhouses for the raising of more than one million plants, which will be used for emergency purposes and distributed as needed, to the growers not only in this part of the state but at other points. It is said that the production of tomatoes in this locality was greatly retarded, owing to the farmers being unable last year to get tomato plants after the seed which they sowed had failed to bring forth the desired results, as soon as needed. At the Fairmount factory more than 14,000 feet of lumber is being worked up into hotbeds which will be used exclusively by the two firms in starting tomato plants, and it is said that at least a portion of the seed will be sown not later than March 15.

PREPARE FOR EASTER

FROM WHOM WILL WE PURCHASE OUR EASTER SUPPLY?

This seems now to be the daily talk of every florist. "I know what I am going to do," a wise man remarked the other day. "I have been so often deceived I will be no more, but I shall send in my order direct to our friend Godfrey Aschmann. He shall be my man this Easter. He has everything full and plenty and what he advertises is no BLUFF. We can always depend on him to get what we need, and cheap, too. As much as we know, he goes himself to Europe and selects in Belgium the cream of Azaleas, Palms and Araucarias. He does all that for the sake of his customers, to please them."

An immense stock of choice Easter plants, blooming Easter week, or earlier, if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment. Come yourself or mail your order direct to headquarters.

Our reputation in growing Easter plants for the wholesale market, to which we ship all over the entire country, Canada and Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Oceans, for many years past, is sufficient guarantee to prove our ability.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas

Azalea Indica is a specialty with us, grown for us under contract by an Azalea specialist in Belgium for the last twenty years. Have three houses full of the choicest. Only best well-known American varieties are imported, planted in the fall as soon as they arrive from Belgium into 6-in., 7-in and 8 in. pots, placed in greenhouses and kept cool in the winter, and are now in excellent condition, covered with buds, just right for Easter. Please bear in mind the fact (mostly unknown to some azalea consumers) that fully 30 per cent to 40 per cent of the newly imported azaleas in dormant state will lose their buds and leaves during sea voyage and during winter up to February 1, and have to be kept over for another year. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers, and, therefore, you can't expect an azalea at this time as big and as cheap as if you would buy them in dormant state in the fall.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Van der Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tip-top condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade. All sizes in the following prices—75c, $1.00 $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Bernard Andrea alba (white). We have mostly big plants, $1.50, $2.00, $3.00 to $3.50 each; a few smaller sizes, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25. Niobe, also white, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Vervaeneana, De Schryveriana (double variegated), 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Dr. Moore and Memoire de L. Van Houtte (double pink), $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Professeur Wolters, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Empress of India, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Apollo (red), 50c, 60c, 75c to $1.00. Other good varieties, such as John Llewellyn, Empereur du Bresil, Talisman, Helene Thelemann, Juliette, etc., 75c, $1.00 to $1.25. When we are out of one color, we send the next similar color; also, if we are out of the size ordered, we send the next size either above or below the price mentioned.

Easter Lilies, Lilium Multiflorum, the genuine Japanese Easter Lily, directly imported by us. We have a friend in Japan who looks after our interests there. He picks out for us only the good, healthy ones, and marks them while they are growing, the 10-in. bulbs, and therefore he ships to us the cream of the plants of Japan. We have lilies this year to burn; can supply, if nothing happens, every customer and others who want lilies. If you see them growing in our greenhouses you must all admit they are "crackerjacks." We sell them cheap, too. Where other florists get 15c per bud, we only charge you 10c per bud, for plants in 6-in. pots, having 5, 8, 10 and more buds to the plant. Plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud, 6-in. pots.

Tournesol Tulips, best double tulips, variegated, three bulbs in a pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $14.00 per 100.

Begonia, new, improved Erfordii, 5-in. pots, $2.50 per dozen. Flambeau, 5-in., $2.00 per dozen.

Primula obconica, 5-in., $2.00 to $2.50 dozen.

Yellow and White Daisies, 5-in. pots, $2.00 dozen.

Cineraria Hybrida, best plants, 4-in. pots, $10.00 per 100; 5¼ to 6-in. pots, for Easter, at $3.00, $4.00 to $5.00 per dozen.

Spiraea Gladstone. We have a house full in very fine condition, in bud now, just right for Easter, large plants, full of buds. Remember Gladstone is scarce this year, owing to the dry weather in Holland last year, but we were fortunate to have received enough to supply all of our customers; price, 6 to 7-in. pots 50c, 75c, $1.00. Superba, Japonica, Floribunda, 6-in. pots, 25c to 50c.

Jerusalem Cherries for Washington's birthday, 6-in. pots, full of berries, 35c, 50c to 75c.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moon flower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Hyacinths, four best colors, King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, in cold frame, 4-in. pots, 10c to 12c.

Daffodil Von Sion, best double, three bulbs, $2.50 per doz.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful evergreen decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 19th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, 7 to 8-in. pots, 4 to 5 years old, 3, 4 and 5 tiers, 20, 25 and 30 inches high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca. This is a beautiful blue variety, very graceful and beautiful. Specimen plants, 6-in., 7-in., 8-in. pots, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25, 30 and 32 in. high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 6-in. pots, 20, 25, 30 and 35 in. high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. Can meet all applications.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in. pots, 3 plants in a pot, 25c.

Ficus Elastica (rubbers), 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25c, 30c, 40c and 50c.

Two houses of ferns. Whitmani ferns, 8-in. to 9-in. pans, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50; 7-in. pots, very large, $1.25 to $1.50.

Boston Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Scottii Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Amerpohlii, very fine, 6-in., 50c to 75c.

Wilsoni in pans, 35c.

Asparagus Plumosus, large, 3-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5 good leaves, 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c and 75c; 4-in. 35c.

Kentia Forsteriana, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25, 30, 40 to 45 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each; 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 20 to 25 in. high, 50c to 60c.

Hydrangea Otaksa, for Easter, pot-grown, 6 to 7 in., 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

Please state if you want stock shipped in or out of pots.

All bulbs are now under cover in cold frame and will bloom in two weeks from time of bringing them in the greenhouse

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

The cut flower trade here is good. Carnations are of good quality and retail at 50 cents, 60 cents and 75 cents per dozen, the last price being for special stock. Roses are of fairly good quality; they retail at $1.50 and $2 per dozen. Violets are coming in quite plentifully just now; they retail at 75 cents and $1 per hundred blooms. Sweet peas retail at $1 per hundred blooms.

A good supply of bulb stuff is now on hand. Paper Whites, tulips and narcissi, both single and double, retail at 50 cents per dozen.

Various Notes.

William P. Peirce, on Union street, had an attractive window display last Saturday. Julius Rosiztsky is the efficient manager here.

E. H. Chamberlain had some nice sweet peas last week.

A. B. Hathaway has a fine crop of single violets on just now. He finds a ready sale for these. He is cutting some nice sweet peas.

Everyone is getting ready for Easter here. We have had very mild weather here this winter. W. L.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

The Leedle Rosary Co. has been authorized by the secretary of state to increase its capital stock from $10,000 to $20,000. This will be for the purpose of erecting one or two additional houses at its plant, in which Bride, Maid and Rhea Reid are now being successfully grown. In addition to supplying the local market with cut roses, this company has been shipping its product to Chicago, Pittsburg, Cincinnati and other cities and nearby towns. Carnations are also being grown in one house, but future effort is likely to be confined to roses exclusively as a specialty.

Harry Reeser, who disposed of his place some months ago, has purchased four acres of land and will reënter the florists' business.

The mail order trade of the catalogue houses is now in full sway and working forces are being rapidly increased to take care of the spring business. The wholesale growers are also receiving large and frequent orders from catalogue houses throughout the country for roses and various kinds of plants. Ge Dale.

Parma, Mich.—F. G. Hubert is establishing the first greenhouse business in this town. Work was begun last fall and lettuce and other vegetables are being grown, but by next season the plant will be in general florists' stock.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

The cut flower trade here is good. Carnations are of good quality and retail at 50 cents, 60 cents and 75 cents per dozen, the last price being for special stock. Roses are of fairly good quality; they retail at $1.50 and $2 per dozen. Violets are coming in quite plentifully just now; they retail at 75 cents and $1 per hundred blooms. Sweet peas retail at $1 per hundred blooms.

A good supply of bulb stuff is now on hand. Paper Whites, tulips and narcissi, both single and double, retail at 50 cents per dozen.

Various Notes.

William P. Peirce, on Union street, had an attractive window display last Saturday. Julius Rosiztsky is the efficient manager here.

E. H. Chamberlain had some nice sweet peas last week.

A. B. Hathaway has a fine crop of single violets on just now. He finds a ready sale for these. He is cutting some nice sweet peas.

Everyone is getting ready for Easter here. We have had very mild weather here this winter. W. L.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

The Leedle Rosary Co. has been authorized by the secretary of state to increase its capital stock from $10,000 to $20,000. This will be for the purpose of erecting one or two additional houses at its plant, in which Bride, Maid and Rhea Reid are now being successfully grown. In addition to supplying the local market with cut roses, this company has been shipping its product to Chicago, Pittsburg, Cincinnati and other cities and nearby towns. Carnations are also being grown in one house, but future effort is likely to be confined to roses exclusively as a specialty.

Harry Reeser, who disposed of his place some months ago, has purchased four acres of land and will reënter the florists' business.

The mail order trade of the catalogue houses is now in full sway and working forces are being rapidly increased to take care of the spring business. The wholesale growers are also receiving large and frequent orders from catalogue houses throughout the country for roses and various kinds of plants. GE DALE.

PARMA, MICH.—F. G. Hubert is establishing the first greenhouse business in this town. Work was begun last fall and lettuce and other vegetables are being grown, but by next season the plant will be in general florists' stock.

DENVER.

The Market.

The business last week was fair. There was an increasing supply of almost all stock, but as a rule everything cleaned up well. American Beauty roses were a little more plentiful, but as yet the quality of the medium-stemmed ones is not up to the mark. Tea roses are in good supply, but there has been no particular glut in any line. It is probable that the nearest approach to a surplus is in carnations, with no extraordinary demand, the prices falling on that account. Violets are plentiful, but the price remains the same, with a good call.

The beginning of the Lenten season will diminish the requirements for social uses of flowers and decoration, but the usual succession of small affairs, receptions, teas, etc., will probably keep business about on a level.

No Flower Trust.

The following article appeared in one of our morning papers. While there has been some talk on the subject, it is not settled by any means, and likely will not be:

Florists of Denver are endeavoring to organize a clearing house to limit the supply of certain flowers and establish permanency in prices, according to reports on the streets yesterday.

It was said that the organization could not be completed until it was ascertained if the Columbine Floral Company, owned by Mrs. Mary Elitch Long, would come into the organization. Mrs. Long and her husband, Thomas D. Long, are in New York, getting together a stock company for Elitch's gardens theater next summer. Until they return it will not be known if their company will come in.

Elitch's gardens greenhouses are among the largest in the country. They do both a retail and a wholesale business. It is considered exceedingly important that they be in the organization if it is to be made a success.

It is asserted by some florists that prices in Denver are considerably lower than in Eastern cities. Each of the fifty florists in town makes his own prices. The result is a constant changing of prevailing prices on the most-sought-after flowers, the flower men complain. It is pointed out that violets, which are constantly in demand, are subjected to changing prices because small dealers seek to attract business by making a low price.

It is said that not only is it proposed to have a maintenance of prices, but it is also suggested that the florists form a close combination, which will result in all the florists being practically one company. It is understood this proposition does not meet with the approval of the larger companies. It is reported that Long, before leaving for the East, said he would not come into any organization on a pro rata basis, such as is proposed. It is believed this decision by him will prevent the formation of a trust.

One florist said the principal object of the proposed organization would be to prevent knifing on big jobs—that is, bidding at unprofitable prices for extensive decorations, which, it is said, is now done.

MADISON, IND.—Ferdinand and William Hitz have about 30,000 square feet in their greenhouses at North Madison. They heat with a home-made apparatus operated by gas. Business is reported good.

CARNATIONS.

other diseases. Among the diseases, perhaps the most destructive along this line is stigmonose. This disease will slowly but surely destroy any variety if not taken in hand in the early stages.

No, mild, sunny weather in midwinter would not necessarily soften carnation growth, if ventilation is abundant enough to keep the temperature right. The trouble is that when the weather is mild in midwinter, it is not usually sunny, but on the contrary generally is cloudy; just the kind of weather to soften growth. We have always found that a winter with considerable cold, zero weather is apt to have many clear days, and growth is firm, with good texture in the petals of the blooms. Mild winters are just the contrary, and complaints of soft blooms are more general.

I believe the weakness of the new breaks may be ascribed largely to the heavy cut you had earlier. You will usually find this the case when a heavy crop is finished during the dark midwinter days. In March or April it would not be so pronounced, as the growth naturally comes stronger at that time. I have often repeated the statement that it is wise to avoid extremely heavy crops if you wish a steady cut of even quality through the whole season. The nature of your trade, however, must determine that for you. You should not have fed those plants any liquid. You should have allowed them to break slowly, and after the breaks began to push up would have been the proper time for feeding, if it were needed at all. Run the house cool and airy until the growth looks robust and vigorous and cut out the feed. Scratch over the surface of the soil, and if you have some air-slaked lime sprinkle on a little before the scratching is done. This will have a tendency to harden the growth. A. F. J. B.

INSIDE OR OUTSIDE CULTURE?

I should like to know if all the following varieties of carnations can be planted out in the field in the spring and lifted again July 15 to August 1, or if some of them must be grown under glass all summer: White Perfection, Winsor, Beacon, Victory, White and Variegated Lawson. Please advise me what temperature to grow the above varieties in. E. A. M.

There is no good reason why you should not plant all these varieties in the field until you wish to replant at the time you mention. All of them can also be grown inside all summer, with good results. That leads you up to the question of which method is preferable, which I will not discuss at length at this time.

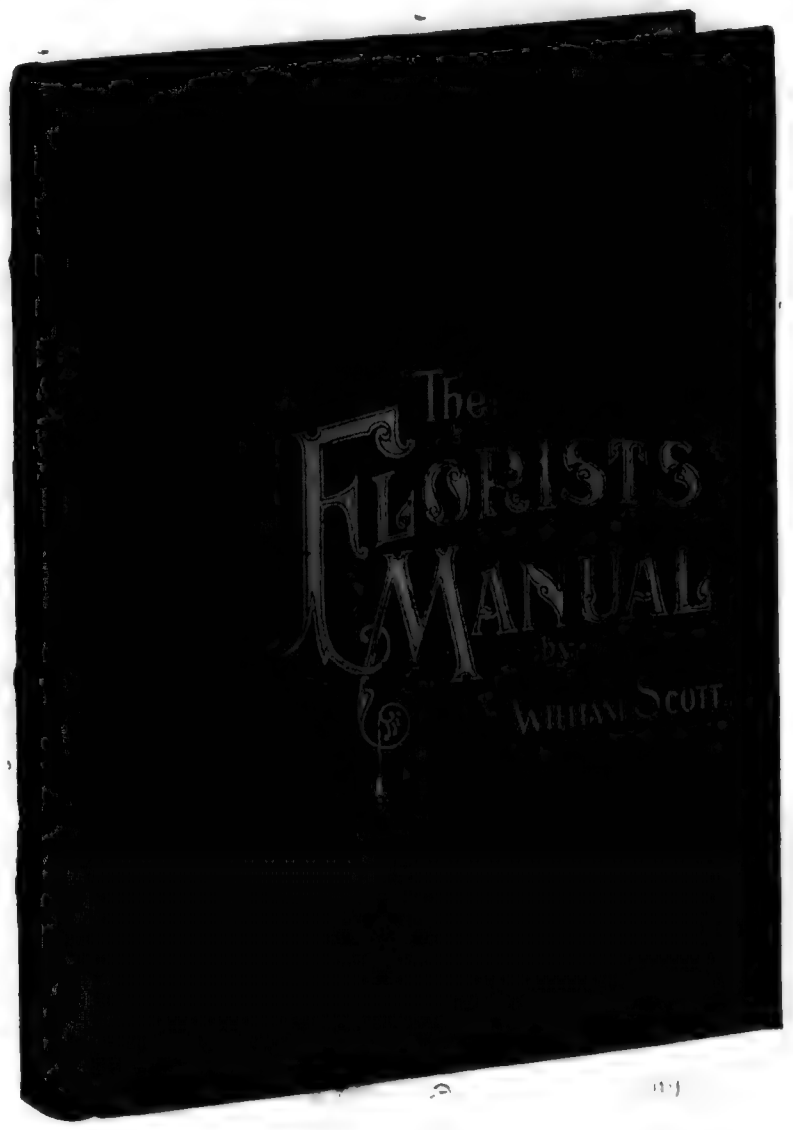
Personally, we prefer to plant all our carnation stock in the field, even if it is only for two months, and you will find most growers of the same opinion. Occasionally you will find a grower who will argue in favor of inside culture, basing his argument on theory and without having tried it. After trying the inside culture he usually returns to the field growing method. That is one of the strongest arguments any method could wish for.

Grow White Perfection, Beacon and Victory in a temperature of about 50 to 52 degrees at night; Winsor, White and Variegated Lawson 2 degrees warmer, with the usual raise during the daytime.
A. F. J. B.

BUDS TURN YELLOW.

Enclosed you will find buds of White Perfection and Lady Bountiful. I should like to know what is the matter. All my carnation buds are turning yellow.
J. D.

Two of the buds forwarded seem to be affected with fairy ring. The others, however, seem to be simply blasted. We notice occasionally that on Lady Bountiful a bud will blast, apparently without cause. For this I can suggest no remedy. It might be caused by the carnation mite, but we have never been able to find the eggs which usually accompany this trouble.



For the fairy ring I would suggest Bordeaux mixture, used regularly once each week. Keep the plants dry overhead, except for the Bordeaux treatment, and remove any mulch or other material which would tend to produce a stagnant, foul atmosphere. Take your sulphur blower and fill the house with Grape Dust a couple of times each week. Also drop a little sulphur on a steam pipe here and there. Give ventilation abundantly. In fact, do all you can to promote a sturdy growth, but avoid excessive feeding until you are rid of the disease. A. F. J. B.

Greenhouse Heating.

When a question regarding greenhouse heating fails to state any of the particulars as to height of walls, height of ridge, amount of glass in sides, exposure, etc., it is impossible to reply as exactly as might be done if all the details were furnished.

FOUR PARALLEL HOUSES.

I am contemplating building four houses, each 25x200 feet. I will have a 12-foot driveway between the second and third houses. I will build them seven feet high at the eaves and use 16-foot rafters, with three feet of siding and four feet of glass on the sides, making a total area of 28,000 square feet of glass and 2,700 square feet of siding.

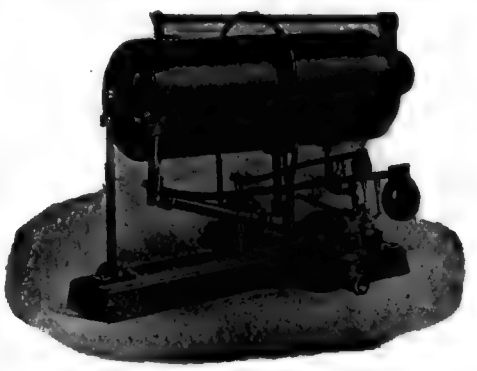
The houses will run east and west, and I intend to place my boiler on the north side of the houses, in the center of the range, 100 feet from each end, and run my main directly across the center of the range. I had thought of using a riser of sufficient size, probably 2-inch or 2½-inch, directly under the ridge of each house, and twenty 1¼-inch returns, the risers to branch east and west in each house. I would prefer, however, to use ten or twelve 1¼-inch risers and the same number of 1¼-inch returns, as I have any amount of 1¼-inch pipe and have none of the larger size. I would use a 4-inch main and reduce one size as I leave each house. I intend to raise the main to a height of seven feet, just under the eaves. The dome of my boiler will be one or two feet below the level of the greenhouse floors. Could I return the condensation without the aid of a steam trap or vacuum pump?

My location is middle Tennessee, and at times the temperature reaches 10 degrees below zero, but very seldom; our coldest weather, as a rule, is zero. I will build a footway enclosing the main pipe where it passes through the 12-foot driveway. Where should I enter the boiler with my return main and what size of pipe should I use for it? I want to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees.

L. H. & S.

With a plant arranged as you propose, the installation consisting of a 6-inch riser to where the flow pipes are taken off for the first house (the main flow pipes in each house to be 2½-inch), and continued to the middle of the third house with 4-inch and from there to the middle of the last house with 2½-inch, each house can be easily cared for on a 60-degree basis with seventeen 1¼-inch returns. The main return had better be built up from 1½-inch in the most distant house to 3-inch from the last house to the boiler. This should enter the boiler by an opening on the underside of the shed, near the rear end. L. C. C.

A PLUMBER'S PLAN.



A plumber writes to the Plumbers' Trade Journal as follows:

"I have a customer who desires to install a steam-heating apparatus in a greenhouse 250 feet long by forty feet wide, and having had no experience in greenhouse heating, I would be pleased to have your advice on the same, which will no doubt be of interest to your many readers also. The rafters each side of ridge are twenty-four feet long and there is two feet six inches of glass on each vertical side, with two feet six inches of double boarding and paper on each side under the glass. My customer wants the temperature 58 degrees when the mercury outside is at zero. He wants to use two steam boilers, which are to be placed in a cellar eight feet below the greenhouse floor, at the north end, and insists that all pipes be under the benches. He will not consider placing an overhead system main in the greenhouse. He wants a main flow to run across the ends of the benches, with a loop of 1¼-inch pipe under each of six benches, one flow and one return under each bench, and three 1¼-inch pipes on each side wall. Will there be dry steam in the coils? The benches are only two feet high from the bottom of the bench to the floor and the house runs level. Will the eighteen 1¼-inch pipes heat the house to 58 degrees in zero weather with two pounds steam pressure at the boilers? W. J. E.''

The house heating expert of the plumbers' paper says:

''It is impossible for anyone not on the ground to determine the quantity of surface necessary to maintain a given temperature in greenhouses, because of the wide variation in the construction and location. Those concerns who make a business of building and equipping greenhouses complete, can make very close calculations as to the quantity of surface required to maintain any given temperature, for the reason that they know exactly the construction, location and exposure. Those who have had a wide experience in furnishing heating apparatus for greenhouses of various construction and varying localities have learned that two houses may be of the same size and yet one may require fifty per cent more heating surface than the other.

''Now, there are approximately 13,250 square feet of glass in this greenhouse, and if one square foot of radiation is apportioned to offset the cooling influence of four square feet of glass, it would give 3,312 square feet of radiation, or 7,650 linear feet of 1¼-inch pipe. Of course, this may be too much radiation, but, on the other hand, we are inclined to think that eighteen 1¼-inch pipes is too little. Arrangements should be made with the owner to put in a given amount of surface for a given sum, leaving openings for additional pipe if it is required. Then if the quantities are found insufficient, it is only fair that the owner should pay for any additional surface required. In this way, he is only paying for what he receives.

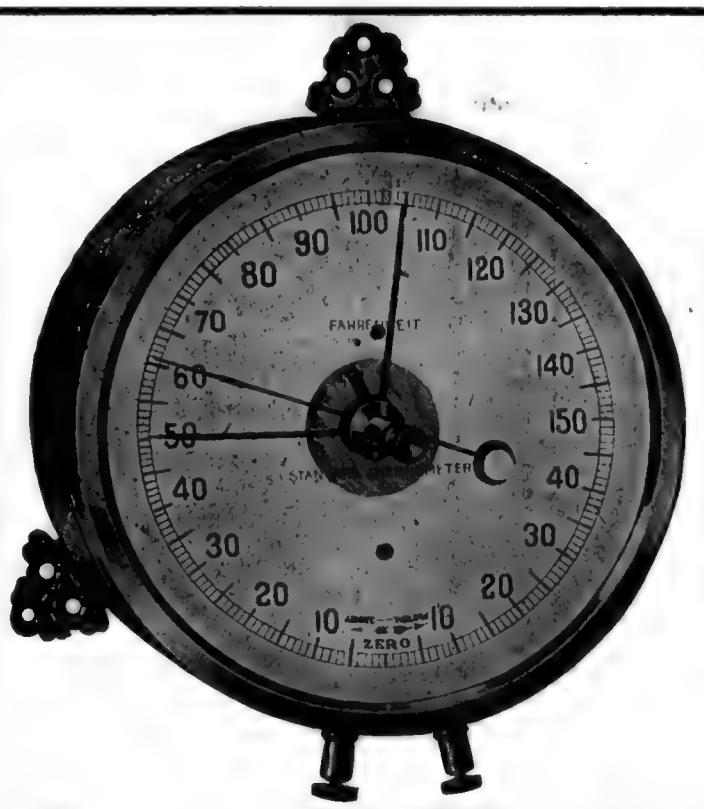
''Our correspondent may consider this rather an unsatisfactory answer, but it is the only fair answer that can be given. It is easy enough to specify a quantity of radiation which we are sure will heat the building, but in doing so there is likely to be fifty per cent more than is really necessary.

"The apparatus will deliver dry steam to the coils, providing the outlets from the steam dome are of sufficient size. As two boilers are to be used, we would connect two 5-inch risers to each steam dome, and these four 5-inch pipes will connect into one 5-inch supply. One and one-half inch will be sufficient size for the main return. A 4-inch supply pipe would be sufficient, but because of the prejudice existing in regard to reduced pipe sizes, it will probably be better to use a 5-inch main, simply to prevent adverse criticism.

"If these boilers are connected with one 5-inch pipe from each boiler, the water will be carried into the radiation by the velocity of the outgoing steam, and nothing can prevent it. If the tappings in the boiler are not 5-inch, it will be necessary to use three 4-inch connections to each boiler and connect into the 5-inch main."

My attention has been called to the directions for heating a greenhouse 40x250 feet, with steam, given in the Plumbers' Trade Journal, page 392. This is a sample of hundreds of cases of specifications supplied to greenhouse builders by practical plumbers, men who no doubt know how to run a sewer or wipe a lead joint, but without any idea of the problems involved in greenhouse heating. The statement that eighteen 1¼-inch pipes are too few is well taken, but the suggestion to use 7,650 lineal feet of 1¼-inch pipe is quite as wide of the mark, 5,750 lineal feet being more nearly the correct amount. The constant used (four square feet of glass for one square foot of radiation) is the constant for hot water at 180 degrees, when a house temperature of 70 degrees is desired. The constant which should have been used for steam with a temperature of 58 degrees is six, which, it will be noted, makes a decided difference in the amount of pipe to be installed.



The builder is unwise in this case in requiring a plan which places all the pipes under the benches. Overhead flows carried along the purlins would have given much better satisfaction. With hot water, the plan would work, without doubt, but it will give trouble with steam. Two 2-inch flow pipes carried along the purlins from the boiler to the far end of the house, each to feed eleven 1¼-inch returns, will be all that is required. L. C. C.

The Market.

Business remains about the same as in the previous week. Roses are of good quality and are cleaned up well. Carnations have a satisfactory demand. Bulbous stock is of good quality and meets with ready sales. Freesias of fairly good quality are on the market. Sweet peas are good and sell readily.

Several large funerals the last two weeks cleaned out quantities of cut flowers. Much stock is being shipped to the small neighboring towns. Violets are becoming more plentiful and there will be an abundance of them from now on until Easter. All the florists are busy with Easter and spring stock. It seems as if stock of some kinds will be scarce this year for Easter.

Various Notes.

David C. Frost, the seedsman who died in Louisville, Ky., recently, was buried here last week. Mr. Frost had been in the seed business here for several years. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful.

Honaker is shipping quantities of cut flowers out of town.

Keller Bros. are cutting good roses and carnations. Their violets are also good.

The Michler Bros. Co., Anderson & White and S. S. Kelley are busy with spring stock at their places.

E. T. Grave, of Richmond, Ind., was a recent visitor here.

Emil Fredrich, of Mt. Sterling, Ky., was in town last week and reports a fairly good business at his place. He says he has as good a lot of specimen plants as there are in the state. His 9,000 square feet of glass are devoted to plants and carnations. He says another house will be built the coming summer and the old houses will all be remodeled at his place. Mr. Fredrich is the originator of several geraniums and has another new one that will be heard from in the future. BLUE GRASS.

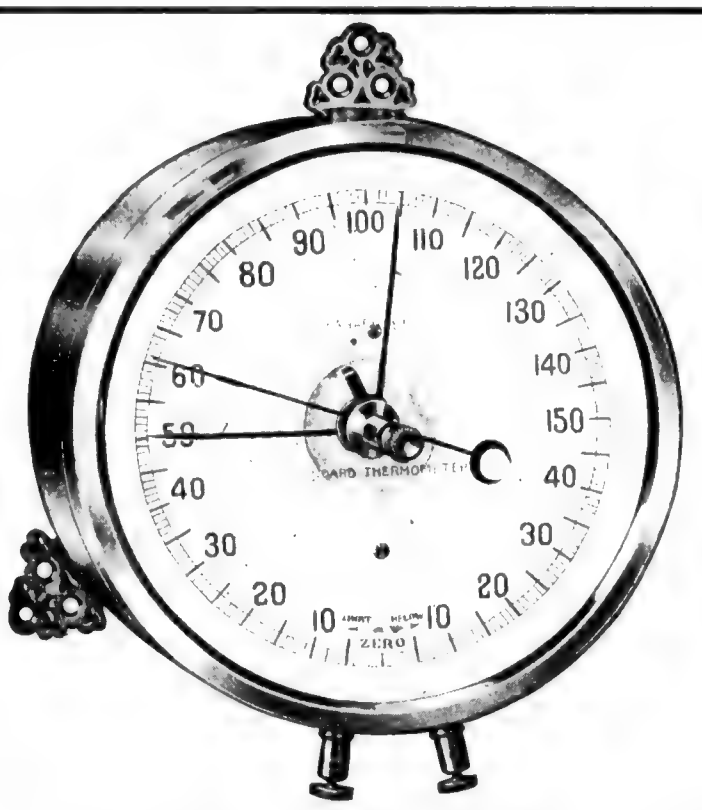
rather an unsatisfactory answer, but it is the only fair answer that can be given. It is easy enough to specify a quantity of radiation which we are sure will heat the building, but in doing so there is likely to be fifty per cent more than is really necessary.

"The apparatus will deliver dry steam to the coils, providing the outlets from the steam dome are of sufficient size. As two boilers are to be used, we would connect two 5-inch risers to each steam dome, and these four 5-inch pipes will connect into one 5-inch supply. One and one-half inch will be sufficient size for the main return. A 4-inch supply pipe would be sufficient, but because of the prejudice existing in regard to reduced pipe sizes, it will probably be better to use a 5-inch main, simply to prevent adverse criticism.

"If these boilers are connected with one 5-inch pipe from each boiler, the water will be carried into the radiation by the velocity of the outgoing steam, and nothing can prevent it. If the tappings in the boiler are not 5-inch, it will be necessary to use three 4-inch connections to each boiler and connect into the 5-inch main."

My attention has been called to the directions for heating a greenhouse 40x250 feet, with steam, given in the Plumbers' Trade Journal, page 392. This is a sample of hundreds of cases of specifications supplied to greenhouse builders by practical plumbers, men who no doubt know how to run a sewer or wipe a lead joint, but without any idea of the problems involved in greenhouse heating. The statement that eighteen 1¼-inch pipes are too few is well taken, but the suggestion to use 7,650 lineal feet of 1¼-inch pipe is quite as wide of the mark, 5,750 lineal feet being more nearly the correct amount. The constant used (four square feet of glass for one square foot of radiation) is the constant for hot water at 180 degrees, when a house temperature of 70 degrees is desired. The constant which should have been used for steam with a temperature of 58 degrees is six, which, it will be noted, makes a decided difference in the amount of pipe to be installed.



The builder is unwise in this case in requiring a plan which places all the pipes under the benches. Overhead flows carried along the purlins would have given much better satisfaction. With hot water, the plan would work, without doubt, but it will give trouble with steam. Two 2-inch flow pipes carried along the purlins from the boiler to the far end of the house, each to feed eleven 1¼-inch returns, will be all that is required. L. C. C.

The Market.

Business remains about the same as in the previous week. Roses are of good quality and are cleaned up well. Carnations have a satisfactory demand. Bulbous stock is of good quality and meets with ready sales. Freesias of fairly good quality are on the market. Sweet peas are good and sell readily.

Several large funerals the last two weeks cleaned out quantities of cut flowers. Much stock is being shipped to the small neighboring towns. Violets are becoming more plentiful and there will be an abundance of them from now on until Easter. All the florists are busy with Easter and spring stock. It seems as if

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Boom Banquet.

The much talked about "boom banquet" has been held and was a grand success. It was more; it was a revelation and its primary object has been achieved. Nearly 2,800 business men of this city, representing all lines of commerce and industry, sat down to dinner at the same time and in the same hall. It was the largest dinner gathering ever held in this country, and as a result the merchants, manufacturers, financiers and professional men have been actively enlisted in "pushing" Providence, with a view to making it a "bigger, better and busier" place.

In this movement the representatives of the florists' business are by no means backward. Through the Rhode Island Florists' and Gardeners' Club, all the cut flowers and potted plants used in the decoration of the tables, of which there were more than 225, and the hall, were donated by the florists. One table was arranged directly in front of the speakers' table, for the members of the club and others of the trade in attendance. The committee of florists having the decorations in charge was headed by James B. Canning, as chairman, and Robert Johnston, secretary.

Various Notes.

The body of Dr. William T. Bull, of Newport, reached that city Friday morning from New York. As it rested in a special baggage car attached to the regular train, the casket was completely hidden from view by the mass of flowers piled upon it, and a second baggage car was crammed to the roof with blossoms.

Saturday was a veritable violet day, 15 cents being the ruling price.

The Shepard Co., in its department store, has opened a flower department, with cut flowers, potted stock and funeral work.

Lawrence Hay, of East Providence, is cutting a good crop of sweet peas.

John A. Macrae has fully recovered from a bad felon on the end of his right thumb.

Fred Barker, of Warren, brought in 20,000 fine Princess violets on Saturday. He has four houses, all in violets, and is now picking from 5,000 to 10,000 blooms daily.

C. H. Hunt is propagating several large beds of bedding plants, which are looking fine.

William M. Crompton, of East Greenwich, has more than 500 roots of callas, some of which are thirty years old. They are all in tubs and are yielding enough to practically supply the demands of this market. W. H. M.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The Lenten season, now fully under way, has not as yet seemed to interfere much with the demand for cut flowers. There is a little shading of prices, but the growers are not complaining, except to wish that they had more stock to offer. This is especially true of roses, which seem to be a little shy on blooms. Carnations are arriving in large quantities, and a large number were carried over from Saturday. They have maintained a more uniform price this season and have been a good paying crop.

Daffodils have sold well this season, but the time has arrived when their prices must be cut, as they must now be handled alongside of the southern stock, which has arrived this week in enormous quantities. Violets are to be had at 10 cents per bunch of twenty-five. One of the largest drug stores had 25,000 on sale Saturday and was selling them at 19 cents for twenty-five, and these were the best grade of violets seen in Baltimore this winter.

Various Notes.

Harry Ekas is erecting a new house, 16x120, for general stock, at his place on the Frederick road. He has a fine specimen of freesia, which was found among a shipment of Purity and which seems to be a good thing. It is more compact and is considered good as a pot plant.

The election of officers of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be held on Monday, March 8. The annual banquet, also, will be held after the election, at the Hotel Caswell. It will be one of the best attended banquets ever held, according to the return postals. Q.

"ASK THE MAN WHO HAS ONE" about

King Iron Frame Greenhouses

No other type of greenhouse construction has been received by the trade with such flattering approval. Houses of this type, either in the course of construction or erected, cover a ground area of over five acres. Let us talk to you about it.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

There is nothing especially stirring in the way of business. The last week was hardly up to the week before it. Of course the beginning of Lent has had a great deal to do with that. It looks as if Lent will make itself felt a great deal this year. The market is quiet and there is scarcely any demand. A little funeral work is about all the retailers have to do.

As luck will have it, there is not a large amount of stock coming in, and so there is about enough demand to take care of it. Prices, however, are ruling low. Violets, especially, have suffered and in many cases they are sold for a price scarcely large enough to cover express charges. As is always the case in this market, the single varieties do the best. We can always get a better price for singles than for doubles. Sweet peas are doing well, considering the price that violets are selling at. Both roses and carnations are doing as well as can be expected. Lilies are not so plentiful and sell well. Bulbous flowers are having their innings and meet a fair demand.

Various Notes.

Meier & Shoemaker, a comparatively new seed firm, are sending out a neat catalogue to the retail trade around this city. Their store is located at 406 Sycamore street.

Gillett & Ohmer have made up a large stock of wire hanging baskets, in anticipation of the usual spring rush.

C. J. O.

PHOENIX, ARIZ.—Charles Burroughs reports that on Sunday afternoon, February 21, this vicinity was visited by a real hail storm. It lasted for only twelve minutes and only covered the ground to the depth of one-quarter inch, but it created some excitement nevertheless, as many of the inhabitants had never seen snow before.

The Market.

Trade is keeping up splendidly. There were several parties and one large funeral this week. Flowers are plentiful, with bulbous stock in greatest demand. California violets are at their best.

Various Notes.

Charles McCormick, representing the Dennison Mfg. Co., Philadelphia, and Arthur Zirkman, of M. Rice & Co., were visitors last week.

Mr. Birnie, of West Hoboken, N. J., is the new rose grower for the Erie Floral Co.

Another honor has come to G. H. Baur. The University of Pennsylvania debating team, of which he is the leader, was given the unanimous decision in the debate with Columbia University, February 26. Pennsylvania had the affirmative side of the question, which was: "Resolved, That our legislation should be shaped toward the gradual abandonment of the protective tariff." B. P.

NORWICH, CONN.

At the meeting of the New London County Horticultural Society, held in the parlors of the Buckingham Memorial, February 22, Mrs. E. M. Rogers gave a lecture on "Native Evergreens" and Charles T. Beasley on "Annuals."

The meeting was of much interest and was well attended. President A. Alpheus Gilbert was in the chair. The meeting carried out the society's plan of having occasional talks given before it on subjects relating to horticulture. President Gilbert introduced the first speaker of the evening, Mrs. E. M. Rogers, who gave the subject of evergreens a special local application by confining it to those found in this vicinity, of which she said there were thirteen varieties. She showed examples of them all, both by the ones she had gathered and others in the form of mounted specimens. Her interesting talk was enjoyed by all, and several questions were asked and answered.

Chas. T. Beasley, gardener to Mrs. Wm. Camp, gave a short, practical talk, dealing particularly with the sweet pea. Numerous questions were asked, all of which were answered.

Let's Do Some Figuring on Costs of Sash

You pay, say, 90c each for ten of the "They'll do" kind of sash. At the end of six years the joints are loosened and the frame is twisty, which breaks the glass and loosens the putty almost every time you handle them. Three more years of endless patching and bracing, and they are absolutely worthless. This is the experience of a Long Island grower who used to use hundreds of them every year.

Now, ten of the L. & B. Sash That Last, unglazed, costing $1.12½ each (a special discount price to florists), will be solid as a rock ten years from now. If given any kind of care they will be good for another ten or fifteen years more.

As proof of this statement, we can show you over one hundred of L. & B. Sash That Last, that are owned by the largest nursery seedsman, which have had twenty years constant outdoor exposure. From all appearances they are good for at least another ten years.

Take 100 of our Sash at $1.12½ each, good for at least twenty years—cost $112.50

Take 100 of the cheap ones at 90c each, good for not more than nine years—cost $90.00

At the end of the ninth year you must replace every one of these "90 centers"—which is another $90.00 gone to the dogs. $180.00 spent, against $112.50 for Sash That Last, which puts you just $67.50 in the hole. In the bargain you have had a lot of patched up, twisty sash with broken glass, for more than half the time. Sash that have been harder to handle than ours, because they are made clumsier and weigh more. Buying that kind of sash is a losing game any way you figure.

Here is our proposition: You order 10 Sash as a trial, and we will make you a liberal freight allowance on them. If, when you get these Sash, they are not the best you ever saw and agree with our claims in every way, then pack them up and ship them back that very day and we will stand all freight charges. But the time to order is now, for this offer holds good for only a limited time.

"The Wood that Won't Rot"

Described by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill.

"Replying to your favor requesting our experience with Pecky Cypress, we will say, we have been using this grade of Cypress in our Greenhouses and plant benches for the last ten or twelve years and so far have not found any of this wood that has all rotted out. We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock only lasted about four years, while so far we have had no Pecky Cypress rot out in ten or twelve years. We use clear Cypress for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose. BASSETT & WASHBURN."

ONE insertion of the advertisement brought me all the orders I need.—GEO. S. WOODRUFF, Independence, Ia.

I CONSIDER the REVIEW the only florists' paper in this country for ready reference.—G. V. GOODING, Waterbury, Conn.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3, or occasionally $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

Good Reasons Why

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

Carries the Bulk of the Advertising

"I am pleased with the results from the REVIEW advertising. Besides orders from all parts of the U. S., I have received orders from England."—J. H. MYERS, Altoona, Pa., March 8, 1909.

"Orders this morning cleaned us up. It beats all how REVIEW advs. are read and bring results."—HAMMERSCHMIDT & CLARK, Medina, Ohio, March 8, 1909.

"We sold more than $400.00 worth of plants from our three advertisements in the REVIEW."—BENNETT JOHNSTON & CO., Calla, Ohio, March 8, 1909.

(Bennett Johnston & Co. have spent $4.70 since January 1, 1909, for space in the REVIEW.)

It requires a greater effort on our part to engage the attention of small advertisers than the larger ones.

Those who do a shipping business regularly know "how Review advs. are read;" and use them freely,

But those who have only occasional lots of stock for wholesaling, can just as well avail themselves of this easy way of finding a profitable market.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

THE STANDING ANCHOR.

The standing anchor is an especially effective arrangement where a large floral piece is desired. The lower portion of the anchor illustrated is made entirely of Easter lilies, and is bold and striking, denoting strength. The lines of the upper portion are relieved by the cycas leaves at the back. Either Bride or Kaiserin may be used effectively in the upper half, with a few sprays of lily of the valley to add a touch of softness. This is one of the designs of Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. PHIL.

MAY SELL FLOWERS AFTER TEN.

The state of New York has a law prohibiting the sale of merchandise after 10 a. m. on Sunday, but the law makes two exceptions—newspapers and flowers—which may be sold at any hour of the day or night. At Buffalo the newsstands that want to sell magazines, and the delicatessen stores, have organized to seek to have the law amended and the retail grocers have united in opposition.

AIR PLANT BASKETS.

I am using a little idea in the way of an air plant basket which I like much better than any I have seen, and I thought it might be of some interest to others, as it sells readily in preference to other arrangements.

Get some nice, round, log-shaped pieces of cork bark and saw them in pieces about four or five inches long. Fill these with prepared green moss and hang them on a light brass chain. One or more bunches of air plant, stemmed on a toothpick and stuck in fairly high, so as to give fullness to the center and also hang over the sides, give a pleasing as well as rustic effect.

Odds and ends of cork bark can also be used by taking some sphagnum moss in a small lump and placing the pieces of cork around it, fastening them with a light wire and covering the tops and bottom with the green moss. Logs of cork bark eight to twelve inches long, filled with sphagnum and covered with green moss, hung on a brass chain and filled with air plants, make a seasonable arrangement, as well as a lasting and pleasing one. R. A. SIMMEN.

PURPLE LILAC POPULAR.

Leading retail florists in London say that lilac in its natural color has been steadily increasing in popularity and the demand for it this season would appear to be larger than in any previous year. For a long period it was the practice to import the whole of the lilac flowers sent to Covent Garden during the winter from France, and these were invariably white. These flowers were not, however, those of one of the white lilacs, but of the common lilac, or of one of the two fine forms Charles X or Dr. Lindley. The flowers of these, when the plants are forced in a high temperature and a subdued light, lose their normal color and develop white. Of late years the forcing of lilacs has been greatly extended in England, and large quantities of the fragrant blossom in its natural color, in addition to liberal supplies of white lilac, are annually sent to the flower markets. The soft coloring of the flowers of such varieties as Charles X and Dr. Lindley, when developed with full light and a moderate temperature, soon became popular for decorative purposes, and they have been largely used for several years past. The French growers, quick to note the trend of public taste, turned their attention to the production of colored lilac, and now send consignments to Covent Garden weekly, but, the Gardeners' Magazine says, the quality is not, as a whole, equal to the flowers of home growth.

EARLY DAYS OF THE BUSINESS.

The First Flower Store.

It will be necessary, in order to show the advancement in the florists' business, to go back a number of years beyond my recollection. As far back as 1858, was opened what was supposed to be the first store in a city for the sale of flowers only. Up to that time the public was supplied by market gardeners, who had small glass houses for starting early vegetables and who grew a few flowers in the winter, rather than keep their little houses idle. The variety of the flowers was necessarily limited, as they grew only those flowers that could be thrown aside in the early spring, to make room for the real business for which their places were adapted. Their principal output was a few sprays of heliotrope, abutilons, tuberoses, candytuft, camellias, a few roses and an occasional geranium. These, with a small addition from a few conservatories, the owners of which were not amiss to selling a few flowers now and then to lessen the expenses, were the only sources of supply, and the trade in them, of course, was limited.

MAY SELL FLOWERS AFTER TEN.

The state of New York has a law prohibiting the sale of merchandise after 10 a. m. on Sunday, but the law makes two exceptions—newspapers and flowers—which may be sold at any hour of the day or night. At Buffalo the news-stands that want to sell magazines, and the delicatessen stores, have organized to seek to have the law amended and the retail grocers have united in opposition.

AIR PLANT BASKETS.

I am using a little idea in the way of an air plant basket which I like much better than any I have seen, and I thought it might be of some interest to others, as it sells readily in preference to other arrangements.

Get some nice, round, log-shaped pieces of cork bark and saw them in pieces about four or five inches long. Fill these with prepared green moss and hang them on a light brass chain. One or more bunches of air plant, stemmed on a toothpick and stuck in fairly high, so as to give fullness to the center and also hang over the sides, give a pleasing as well as rustic effect.

Odds and ends of cork bark can also be used by taking some sphagnum moss in a small lump and placing the pieces of cork around it, fastening them with a light wire and covering the tops and bottom with the green moss. Logs of cork bark eight to twelve inches long, filled with sphagnum and covered with green moss, hung on a brass chain and filled with air plants, make a seasonable arrangement, as well as a lasting and pleasing one. PURPLE LILAC POPULAR.

Leading retail florists in London say that lilac in its natural color has been steadily increasing in popularity and the demand for it this season would appear to be larger than in any previous year. For a long period it was the practice to import the whole of the lilac flowers sent to Covent Garden during the winter from France, and these were invariably white. These flowers were not, however, those of one of the white lilacs, but of the common lilac, or of one of the two fine forms Charles X or Dr. Lindley. The flowers of these, when the plants are forced in a high temperature and a subdued light, lose their normal color and develop white. Of late years the forcing of lilacs has been greatly extended in England, and large quantities of the fragrant blossom in its natural color, in addition to liberal supplies of white lilac, are annually sent to the flower markets. The soft coloring of the flowers of such varieties as Charles X and Dr. Lindley, when developed with full light and a moderate temperature, soon became popular for decorative purposes, and they have been largely used for several years past. The French growers, quick to note the trend of public taste, turned their attention to the production of colored lilac, and now send consignments to Covent Garden weekly, but, the Gardeners' Magazine says, the quality is not, as a whole, equal to the flowers of home growth.

EARLY DAYS OF THE BUSINESS.

The First Flower Store.

It will be necessary, in order to show the advancement in the florists' business, to go back a number of years beyond my recollection. As far back as 1858, was opened what was supposed to be the first store in a city for the sale of flowers only. Up to that time the public was supplied by market gardeners, who had small glass houses for starting early vegetables and who grew a few flowers in the winter, rather than keep their little houses idle. The variety of the flowers was necessarily limited, as they grew only those flowers that could be thrown aside in the early spring, to make room for the real business for which their places were adapted. Their principal output was a few sprays of heliotrope, abutilons, tuberoses, candytuft, camellias, a few roses and an occasional geranium. These, with a small addition from a few conservatories, the owners of which were not amiss to selling a few flowers now and then to lessen the expenses, were the only sources of supply, and the trade in them, of course, was limited.

Standing Anchor.

After the Civil War.

This condition of affairs remained the same until the close of the war, when the demand for flowers grew to such an extent that several shrewd men of means, seeing the probability of a good return on the money invested, erected a number of greenhouses solely for the cultivation of flowers and plants to be sold at retail. These, for the most part, were sold in town by the growers themselves, or to men who had a small corner in a confectionery store, or to druggists, and yielded good profits to both grower and retailer. At that time a few of the seed houses began to take orders for flowers, and it was not long before a corner was set aside in the seed house for the sale of cut flowers; and between 1868 and 1875 a half dozen stores were in successful operation in Boston, and as many more in New York and Philadelphia, selling nothing but flowers.

Boston Was Then the Hub.

Boston at that time was the principal source of supply for other places, New York and Philadelphia depending wholly on Boston for their supply of Bon Silene, Safrano and Marechal Niel roses, lily of the valley, stephanotis, epacris, tuberoses and camellias, which were practically all the varieties of flowers to be had in any quantity.

Even at that time the retailing of flowers was arduous work, vexatious in many ways, and unsatisfactory, except from a financial standpoint. The hours of labor were long and uncertain, and are to this day. The stock was hard, and at times impossible, to procure in quantity enough to supply the demand. The methods of making so-called "bouquets" and "pieces" were crude, and, with few exceptions, were in the hands of men who had no thought outside of the dollar to be made in the transaction.

A bouquet at that time was started with a single flower in the center and rows of others around it, the spaces between being filled with princess pine and edged around with the same material. Wreaths and crosses were made on rattan or laths, the flowers being wound on one by one, and were delivered in cheese boxes or in boxes and crates improvised out of laths and newspapers. Cut flowers were delivered in brown paper parcels or in second-hand shoe boxes. The purchasers at that time were those that had money and were not always as reasonable in their demands as they should have been.

Progress Was Slow Until 1870.

Until about 1870 the proprietor had to do practically all the work except the crude labor, experienced assistants being impossible to procure. Conditions were such that a young man went into a flower store simply because it was a job that would do until he found something with shorter hours and more regularity of employment. Those who had some natural taste after a while became used to the work, and, if nothing better turned up, continued at it with more or less success. No effort had ever been made to make the florists' business a staple one. Even as late as 1870 the men in the business had other lines and devoted part of their time to something wholly foreign to the disposal of their flowers.

Commencing about 1870, various causes led to an increased activity in the business. New ranges of glass were put up all over the east, and new stores were opened to dispose of their output. The principal cause of this activity, I have always thought, was the arrival in this country, from different parts of Europe, of a body of men fairly well educated and thoroughly familiar with the cultivation of plants and flowers—industrious, able, business men. It did not take them long to see the possibilities of the flower business in this country and they were not slow to take advantage of their opportunities. This activity has increased year by year and is still increasing.

Need of Horticultural Education.

The present horticultural courses in our schools are a result of the efforts of these pioneers and will lead to other and more extensive courses. The man with an education is the coming man. By that I do not for a moment mean that a man, no matter how well educated, can sit down and business will come to him; but the man who has the ambition to succeed and works to that end—this man will win in the florists' business as well as in all other lines of business. Under ordinary conditions, the educated man who attends to his business will beat the other man out, no matter what his experience or ability may be; it is only a question of time until he drops behind, and the cause of it all is himself. In general, the uneducated man, who has become successful, is inclined to look down on the younger man and feel that because he has been a success it was due to his ability and methods more than to want of competition and lack of ability in the other man.

The Pearly Gates.

THE GATES.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a gates made by Albert C. Rott, Joliet, Ill. Frequently this design is made up with the gates standing open, but in this case Mr. Rott thought the effect not so good if the design were more open at the bottom; the height of the arch made it necessary to make the base heavier.

One frequently sees this design made up with the frame solidly mossed and a groundwork of flowers made perfectly smooth, with carnations. Mr. Rott does not make his designs in that manner, but makes his groundwork of green and sets in the flowers with stems long enough to produce an effect of looseness and grace, and loosely enough so that each flower may stand out and show its individual beauty.

FERTILIZER FOR BEDDERS.

What percentage of Bradley's blood and bone fertilizer is to be used for potting geraniums into 4-inch and 4½-inch pots from 2½-inch and 3½-inch pots? Also for potting fuchsias, heliotropes and double petunias? We have a lot ready to move now. J. S. & S.

In the case of fine bone I would use a 5-inch pot to each wheelbarrow load of loam. This special blood and bone mixture I have not tried, but it is an excellent fertilizer for general crops and the same amount should answer for geraniums, heliotropes, fuchsias, petunias and other bedding plants. A wheelbarrow load of soil contains about two bushels. I would use some sand in the compost, also a little soot if you can get it handily. C. W.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

EARLY MUMS.

Is it better to plant early mums on raised wooden benches with a couple of hot water pipes under them and with three to five feet head room, or would you advise removing the benches and making a solid bed on the ground? If so, how deep should the soil be? This way the plants would have from five to eight feet of head room. After the mums are out I intend to plant the bed with callas started in pots. E. A. M.

I would recommend planting the mums on the raised bench, and it would also be better for the winter crop of callas. Three to five feet of head room is ample for Polly Rose, Pacific, Monrovia, Golden Glow, Comoleta and Beatrice May. October Frost and Crocus will get up taller, but they could be planted on the side where they would get the five feet of head room.

A depth of five inches of soil is ample to grow the mum crop, and as good a crop of callas as I ever saw had no more to grow in. Mums planted in solid beds can not be controlled as they can on benches and, while I am aware that many are grown that way, I would prefer the benches, particularly when, as in this case, the bench is already erected. Plants propagated this month will be ready for planting at the end of May and I would recommend that they be planted at that time if E. A. M. wants to get really good flowers. C. H. T.

TIME TO PROPAGATE.

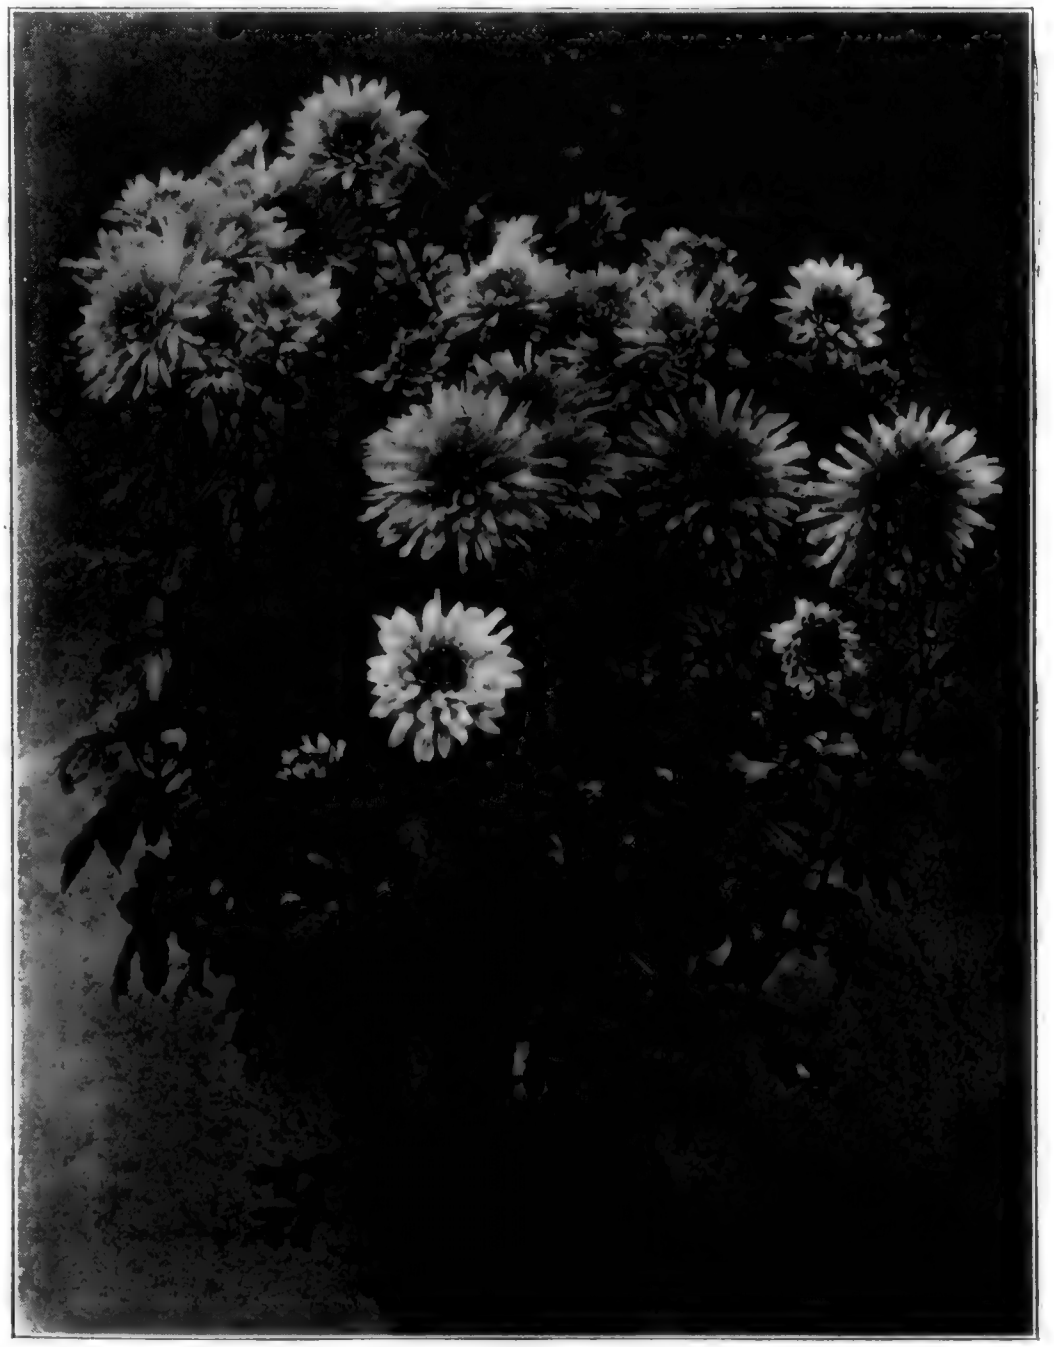
When should I start my cuttings of the chrysanthemum so I can have them by Thanksgiving? C. M. H.

Chrysanthemum cuttings for Thanksgiving blooms can be put in any time from now until the end of June. As a rule, commercial growers propagate mostly in May. For Thanksgiving trade you must grow late varieties, such as Jeanne Nonin, Chadwick, Bonnaffon, Eaton, Yellow Jerome Jones and others. C. W.

EARLY FLOWERING POT PLANTS

Good Commercial Stock.

From the third week in September until the middle of October is a period when cut flowers are not too abundant, particularly in the case of chrysanthemums grown under glass. Early frosts frequently cut off asters, dahlias and other outdoor subjects, while roses and carnations are still short-stemmed and poor in quality. There is a sigh of relief when the early single stems, such as Pacific, Polly Rose and the newer Golden Glow and Pacific Supreme make their initial bow. It is somewhat surprising that more attention has not hitherto been paid to the English early-blooming varieties of chrysanthemums, as when pot grown they are at their best from the middle of September to the middle of October.



Simple Culture.

There would seem to be an impression that these varieties are not adapted to our American climate and will not do here. What they will do planted in the border I do not know, but I have an idea that some of them may prove useful, but as pot plants they are a decided success and fill in a gap which to both florists and private gardeners is much in evidence each year. They make bushy plants if kept pinched until the middle of July and anyone trying them once will want more of them.

Cuttings rooted from March 1 to as late as the middle of April will make capital bush plants in 7-inch or 8-inch pots. From the end of May until the buds become prominent, they are better kept outdoors, when they can be removed to a light, airy house to open. Successive shifts from 3-inch to 5-inch and lastly to 7-inch pots will keep the plants moving nicely.

For cutting, bench or box culture is to be preferred. If planted in June, they will make strong shoots, which are better not disbudded, the sprays of flowers being decidedly preferable to single flowers for floral work.

At present no commercial grower in America, so far as I am aware, lists these early mums. Mr. Totty seemed to be impressed by the masses of them seen while at Merstham, England, last year, where the veteran, W. Wells, grows over 40,000 of them outdoors. In England they are grown in enormous quantities, chiefly outdoors, but in our warmer and drier climate we can hardly hope to succeed with them as we can in pots.

In England, such growers as W. Wells, of Merstham, who raises many new varieties himself and handles all Goacher's novelties in addition; Norman Davis, of Framfield; H. J. Jones, of Lewisham; Hobbies Limited, of Dereham, Norfolk, and other chrysanthemum specialists do a tremendous business in these early varieties.

Some Good Varieties.

A few of the best varieties to grow are: Goacher's Crimson, bright crimson, large flowers; Horace Martin, deep golden yellow, a sport from Crimson Marie Masse, makes a fine pot plant, is grown as much as eight feet across in England, carrying 1,000 or more flowers; White Quintus, pure white, makes superb sprays, stem rigid, the great early market variety in Covent Garden; Ralph Curtis, creamy white, also a sport from Marie Masse; Robbie Burns, rosy cerise, a sport from Marie Masse; Mme. Marie Masse, lilac mauve, one of the best; Mytchett White, pure white; Crimson Marie Masse, a bronzy yellow sport from Marie Masse; Mme. Casimir Perrier, white tinted pink, makes a splendid bush plant; Rycroft Glory, golden yellow.

There are a host of other varieties, but half a dozen of the foregoing will suffice for any florist.

The accompanying photographs were taken October 1 and were plants grown in 7-inch pots, which had been propagated early in April and were grown outdoors from the end of May until early in September. The stock plants from which they were taken were received by parcels post on or about February 20 from England, which is a convenient way to import small quantities.

HOME GARDENING.

The imperative demand that the home gardener should be given some instruction in horticulture has led the Rhode Island Horticultural Society and the State Board of Agriculture to establish a free evening school for this instruction, which will be conducted on the evenings of March 16, 17 and 18, in the lecture room of the Providence Public Library. The only requirements are that those who register shall attend each evening. Registration may be made by mail to the Rhode Island Agricultural College, at Kingston, and in return a ticket will be sent entitling the recipient to a reserved seat at the lectures.

Specialists in their respective lines will deliver addresses, and a question box will be provided and all difficulties solved. Registration is desired before March 13, so that, if necessary, a larger hall may be secured. The following are among the speakers that have been arranged for: March 16, Wilfrid Wheeler, of the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture, Secretary of the New England Fruit Show, on "Small Fruits"; March 17, Herbert Wollingwood, on "Orcharding"; March 18, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, on "Landscape Gardening as Applied to the Home," illustrated.

SCOTT MEMORIAL FUND.

At the Niagara Falls convention the undersigned were appointed a committee to receive subscriptions for a memorial to the late William Scott. At that time the committee received a large number of subscriptions, and many individuals, florists' clubs, business houses and the trade press interested themselves in the movement, turning over to the committee the sums raised by them, together with the names of the contributors, which appear in the appended list.

Consultation with the family of the late Mr. Scott, and with others interested, indicated that possibly the best form that the memorial could take would be a monument to mark the grave in Forest Lawn cemetery, Buffalo, N. Y. It seemed desirable to complete the matter with as little delay as possible, but considerable time was consumed in that the block of granite must needs be quarried specially in Vermont, for the stone selected. The memorial is now in place, however, and the unexpended balance of the fund has been turned over to Mrs. Scott for the maintenance of the plot.

TIME TO SOW ANNUALS.

Kindly inform me as to when to sow seed of the following annuals so they will be good sized plants to plant outside in May: Chrysanthemums, alyssum, phlox and dianthus. When should I sow for Christmas Celestial peppers, physalis, Primula obconica, and Solanum capsicastrum? A. D. R.

The chrysanthemums, alyssum, Phlox Drummondii and dianthus will be sufficiently early if sown the third or fourth week in March. All these varieties are rapid growing and it is a mistake to sow them too early.

The Celestial pepper can be sown at the end of March. Plant outdoors when danger from frost is gone and lift early in September. Physalis Francheti, or the Japanese winter cherry, can be sown with the Celestial pepper. Primula obconica and Solanum capsicastrum should be sown without delay. C. W.

land they are grown in enormous quantities, chiefly outdoors, but in our warmer and drier climate we can hardly hope to succeed with them as we can in pots.

In England, such growers as W. Wells, of Merstham, who raises many new varieties himself and handles all Goacher's novelties in addition; Norman Davis, of Framfield; H. J. Jones, of Lewisham; Hobbies Limited, of Dereham, Norfolk, and other chrysanthemum specialists do a tremendous business in these early varieties.

Some Good Varieties.

A few of the best varieties to grow are: Goacher's Crimson, bright crimson, large flowers; Horace Martin, deep golden yellow, a sport from Crimson Marie Masse, makes a fine pot plant, is grown as much as eight feet across in England, carrying 1,000 or more flowers; White Quintus, pure white, makes superb sprays, stem rigid, the great early market variety in Covent Garden; Ralph Curtis, creamy white, also a sport from Marie Masse; Robbie Burns, rosy cerise, a sport from Marie Masse; Mme. Marie Masse, lilac mauve, one of the best; Mytchett White, pure white; Crimson Marie Masse, a bronzy yellow sport from Marie Masse; Mme. Casimir Perrier, white tinted pink, makes a splendid bush plant; Ryecroft Glory, golden yellow.

There are a host of other varieties, but half a dozen of the foregoing will suffice for any florist.

The accompanying photographs were taken October 1 and were plants grown in 7-inch pots, which had been propagated early in April and were grown outdoors from the end of May until early in September. The stock plants from which they were taken were received by parcels post on or about February 20 from England, which is a convenient way to import small quantities.

HOME GARDENING.

The imperative demand that the home gardener should be given some instruction in horticulture has led the Rhode Island Horticultural Society and the State Board of Agriculture to establish a free evening school for this instruction, which will be conducted on the evenings of March 16, 17 and 18, in the lecture room of the Providence Public Library. The only requirements are that those who register shall attend each evening. Registration may be made by mail to the Rhode Island Agricultural College, at Kingston, and in return a ticket will be sent entitling the recipient to a reserved seat at the lectures.

Specialists in their respective lines will deliver addresses, and a question box will be provided and all difficulties solved. Registration is desired before March 13, so that, if necessary, a larger hall may be secured. The following are among the speakers that have been arranged for: March 16, Wilfrid Wheeler, of the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture, Secretary of the New England Fruit Show, on "Small Fruits"; March 17, Herbert Wollingwood, on "Orcharding"; March 18, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, on "Landscape Gardening as Applied to the Home," illustrated.

SCOTT MEMORIAL FUND.

At the Niagara Falls convention the undersigned were appointed a committee to receive subscriptions for a memorial to the late William Scott. At that time the committee received a large number of subscriptions, and many individuals, florists' clubs, business houses and the trade press interested themselves in the movement, turning over to the committee the sums raised by them, together with the names of the contributors, which appear in the appended list.

Consultation with the family of the late Mr. Scott, and with others interested, indicated that possibly the best form that the memorial could take would be a monument to mark the grave in Forest Lawn cemetery, Buffalo, N. Y. It seemed desirable to complete the matter with as little delay as possible, but considerable time was consumed in that the block of granite must needs be quarried specially in Vermont, for the stone selected. The memorial is now in place, however, and the unexpended balance of the fund has been turned over to Mrs. Scott for the maintenance of the plot.

The contributors to the fund were:

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Easter Lilies.

Unless you can see the buds on your lilies quite prominently now, they are going to be too late. Rather than endeavor vainly to get plants in bloom on which no buds are yet showing, it will be much better to place these in a cooler house and try to hold them back for Memorial day, when everything in the way of flowers sells on sight.

Lilies will need a good deal of fussing over during the next few weeks. Early ones must be placed in cooler quarters and backward plants kept in a warm, moist heat. They will stand 70 to 75 degrees at night, but, if possible, a little lower temperature should be given when the flowers start to expand. Use the syringe freely on lilies, especially those which are late. Plenty of water and regular fumigations will keep the plants clean and thrifty.

Plants coming along for Memorial day should all be above ground, and if they are four to six inches high, will flower by the end of May without any forcing. Every country florist can use some lily flowers practically every week in the year, especially where funeral work is a specialty. It is, therefore, always well to have a few plants coming along, independent of such special occasions as Christmas, Easter and Memorial day.

Pansies.

Pansies being grown under glass are now giving a wealth of flowers. Try to hold the night temperature for these as near 40 degrees as possible. Treatment such as suits violets will answer well for pansies. As the benches are now well filled with roots, furnish the plants with some manure water once a week. This will much improve the quality of the flowers.

Plants carried over winter in coldframes can now have the dry coverings removed. Keep sashes over them, however, for a short time yet, but air abundantly to prevent the plants becoming drawn. After April 1, of course, sashes can be dispensed with, but in case of severe rain or snow storms it is better to leave them on.

The winter has been mild, but rather severe on pansies outdoors. The continued freezings and thawings have heaved many of the plants considerably, especially where the winter mulch has blown off. We get many warm days in early March which tempt us sorely to remove all mulchings. It is too early, however, to do so yet. Take away any which may be rather heavy, but wait until early April before dispensing with it entirely. It will then be necessary to go over and firm many of the plants.

Sweet Peas.

During March and April sweet peas under glass produce the finest flowers of the year. They have stems and flowers far superior to anything grown outdoors and always prove one of the best selling flowers on the market. To keep the plants in the best possible growing condition, they will now require quite a little attention. As they grow rapidly, supports must be given before any of the shoots can become twisted. Water supplies must also be abundantly given and, if some stimulant has not yet been applied, this is a suitable time to scatter a dressing of fine bone or sheep manure over the soil, pointing it in lightly with a fork before watering. Be sure to remove seed pods when any appear and let air be given abundantly. A night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees should not be exceeded.

The time for making sowings outdoors varies in the northern states considerably, in an exceptional year early in March, occasionally a month later. The earlier they can be gotten in when frost has left the ground and the soil is workable, the better. If your land was not prepared in the late fall, get it ready just as soon as you possibly can. There is nothing better than a good dressing of well rotted cow manure as a fertilizer. Some growers prefer to prepare trenches and lay all the manure in the bottom of these. We have seen much better results, however, where the manure has been broadcasted and plowed or spaded in. Run the rows north and south. Sow thinly and cover two and one-half to three inches deep. A common practice, but one doing more harm than good, is to cover seed lightly at first, earthing the vines up as they grow. Many good peas are ruined each year by this filling-in process, and it is a pity that so many seed catalogues continue to recommend it.

The number of varieties of sweet peas are legion. A few useful ones commercially are: White, Dorothy Eckford and White Spencer; primrose shaded blush, Sybil Eckford; primrose, Hon. Mrs. Kenyon; light pink, Countess of Lathom; bright pink, Countess Spencer, Gladys Unwin; orange pink, Bolton's Pink, Helen Lewis; rose, Prince of Wales; lavender, Frank Dolby; blue, Navy Blue; blue and white, Helen Pierce; rosy carmine, John Ingman; scarlet, King Edward VII. The maroon, purple, striped and odd shades do not sell well in the markets. The best selling shades are white, lavender, soft pink and orange pink.

Hydrangeas.

When these notes appear in print it will be just a month to Easter. That reminds us that the hydrangeas intended for that festival should now have flower heads three or four inches across. If they are of this size, there will be no occasion to subject them to any hard forcing. Allow them to come along in a night temperature of 52 to 55 degrees and they will be all right. When they show color, stand them in a house kept a few degrees cooler. Hydrangeas with pots crammed with roots, in full growth, can hardly be overwatered. On the first signs of pale foliage use soot or nitrate of soda in weak doses to color them up.

Plants for Memorial day will be starting naturally before this time. They should be afforded space in a cool, light house. It will be difficult to give them full justice, owing to the bench demands of Easter stock, but do not stand them under the benches, as is too often done. Nothing but lanky, spindling plants come from such treatment. If you have no possible greenhouse space, prepare a coldframe of sufficient depth to afford necessary headroom. Protect at nights with mats and board shutters. These will easily exclude any frost we are now likely to get. Do not on any account neglect the night protection. Any frost now will mean a complete loss of flower for the coming season.

Look out for the young stock. The early batches will be nicely established in 3-inch pots now. Continue to pot up successional batches as soon as the roots are an inch in length. If you require more plants, get a lot of cuttings in right away. These will still grow into fine plants before fall, especially if pot grown.

Geraniums.

The latest geranium cuttings should be potted off by this time. Keep them rather warm until well rooted around the pots. Later a temperature of 50 degrees is ample. Geraniums are often spoiled by being grown too warm. Just as many are ruined by too much moisture on the foliage and in the soil.

With warmer weather growth is now rapid and it often taxes one's ingenuity to afford the plants the space they should have. They will need spacing at least once a week, if you want plants which will do you full credit and bring top prices. Keep all flower buds pinched off as they appear and remove decaying foliage. Nothing prevents disease more than perfect cleanliness.

J. A. Newsham's House of Oncidium Splendidum.

ORCHIDS

ONCIDIUM SPLENDIDUM.

J. A. Newsham, of New Orleans, La., thinks that Oncidium splendidum, one of the Guatemalan varieties of the orchid, is undoubtedly the finest oncidium for cut flowers. The photograph which he submitted, and which is herewith reproduced, seems likely to sustain him in that opinion, since it shows a mass of flowers which included, according to Mr. Newsham's estimate, more than 3,000 fully opened blooms. He says that the plants were imported last July, during their growing season, and still they all flowered, some having as many as fifty-three flowers on a single spike.

Oncidium splendidum, Mr. Newsham says, is one of the easiest oncidiums to grow. It is found growing on rocks in full sun. During the rainy season, when it makes its growth, there is almost a continuous stream of water running down the rocks. After finishing its growth in December, it gets no more rain until May, thus showing that it requires an orchid's season of rest, and plenty of water while growing.

It succeeds best in pans or baskets, hung where they will receive plenty of strong light all the year around. In its native country it blooms in November. It resembles Oncidium varicosum in the lip, but is lighter, being a lemon yellow, while the sepals and petals are larger and are pale yellow, blotched with chocolate brown. It is not very plentiful in its native country, and for that reason is not often seen in large quantities in cultivation.

DENDROBIUM NOBILE.

Dendrobium nobile is one of the oldest but still one of the most beautiful and useful orchids in cultivation. Although in cultivation for over seventy years, there is no other orchid which can surpass in beauty a well-grown and bloomed specimen of D. nobile. At the present time the plants, which completed their growth in late fall, should be kept almost quite dry at the root. An occasional syringing will furnish all the necessary moisture. The flower nodes will now be developing on the stems, and if much moisture at the root is applied, these nodes will develop into little plants instead of flowers. Continue the dryness until you can see flower buds, when more water can be given. While resting, a cooler, sunny house is preferable to a warm one. As the buds appear move back to warmer quarters; 60 degrees at night will answer well. The end of a rose house has grown some of the finest dendrobiums I ever saw, but a carnation house will also answer for it. C. W.

WHITE FLY.

Kindly tell me what is the best remedy for exterminating white fly. They work chiefly on geraniums. J. M.

The only thoroughly effective remedy is fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas. Frequent directions for the use of this have been given in recent numbers of the REVIEW. If you do not care to try the gas, you can greatly minimize the trouble by syringing the plants twice or three times a week with soap and water. I find Ivory soap and Whale Oil soap are both effective. Use warm water of a temperature of 100 to 120 degrees. C. W.

BLACK FLY.

In the greenhouse I have a lot of small black flies. Are they harmful and what can I do for them? I have smoked the house twice a week with tobacco, but it does not kill them. C. M. H.

Black fly is easily destroyed, either by fumigation or syringing with a nicotine solution. You cannot have given a sufficiently strong fumigation to clean them out. Remember that in winter to keep your plants clean you should either fumigate or spray them once a week. If you spray, get one of the various nicotine extracts on the market. Directions for spraying will be found on each bottle, can or cask. C. W.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Harry Ekas will erect a large greenhouse on his property on the Frederick road, near Beechfield avenue and opposite Athol Heights.

ONCIDIUM SPLENDIDUM.

J. A. Newsham, of New Orleans, La., thinks that Oncidium splendidum, one of the Guatemalan varieties of the orchid, is undoubtedly the finest oncidium for cut flowers. The photograph which he submitted, and which is herewith reproduced, seems likely to sustain him in that opinion, since it shows a mass of flowers which included, according to Mr. Newsham's estimate, more than 3,000 fully opened blooms. He says that the plants were imported last July, during their growing season, and still they all flowered, some having as many as fifty three flowers on a single spike.

Oncidium splendidum, Mr. Newsham says, is one of the easiest oncidiums to grow. It is found growing on rocks in full sun. During the rainy season, when it makes its growth, there is almost a continuous stream of water running down the rocks. After finishing its growth in December, it gets no more rain until May, thus showing that it requires an orchid's season of rest, and plenty of water while growing.

It succeeds best in pans or baskets, hung where they will receive plenty of strong light all the year around. In its native country it blooms in November. It resembles Oncidium variegatum in the lip, but is lighter, being a lemon yellow, while the sepals and petals are larger and are pale yellow, blotched with chocolate brown. It is not very plentiful in its native country, and for that reason is not often seen in large quantities in cultivation.

DENDROBIUM NOBILE.

Dendrobium nobile is one of the oldest but still one of the most beautiful and useful orchids in cultivation. Although in cultivation for over seventy years, there is no other orchid which can surpass in beauty a well-grown and blossomed specimen of D. nobile. At the present time the plants, which completed their growth in late fall, should be kept almost quite dry at the root. An occasional syringing will furnish all the necessary moisture. The flower nodes will now be developing on the stems, and if much moisture at the root is applied, these nodes will develop into little plants instead of flowers. Continue the dryness until you can see flower buds, when more water can be given. While resting, a cooler, sunny house is preferable to a warm one. As the buds appear move back to warmer quarters; 60 degrees at night will answer well. The end of a rose house has grown some of the finest dendrobiums I ever saw, but a carnation house will also answer for it. C. W.

WHITE FLY.

Kindly tell me what is the best remedy for exterminating white fly. They work chiefly on geraniums. J. M.

The only thoroughly effective remedy is fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas. Frequent directions for the use of this have been given in recent numbers of the REVIEW. If you do not care to try the gas, you can greatly minimize the trouble by syringing the plants twice or three times a week with soap and water. I find Ivory soap and Whale Oil soap are both effective. Use warm water of a temperature of 100 to 120 degrees.

BLACK FLY.

In the greenhouse I have a lot of small black flies. Are they harmful and what can I do for them? I have smoked the house twice a week with tobacco, but it does not kill them. C. M. H.

Black fly is easily destroyed, either by fumigation or syringing with a nicotine solution. You cannot have given a sufficiently strong fumigation to clean them out. Remember that in winter to keep your plants clean you should either fumigate or spray them once a week. If you spray, get one of the various nicotine extracts on the market. Directions for spraying will be found on each bottle, can or cask. C. W.

THE SOUTHERN BULB STOCK.

The growing of bulbs in tidewater Virginia has already assumed large proportions, but those familiar with conditions there predict that the industry has only fairly begun to develop. Those who are familiar with the climatic and soil conditions assert that the only problems the growers have to face are those of labor and of market. The growers are dependent upon negro help and it is said that in the beginning the colored man was unable to distinguish between the varieties, even when in bloom, and that he had no conception of the necessity for keeping the varieties of bulbs separate. Paraphrasing a bit of the slang of yesterday, "All bulbs look alike to him." Lately, it is said, there has been a great improvement in the quality of the labor. The colored man is beginning to appreciate the necessity of care and the solution of the labor problem seems in sight.

In the matter of a market, the difficulties are less near a solution. The northern forcers of bulbs under glass are skeptical as to the forcing qualities of the American-grown stock. It has been a difficult matter to get them to make trials on sufficient scale to demonstrate the matter satisfactorily. Some of the growers even have gone so far as to offer their bulbs to some of the forcers, in localities where many bulbs are used, on the basis of "no satisfaction, no pay," but the necessity for this is gradually passing away.

It is asserted that the Virginia growers can produce their stock at a price which will enable them to compete with English or Dutch growers, even without the assistance of a tariff.

The Virginia bulbs are solid and heavy for their size. Being grown all on new ground, they are free from disease and give early blooms. The varieties mostly grown are Narcissus princeps, Golden Spur, Emperor, Sir Watkin, Barri conspicuus, Mrs. Langtry, poeticus and ornatus, but practically all varieties can be grown successfully for commercial use, except Paper White, Trumpet Major and the double Von Sion.

The accompanying illustrations are from photographs recently taken at C. W. Beman's Rose Gardens, North Emporia, Va. One of the illustrations shows a box of the cut blooms as they are shipped to the wholesale markets all over the country in increasing quantities each year. The marketing of the cut blooms from the fields naturally provokes the wrath of those who are forcing bulbs under glass. The growers stand accused of "burning their candle at both ends," but so long as the general public is ready to supply the matches there probably is nothing which will cause a reduction in either end of the business.

TAR IN GREENHOUSES.

I see you have some discussion in regard to wood preservatives, but none of them seem to have tried my remedy. My first use of coal tar, or gas tar, in greenhouses was in 1901. I applied it with a brush on sap long leaf pine 1x6 new boards, and they have been in continuous use in the bottom of my carnation benches, and now by cutting off the tar the lumber is as fresh and sound as when first applied, and last summer when filling the benches the boards seemed as strong as new boards. Every year I give them a new coat of tar on the top side. That keeps off all insects and is not harmful to any plants for me. I use tar on all the wood in my greenhouses with good results. All the florists here give me the laugh and say they dislike the looks of it, but every third year they have to put in new lumber that costs from $25 to $30 per thousand feet and I buy coal tar at 8 cents per gallon. It makes a difference in the expense bill in my favor. I can say that I raise as good and as many carnations per foot of glass as any that I have seen in Texas. I have put tar all around the carnation plants and on the leaves to see if it was harmful to them. It will kill the leaves if it is put on them, but does not hurt the rest of the plant. I find that to thin the tar with any kind of oil destroys its usefulness, and to thin it on cold days, it should be heated instead of thinning. I do not find it of much benefit to lumber that is old and partly decayed.

PLANTS FOR SHIELD.

I have a shield about twenty-two feet wide which I usually plant to red and white verbenas and blue ageratums for the field, but wish to make a change. Can you give any suggestions? What designs would make a good showing in the shield made out of Verschaffeltii and Golden Bedder coleus or alternantheras?

E. W. S.

Golden Bedder and Verschaffeltii coleus, while they would answer well as regards color, are not so good as alternanthera. Of the latter carpeting plant suitable varieties for your purpose are Brilliantissima or paronychioides major, red, and nana, yellow. If you wish for a good silvery-leaved plant, Santolina maritima is excellent. If you use alternanthera, do not use any coleus, and vice versa. In flowering plants the dwarf begonias of the Vernon and Erfordii type are persistent flowering, succeeding equally well in sunshine or shade. It is now too late to start seeds of these and I should say that the alternantheras would suit you best. Apart from Ageratum Stella Gurney, the blue lobelias are the only suitable blue carpeting plant, but these are not altogether reliable in hot weather.

CARE OF THE HOSE.

Neglect is a Waste.

There are comparatively few greenhouse men who take any care of the hose they are using. Mechanical watering, while becoming common with vegetable growers, is not yet employed to any great extent by florists, and a few pointers on handling the hose will not be out of place or season now.

In the first place, hose is an expensive necessity and should be given better care. Iron pipe and brass faucets are cheaper than hose and faucets should be placed at frequent intervals, so that short pieces of hose (not over fifty feet) will reach half way from one to the next, and from the end faucet clear to the end of the house without stretching or pulling on the hose to reach the last plant.

Best Hose the Cheapest.

Cheap hose is expensive, because it does not last and takes much of the grower's time repairing it. Time is money in a greenhouse, as elsewhere. The best grades of hose are the cheapest, by far, in the end.

Dragging the hose on rough ash or other walks is what wears out the hose, more than the water pressure. The hose should be gathered up in three or four places when moving from one aisle to another. There is no sense in trying to pull long lengths around a bench corner, ruining the hose, and the man's temper, as well. In changing the connection from one faucet to another in the same aisle, all that is necessary is to hold the two ends and drag the hose, unless the walk is too rough. Immediately upon removing it from the faucet, the thumb should be held over the end until fastened to the other faucet, to keep the washer from losing out. The hose can be gathered or dragged with the left hand. Losing washers or gaskets out causes more delays in doing up the morning's watering than any other cause for the killing of time.

Avoid the Kinks.

The water should never be turned on until the hose is untangled and straightened out. The hose should never be permitted to be crossed, or looped, because when pulled out to its full length to reach the end of the bench, it is almost certain to kink close to the faucet and require a jerk to straighten it so that the water will run again. A few such kinks and jerks, with a little swearing to help, will make a weak spot in the hose at that point. Then soon a leak, more swearing, and much time lost to repair the hose.

The hose should always be run down the side of the walk the faucet is on, then across and back on the other side, "U" shaped. When straightened out this way, it can be drawn taut without being crossed or kinked, and when out at full length it can be thrown over along the same side of the path the faucet is on again, and start back toward the other end, letting the hose fall across the walk and back to you as at first. Then the hose can be pulled to the next faucet without a kink, without losing temper and in less time than is taken by the careless man who is always getting tangled up and breaking hose.

Forefinger the Best Nozzle.

When watering, hold the hose with the left hand about two feet from the end. Let the end lie in your right hand and use the first finger, not the thumb, to spread the water.

Let the water out easily for ordinary watering, having the finger just away from the end of the hose, so that it strikes it and scatters, glancing slightly upward, falling gently. For spraying hard, draw the finger up tight, throwing the water upward with force that strikes the under side of each leaf, cleaning insects off.

Never try to water on both sides of an aisle. Water only one bench at a time, as you go down the aisle, and come back, watering the bench on the other side. Always turn and walk backward, with the right hand over the bench on that side. Never try to water the bench on the left side of you with water from the right hand.

No nozzle ever invented can beat the forefinger of a good grower. Nozzles are for boys and beginners to amuse themselves with. Hose laid against heating pipes will be easily burned in places and exposure to the sun in the hottest weather rots it out more quickly. Not long ago I saw a florist putting all his faucets on the south side of the aisle, so that the hose lying along that side would be shaded by the bench south of the walk. Of course it could be thrown over to that side when through watering, but it is more liable to be left on the side where attached to the faucet.

CARNATION CUT.

D. J. Ryan, grower for Edgar Bourne, Methuen, Mass., from 3,700 plants of Lawson picked 14,000 flowers from October 8 to December 31, 1908. From 5,500 Enchantress in the same period an average of five and one-half flowers per plant was picked. C.

INDOOR OR OUTDOOR CULTURE?

Do you think Victory and Estelle carnations would do better if put directly in benches? Would they not come on better for Christmas if they did not have the check of moving from ground to bench in August? I am located in California. A. L. H.

The two varieties you mention have never been conspicuous for the size of the plants they produce in the field. Unless the cuttings are started early and pushed along steadily until planting time, only rather undersized plants will be available for benching. Estelle has been practically dropped in this part of the country, on account of its lack of vigor. Victory, however, is one of the leading and most profitable varieties in that color. Except for its disinclination to make good plants, it is very satisfactory to both grower and retailer.

We have never had any trouble in getting Victory reëstablished on the benches, and we find that when benched between July 15 and August 15 it will begin giving fine blooms on good stems by early November. Estelle has never transplanted satisfactorily with us, and was always late in giving a good cut.

If your facilities for growing the plants inside are good, the Estelle will likely do better when grown that way. Victory, however, will do better if grown in the field during the summer months. You will get better plants and far more blooms. Any variety which is inclined to grow straggly will give better results when planted in the field. The plants get more body to them, because the joints come shorter and the breaks seem to come freer.

In your California climate, conditions may be quite different from those in these parts. If your climate is mild throughout the year, I can see no reason why carnations should not do splendidly under the indoor method. It is the heat here during the summer which hurts the carnations most. You ought to have no trouble, either, in reëstablishing your plants quickly after benching, in your mild climate.

I would advise you to try Beacon, which not only makes fine, large plants under either method of culture, but is also easily transplanted. It is much easier to handle than either Victory or Estelle. A. F. J. B.

LUCK IN SEEDLING RAISING.

[A paper read by Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., before the class in floriculture at Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass., February 24, 1909.]

The type of greenhouse plays an important part in the improvement of the carnation. My preference is for a span-roofed structure, with continuous ventilation on each side of the ridge and on sides, with raised benches, thus insuring a free circulation of air. The house may be built running north and south, or east and west, as location and other circumstances permit. The east and west aspect has the advantage for about six weeks in midwinter; the north and south about equal during early spring and fall, with a decided advantage during hot weather.

Only the healthiest and most vigorous stock procurable should be used and such varieties as embrace a wide range of self-colors are most desirable.

To obtain the best results, the colors should be classified, keeping the different shades of light pink, dark pink, whites, crimson, reds, etc., together. By following up this method a much larger percentage will come true to color in crossing than where this is done promiscuously or haphazard.

A High Standard of Culture Essential.

If the plants at the period of cross fertilizing are in robust health, producing strong, vigorous shoots, which usually mean correspondingly large blooms, the seeds will invariably be large, of much greater vitality, producing strong and vigorous seedlings, from which one may naturally expect something phenomenal.

On the other hand, if the parent plants are poorly grown, weak, spindling, and lacking in stamina, their seedling progeny is sure to be of like quality. The most decided results, and greatest advances in my experience, have always been obtained from parent plants exhibiting unusual strength and vigor.

There is not, so far as I know, any means of ascertaining beforehand just what the result of a cross will be. If crosses are made between colors of a like shade and their progeny year after year, by continuing this method the seedling will, to a large extent, be a reproduction of the parents as to color. Habit of plant will often resemble either parent, or be exactly intermediate, but there is no certainty in the matter, as the most unlookedfor colors appear at times, such as a pure white from the crossing of two reds, or vice versa. We can only hope and work towards the desired end, and if we stick to it long enough success will ultimately crown our efforts.

One can invariably attain to anything he makes up his mind for, providing he has the staying qualities which defeat only spurs on to greater efforts, and here let me tell you is the explanation for the "good luck" of many. It comes simply by sticktoitiveness.

By some I have been termed lucky in the production of some desirable varieties. I leave this to your own judgment. For instance, I worked six years without satisfactory results to procure a worthy successor to Daybreak.

Origin of Enchantress.

During those years I raised hundreds of a similar color, but, as the song says, "There was always something wrong": Flowers too small, or too large and split, or stems too weak, plants lacking in constitution—something out of balance. In these efforts I had been using the pollen of Daybreak on other varieties. It occurred to me that I might be working along the wrong lines, so I reversed my tactics. By using the pollen of the Law-

ZWEIFEL'S SUCCESS.

One of the popular men in the trade at Milwaukee, and one who is widely known through his regular attendance at all trade gatherings, is Nic Zweifel, the carnation grower, whose establishment is shown in the accompanying illustration. Mr. Zweifel's place has been growing steadily in recent years and he is now figuring on another addition for the current season. Within the last couple of years Mr. Zweifel has become a competitor at the leading flower shows and at Chicago last fall captured some of the principal awards for carnations at the national flower show. The premium which he most prizes is the one shown in the picture, being the gold trophy offered by Kroeschell Bros. Co. for the best vase of carnations exhibited by any grower using hot water for heating. There were eleven entries and Mr. Zweifel's Enchantress were judged the best of the lot. At the more recent exhibition at Indianapolis, skilled growers commended the dark pink seedling, No. 108, exhibited by Mr. Zweifel, which was awarded a certificate. He also has a number of other seedlings which are expected to turn out well.

COLLECT CHECKS PROMPTLY.

A check was made out to pay a bill and the party to whom it was given failed to deposit it until after, about ten days later, the bank had failed. Then he asked us to assume the loss by cashing our check. Is it right or legal that we should be compelled to stand the loss where this party had our check for a week and more and yet made no attempt to cash it? J. O. C.

It is assumed that the drawer of the check in this case had money enough in the bank to pay it. If that is true, the loss must fall upon the holder of the check. Anyone to whom a check is issued has a reasonable time in which to cash it. The depositor insures the safety of the bank during such time, but thereafter the money is at the risk of the holder of the check. It is not equitable that he should leave money in a bank indefinitely, for his own convenience, having in his possession a check by which he might draw it, and then put the loss upon the depositor if the bank fails.

The courts in a number of cases have defined the reasonable time during which the maker of a check guarantees the solvency of the bank. When the depositor and the person to whom the check was given and the bank are all in the same city or town, the holder of the check has the remainder of the day on which he got the check, and the whole of the next day, in which to collect it. If he lets that fraction of a day and full day go by without cashing the check, then the bank is holding the money at his risk. If the check has to be sent away by mail for collection, it must be put in the mails not later than the next day after it is received, and the agent to whom it is sent for collection must present it to the bank not later than the next day after it comes into his hands.

GARDENIAS FOR CUT BLOOMS.

"The best time for propagation is January and February," said Wm. Kleinheinz in a talk before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia. "Select your cuttings from strong growing, healthy plants. I have experimented with propagating in sand, in half peat and half sand, and also in a mixture of fine chopped sphagnum moss, peat and sand in equal parts, and have found this latter mixture the best, as I always get the strongest roots on cuttings propagated in this last mentioned composition.

"It is important to give sufficient heat. I would say 75 to 80 degrees on bottom and 70 to 75 degrees on top. Syringe two or three times a day, protect from the sun, and never allow any draught to strike the cuttings. Under this treatment the cuttings will be rooted in from twenty to twenty-five days.

"Then the young plants must be potted into 2-inch pots in a mixture of half peat and half well-rotted compost. Never allow them to get dry, and protect from the sun for three or four days. Keep the house at a temperature of 68 to 72 degrees at night and 75 to 80 degrees in daytime, for about one week, until the young roots are coming through the soil, then commence to reduce the temperature to 65 to 68 degrees at night and 72 to 75 degrees during the daytime, and the young plants will soon begin to grow. In from three to four weeks the plants will be ready for a shift into 3-inch or 3½-inch pots, and the shifting must be repeated as often as necessary. Never allow the plants to get potbound.

"All the buds must be removed to secure a good, healthy growth. In the month of July the plants should be in 5-inch or 6-inch pots, and this is the time to plant on benches. Be sure to have a good drainage in all cases, especially in the benches, as this is an important item. The soil must be one part rough peat and two parts well-rotted compost, with a little sand mixed under. I found it well to mix a little pulverized sheep manure with it.

"The distance to plant is about twelve to fifteen inches each way, but great care must be exercised in planting to see that it is not done too deeply, as the young, fibrous roots always run on top and those are the ones to take care of. Plant solidly, but not too firmly, and leave a little drain around each plant, so that each one can be watered separately.

"Two weeks after this the bench can be leveled off and packed some, but not too firmly, to give the water always a chance to run through the soil quickly.

"From September 15 on the critical time begins, as the plants will now show buds, and we all know that the most difficult part of flowering gardenias in winter is to keep the buds. Great care must be exercised from now until February 15. The falling off of buds is caused by irregular temperature, overwatering, running too dry, and by syringing with too cold water. Great care must be taken to avoid these mishaps.

CARNATION CUT.

D. J. Ryan, grower for Edgar Bourne, Methuen, Mass., from 3,700 plants of Lawson picked 14,000 flowers from October 8 to December 31, 1908. From 5,500 Enchantress in the same period an average of five and one-half flowers per plant was picked. C.

INDOOR OR OUTDOOR CULTURE?

Do you think Victory and Estelle carnations would do better if put directly in benches? Would they not come on better for Christmas if they did not have the check of moving from ground to bench in August? I am located in California. A. L. H.

The two varieties you mention have never been conspicuous for the size of the plants they produce in the field. Unless the cuttings are started early and pushed along steadily until planting time, only rather undersized plants will be available for benching. Estelle has been practically dropped in this part of the country, on account of its lack of vigor. Victory, however, is one of the leading and most profitable varieties in that color. Except for its disinclination to make good plants, it is very satisfactory to both grower and retailer.

We have never had any trouble in getting Victory reëstablished on the benches, and we find that when benched between July 15 and August 15 it will begin giving fine blooms on good stems by early November. Estelle has never transplanted satisfactorily with us, and was always late in giving a good cut.

If your facilities for growing the plants inside are good, the Estelle will likely do better when grown that way. Victory, however, will do better if grown in the field during the summer months. You will get better plants and far more blooms. Any variety which is inclined to grow straggly will give better results when planted in the field. The plants get more body to them, because the joints come shorter and the breaks seem to come freer.

In your California climate, conditions may be quite different from those in these parts. If your climate is mild throughout the year, I can see no reason why carnations should not do splendidly under the indoor method. It is the heat here during the summer which hurts the carnations most. You ought to have no trouble, either, in reëstablishing your plants quickly after benching, in your mild climate.

I would advise you to try Beacon, which not only makes fine, large plants under either method of culture, but is also easily transplanted. It is much easier to handle than either Victory or Estelle. A. F. J. B.

LUCK IN SEEDLING RAISING.

[A paper read by Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., before the class in floriculture at Massachusetts Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass., February 24, 1909.]

The type of greenhouse plays an important part in the improvement of the carnation. My preference is for a span roofed structure, with continuous ventilation on each side of the ridge and on sides, with raised benches, thus insuring a free circulation of air. The house may be built running north and south, or east and west, as location and other circumstances permit. The east and west aspect has the advantage for about six weeks in midwinter; the north and south about equal during early spring and fall, with a decided advantage during hot weather.

Only the healthiest and most vigorous stock procurable should be used and such varieties as embrace a wide range of self colors are most desirable.

To obtain the best results, the colors should be classified, keeping the different shades of light pink, dark pink, whites, crimson, reds, etc., together. By following up this method a much larger percentage will come true to color in crossing than where this is done promiscuously or haphazard.

A High Standard of Culture Essential.

If the plants at the period of cross fertilizing are in robust health, producing strong, vigorous shoots, which usually mean correspondingly large blooms, the seeds will invariably be large, of much greater vitality, producing strong and vigorous seedlings, from which one may naturally expect something phenomenal.

On the other hand, if the parent plants are poorly grown, weak, spindling, and lacking in stamina, their seedling progeny is sure to be of like quality. The most decided results, and greatest advances in my experience, have always been obtained from parent plants exhibiting unusual strength and vigor.

There is not, so far as I know, any means of ascertaining beforehand just what the result of a cross will be. If crosses are made between colors of a like shade and their progeny year after year, by continuing this method the seedling will, to a large extent, be a reproduction of the parents as to color. Habit of plant will often resemble either parent, or be exactly intermediate, but there is no certainty in the matter, as the most unlookedfor colors appear at times, such as a pure white from the crossing of two reds, or vice versa. We can only hope and work towards the desired end, and if we stick to it long enough success will ultimately crown our efforts.

One can invariably attain to anything he makes up his mind for, providing he has the staying qualities which defeat only spurs on to greater efforts, and here let me tell you is the explanation for the "good luck" of many. It comes simply by sticktoitiveness.

By some I have been termed lucky in the production of some desirable varieties. I leave this to your own judgment. For instance, I worked six years without satisfactory results to procure a worthy successor to Daybreak.

Origin of Enchantress.

During those years I raised hundreds of a similar color, but, as the song says, "There was always something wrong": Flowers too small, or too large and split, or stems too weak, plants lacking in constitution—something out of balance. In these efforts I had been using the pollen of Daybreak on other varieties. It occurred to me that I might be working along the wrong lines, so I reversed my tactics. By using the pollen of the Law

ZWEIFEL'S SUCCESS.

One of the popular men in the trade at Milwaukee, and one who is widely known through his regular attendance at all trade gatherings, is Nic Zweifel, the carnation grower, whose establishment is shown in the accompanying illustration. Mr. Zweifel's place has been growing steadily in recent years and he is now figuring on another addition for the current season. Within the last couple of years Mr. Zweifel has become a competitor at the leading flower shows and at Chicago last fall captured some of the principal awards for carnations at the national flower show. The premium which he most prizes is the one shown in the picture, being the gold trophy offered by Kroeschell Bros. Co. for the best vase of carnations exhibited by any grower using hot water for heating. There were eleven entries and Mr. Zweifel's Enchantress were judged the best of the lot. At the more recent exhibition at Indianapolis, skilled growers commended the dark pink seedling, No. 108, exhibited by Mr. Zweifel, which was awarded a certificate. He also has a number of other seedlings which are expected to turn out well.

COLLECT CHECKS PROMPTLY.

A check was made out to pay a bill and the party to whom it was given failed to deposit it until after, about ten days later, the bank had failed. Then he asked us to assume the loss by cashing our check. Is it right or legal that we should be compelled to stand the loss where this party had our check for a week and more and yet made no attempt to cash it? J. O. C.

It is assumed that the drawer of the check in this case had money enough in the bank to pay it. If that is true, the loss must fall upon the holder of the check. Anyone to whom a check is issued has a reasonable time in which to cash it. The depositor insures the safety of the bank during such time, but thereafter the money is at the risk of the holder of the check. It is not equitable that he should leave money in a bank indefinitely, for his own convenience, having in his possession a check by which he might draw it, and then put the loss upon the depositor if the bank fails.

The courts in a number of cases have defined the reasonable time during which the maker of a check guarantees the solvency of the bank. When the depositor and the person to whom the check was given and the bank are all in the same city or town, the holder of the check has the remainder of the day on which he got the check, and the whole of the next day, in which to collect it. If he lets that fraction of a day and full day go by without cashing the check, then the bank is holding the money at his risk. If the check has to be sent away by mail for collection, it must be put in the mails not later than the next day after it is received, and the agent to whom it is sent for collection must pre sent it to the bank not later than the next day after it comes into his hands.

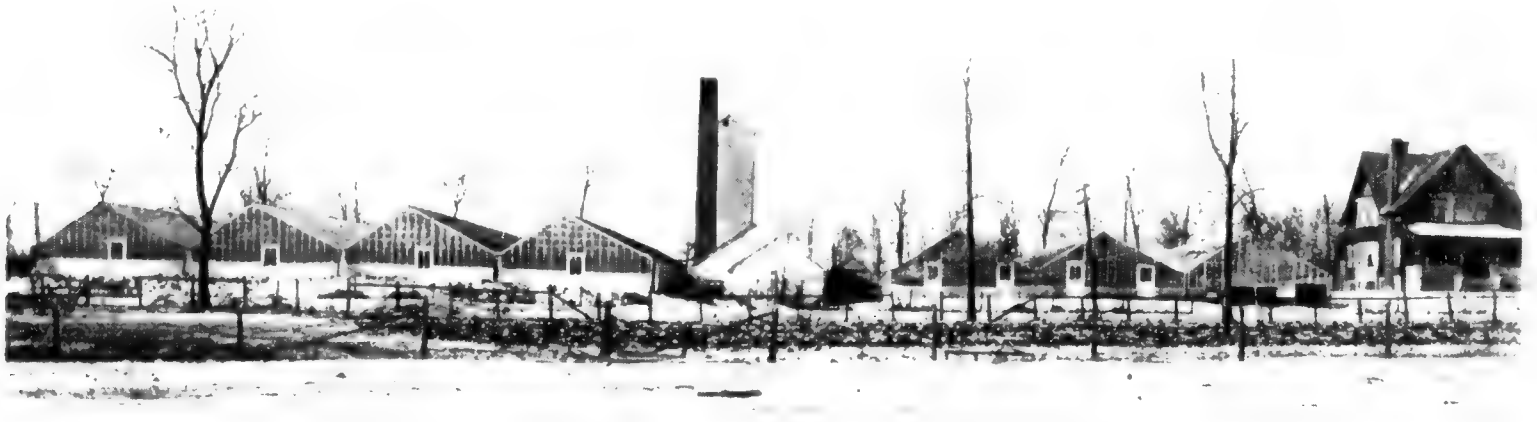
GARDENIAS FOR CUT BLOOMS.

"The best time for propagation is January and February," said Wm. Kleinheinz in a talk before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia. "Select your cuttings from strong growing, healthy plants. I have experimented with propagating in sand, in half peat and half sand, and also in a mixture of fine chopped sphagnum moss, peat and sand in equal parts, and have found this latter mixture the best, as I always get the strongest roots on cuttings propagated in this last mentioned composition.

"It is important to give sufficient heat I would say 75 to 80 degrees on bottom and 70 to 75 degrees on top. Syringe two or three times a day, protect from the sun, and never allow any draught to strike the cuttings. Under this treatment the cuttings will be rooted in from twenty to twenty five days.

"Then the young plants must be potted into 2 inch pots in a mixture of half peat and half well rotted compost. Never allow them to get dry, and protect from the sun for three or four days. Keep the house at a temperature of 68 to 72 degrees at night and 75 to 80 degrees in daytime, for about one week, until the young roots are coming through the soil, then commence to reduce the temperature to 65 to 68 degrees at night and 72 to 75 degrees during the daytime, and the young plants will soon begin to grow. In from three to four weeks the plants will be ready for a shift into 3 inch or 3½ inch pots, and the shifting must be repeated as often as necessary. Never allow the plants to get potbound.



"All the buds must be removed to secure a good, healthy growth. In the month of July the plants should be in 5 inch or 6 inch pots, and this is the time to plant on benches. Be sure to have a good drainage in all cases, especially in the benches, as this is an important item. The soil must be one part rough peat and two parts well rotted compost, with a little sand mixed under. I found it well to mix a little pulverized sheep manure with it.

"The distance to plant is about twelve to fifteen inches each way, but great care must be exercised in planting to see that it is not done too deeply, as the young, fibrous roots always run on top and those are the ones to take care of. Plant solidly, but not too firmly, and leave a little drain around each plant, so that each one can be watered separately.

"Two weeks after this the bench can be leveled off and packed some, but not too firmly, to give the water always a chance to run through the soil quickly.

"From September 15 on the critical time begins, as the plants will now show buds, and we all know that the most difficult part of flowering gardenias in winter is to keep the buds. should be about 10 degrees higher. As soon as the fibrous roots show on the surface a light top-dressing of half compost and half sheep manure must be applied, and repeated as often as necessary.

"This is one treatment under which I have grown gardenias with success, but I have tried another way also, with good results. I have been growing my plants up to 7-inch pots under glass all summer. By August 1 I removed the glass and kept the plants without glass until September 15. This ripens the wood and the flowering buds can be found at the end of each growth by this time. The plants have to be moved under the glass again when the nights get cooler. I have planted a bench, when the plants have been treated in this manner, by October 1 and cut a fine crop of flowers from December 15 on.

"This method gives anyone the chance to have gardenias in succession if you have different houses to plant in rotation, as you can hold them in a cool house at about 52 to 55 degrees at night, until wanted for forcing.

"The varieties grown are principally Veitchii, or florida, and floribunda. Gardenia Fortunei produces larger flowers, but is more suitable for summer flowering.

"All plants have their enemies, and so, also, has the gardenia. The worst of all is the mealy bug. Syringing with a mixture of lemon oil and Rose-leaf Extract keeps them in check, but the best and surest remedy is prevention. This can be accomplished only by heavy syringing with a good force of water, in summer I would say three times a day, and as the days get shorter reduce to one, or in bright days, two applications."

FLORISTS' PROBLEMS.

[A summary of a recent address by Prof. W. S. Blair, of Macdonald College, Quebec, before the Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club.]

In Montreal and vicinity there are about a half million square feet under glass, devoted to commercial floriculture and vegetable forcing. In comparison, we have one acre under glass to 200 acres devoted to the same line of work in other parts of America. It is not necessary for me to state that a number of problems of great interest to you as florists could be worked out at considerable saving to the trade at some place erected for the purpose. So far as I know, no aid has been sought for such work in the Province. Yet you have at your service, without any cost, and without any effort on your part, a range of greenhouses thoroughly up-to-date in every particular, donated by Sir Wm. C. Macdonald of your city, and situated at Macdonald College, P. Q., where experiments in your interests are and will be conducted. This certainly is a gift of which the florists and gardeners of this Province should be proud, for through it we shall be able to keep pace with those engaged in similar lines in other parts of America, all of whom are receiving more or less state or provincial aid.

The College Greenhouses.

Our houses are well known to the most of you. They comprise four 100-foot houses, built in block, with glass partitions dividing each span of 21¾ feet, and these houses are again divided, giving us eight houses, each under thermostatic control. I personally planned these houses, so hesitate to say much about them. What was in mind when developing the plan was to assist those who intend making a living out of plants under glass, so that they would be able to get the largest possible crop at the least possible expense, and would thus be able to supply a larger number of people with such plants at the lowest possible rate. For this purpose, to conduct effective experiments, crops must be grown on a commercial scale and marketed in a commercial way. A quantity of certain crops must be produced and placed upon the general market, and this continued for a number of years, in order to determine accurately and give reliable information. Yes, in our experiments the business end is always in view, not in assuming what we might have got, but by placing our produce on the general market and taking chances with growers in the same line. It has always seemed to me that many of our provincial and state aid experiment stations cut off their work at the business end, simply because some grower feels that to place such goods on the market would infringe on his business. The idea is entirely wrong from every standpoint, so far as I can see. Of course, it is possible to abuse such a privilege, but if honestly done, no one suffers.

The only fault I can find with the greenhouses erected is that they are only about half large enough to carry on the most efficient work. As an educational institution we have to devote considerable space to demonstration and student practice work, cutting down the area for our experimental work considerably.

Our intention at the start was to erect several styles of construction, but, on close investigation, it was decided that the difference in form of up-to-date construction, so far as utility goes, is slight, and that a whole range of uniform construction, such as the average grower might put up, would be more valuable.

The Benches.

Considerable thought was put on the arrangement and building of the benches. Possibly our experiments to determine some of the best styles of bench are not duplicated elsewhere. We have the solid side benches, two and a half feet high, in some cases filled with earth to the bench soil, in other cases with rough excavation stone, and cinders in some cases also. Some of the benches have 2½-foot sides, with openings into 2½-inch tile, laid close together below the bench soil, and below these again there is simply soil, excavation stone or cinders. In other benches with 2½-foot sides, there are 4-inch openings in line, four inches apart and eighteen inches below the top of the bench, opening into excavation rock or cinder, which fills the center of the bed. We have low benches, with simply 8-inch coping, and elevated benches. These benches are arranged differently in different houses. The object is to determine the best style of bench for different crops, and the best arrangement of these benches in the house.

In the construction of the benches, we aimed to take up as little space as possible with the thickness of bench sides. The benches are all made of cinder concrete, reinforced with wire. The bench sides, except of the elevated benches, were made of cement slabs, three inches thick at the bottom, two inches at the top, two feet eight inches wide, and five and one-half feet long. These were made on their flat, and electric weld wire placed in the middle of the slab, allowing four inches to project at each end of the slab. After they were well set, they were lifted and taken to the house, set in place, and the wire at the ends hooked together. Then thin concrete was run in between the joints by putting up boards to hold it, and the whole braced on the inside by an occasional cement beam to prevent spreading. Should anyone wish additional information on their construction, I should be glad to supply it.

We have not been long enough at the work to give any information on the relative merit of these benches, but hope to do so in time.

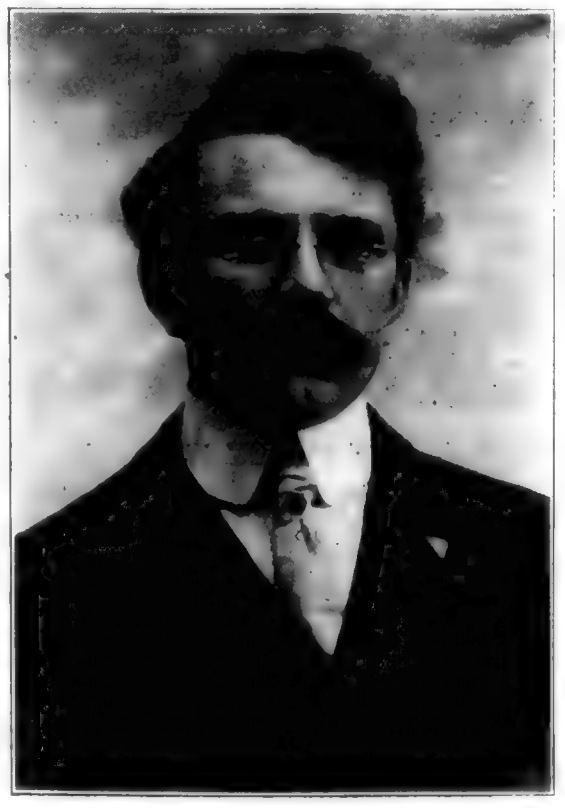
Experiments With the Soil.

The problem of greenhouse soil will receive our attention. An experiment that we propose to take up is the growing of a crop on the benches, principally in the summer, for the purpose of incorporating fibrous roots, and bringing about a rotation, saving the work of renewing bench soil so often. This, of course, is impracticable with some crops, but it seems possible that some quick-growing, heat-loving crop will prove useful in this connection.

The physical condition of the soil for various crops has not received enough attention, and in this connection we have experiments under way in which the soil has been incorporated with chopped alfalfa in different proportions. Experiments aiming to get more definite information as to the physical property of soils best suited to greenhouse crops will be taken up as rapidly as possible.

Other Proposed Experiments.

The best time for benching up different crops to get the best results has not been well worked out in our northern districts, and along this line we aim to devote some time. Selection of cuttings from the most productive plants, to increase the yield, is a problem not worked out on a commercial basis. I fancy that if the florists could see by concrete experiments an increase in cut of bloom equal to 25 cents a plant, through such a system, some attention would be paid to this important question. Then we have the problem of getting pure, fresh air into our houses during the cold winter months, when no ventilators can be opened. The question also of per cent of moisture in the air during the winter months is one worthy of attention in this section.



Experiments to determine the temperature at which we can develop different crops most economically during our winter months is one on which several thousand dollars could profitably be expended.

There are countless experiments that could be carried on, giving light on the various sides of this occupation. Limited space, continuation of the experiments over a number of years, and the fact that several different experiments cannot be conducted at once in the same house, make the working out of these problems necessarily slow.

THE NEWBURYS' PLACE.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph made at the establishment of the Newburys, at Mitchell, S. D. The plant at present contains 38,000 feet of glass and is already the largest cut flower establishment in the Dakotas, but a further extension of glass area is planned for the approaching summer, which will bring the glass up to over 50,000 feet.

OBITUARY.

J. S. Haskins.

J. S. Haskins, a pioneer florist of Chicago, died at his home, 337 East Forty-second street, on Sunday, February 28. Mr. Haskins was born in Vermont in 1820. He came west in 1854 and settled in Montello, Wis., on a farm. Just after the Civil war he moved to Chicago and opened a retail flower store at the corner of Lake and State streets. Later he moved to Twenty-second street and Wabash avenue, where he was located for a number of years, retiring from active business about 1890, on account of poor health. Since that time he had lived in retirement, with his wife. Most of the old florists of his time are gone, but no doubt the few that are left will remember him.

The burial took place at the West Side cemetery, at Rockford, Ill. John W. Ingalls, of Rockford, is a nephew.

J. J. Nussbaumer.

J. J. Nussbaumer died at his residence on Koberlin street, San Angelo, Tex., at 12:30 Sunday, February 28. Funeral services were held at the residence Tuesday morning, March 2, interment following at Fairmount cemetery.

Mr. Nussbaumer was born June 3, 1860, and was therefore nearing the forty-ninth milestone on life's road. He moved to San Angelo from Okawville, Ill., in 1895, to regain his health. He was a druggist by trade, but after moving to San Angelo he decided that outdoor work was what he needed and started greenhouses in East Angelo.

The mother, Mrs. Annie M. Nussbaumer; the wife, Mrs. Ella N. Nussbaumer, and son, Morgan, survive him.

Mr. Nussbaumer had been identified with the growth of San Angelo for thirteen years, and was one of its most highly esteemed citizens.

J. B. O'Neil.

J. B. O'Neil, son of B. O'Neil, the well known florist at Elgin, Ill., died at Elgin Friday, March 5, after a prolonged illness with tuberculosis. He was a bright and popular young man and was known to a large number of the trade through having traveled for some years, until his health failed, in the interest of Vaughan's Seed Store. He was 29 years of age. The funeral was held March 8 and was largely attended, among those present being many florists from Elgin and the surrounding towns and a number from Chicago.

OBITUARY.

J. S. Haskins.

J. S. Haskins, a pioneer florist of Chicago, died at his home, 337 East Forty-second street, on Sunday, February 28. Mr. Haskins was born in Vermont in 1820. He came west in 1851 and settled in Montello, Wis., on a farm. Just after the Civil war he moved to Chicago and opened a retail flower store at the corner of Lake and State streets. Later he moved to Twenty-second street and Wabash avenue, where he was located for a number of years, retiring from active business about 1890, on account of poor health. Since that time he had lived in retirement, with his wife. Most of the old florists of his time are gone, but no doubt the few that are left will remember him.

The burial took place at the West Side cemetery, at Rockford, Ill. John W Ingalls, of Rockford, is a nephew

J. J. Nussbaumer.

J. J. Nussbaumer died at his residence on Koberlin street, San Angelo, Tex., at 12:30 Sunday, February 28. Funeral services were held at the residence Tuesday morning, March 2, interment following at Fairmount cemetery.

Mr. Nussbaumer was born June 3, 1860, and was therefore nearing the forty ninth milestone on life's road. He moved to San Angelo from Okawville, Ill., in 1895, to regain his health He was a druggist by trade, but after moving to San Angelo he decided that outdoor work was what he needed and started greenhouses in East Angelo

The mother, Mrs. Annie M Nussbaumer; the wife, Mrs. Ella N. Nussbaumer, and son, Morgan, survive him.

Mr. Nussbaumer had been identified with the growth of San Angelo for thirteen years, and was one of its most highly esteemed citizens

J. B. O'Neil.

J. B. O'Neil, son of B. O'Neil, the well known florist at Elgin, Ill., died at Elgin Friday, March 5, after a prolonged illness with tuberculosis. He was a bright and popular young man and was known to a large number of the trade through having traveled for some years, until his health failed, in the interest of Vaughan's Seed Store. He was 29 years of age. The funeral was held March 8 and was largely attended, among those present being many florists from Elgin and the surrounding towns and a number from Chicago

Montgomery, Ala.—W. B. Paterson's Rosemont Gardens now are located in their own store at 116 Dexter avenue, on the principal street, next to the post-office, with a large, roomy store, and a conservatory in the rear. Montgomery is large enough to support a first-class flower store, and this they propose to make their establishment.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19 to 22, 1909.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THE REVIEW has more subscribers in the state of New York than in any other state in the Union. Pennsylvania is second, Ohio third.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the REVIEW $2, $3 or occasionally $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

EVERY retail florist, and every one who sells goods, for that matter, should go back to the REVIEW of February 25 and March 4 and re-read the splendid articles by Edward MacMulkin. No better stuff has ever appeared in print.

THERE is a special demand for men who can take hold of garden work, plan and plant it at a profit. The smaller landscape work calls for better help than the average florist uses for his bedding-out, and the number of these minor landscape jobs is increasing with great rapidity.

THE FARMER IS KING.

"The cultivation and sale of flowers is advanced farming—and the farmer is King. There is nothing today, or ever has been, that will yield as good results on the money invested as farming, but it must be given the same attention to detail as any other line of business. As a good florist should be an advance on a good farmer, he should be able to get better returns for his labor."—EDWARD MACMULKIN.

STORM IN VIRGINIA.

The big storm that upset all the plans for the inauguration at Washington March 4 extended down to the sources of the principal supply of outdoor southern jonquils and caused the Virginian growers much loss. Communication has been so interrupted that it is difficult to say just what the damage has been, but the storm cut off the shipments of flowers for several days and has undoubtedly curtailed the supply for the balance of the season. The shipments were just getting under fair headway. They increase year by year and so far this season the stock has been of excellent quality, packed carefully and selling well. The prospects are that the quality of the bulbs produced will not be injured by the inopportune storm of wind and sleet.

GENERAL BUSINESS.

General business is steadily improving, and in the middle west is not only better than in 1908 but better than in 1907. At Chicago, for instance, the bank clearings last week were a new record—more money changed hands than in any previous week in the history of the Chicago clearing house. The general industries of the country are well above the 1908 level, but are not yet approaching 1907.

READ EVERYWHERE.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time:

I disposed of all the stock I advertised in the Review, both for sale and to exchange. Had answers from New York and from California, and all the way between.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., registers Carnation Conquest; parentage, Daybreak-Lawson and unknown seedling; color, light pink overlaid with deep rose pink; size of flower, three to three and one-half inches; habit, like Lawson, with a stem as long as Enchantress and very stiff. Withdrawal of Registry Application.

Under date of March 1, 1909, C. G. Roebling, by James Goodier, gardener, withdraws application of February 5, 1909, for the registration of Cattleya Eureka, stating that he has been informed by Mr. Orpet, of South Lancaster, Mass., that the same hybrid was exhibited by him under the name of L. C. Johannson.

Board Meeting.

The regular mid-Lent meeting of the executive board is called for Saturday, 8 p. m., March 13, at the Sinton hotel, Cincinnati. By order of President Valentine. W. N. RUDD, Sec'y.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Last week was distinctly better than its predecessor. Prices on the average were lower than they have been any time up to Ash Wednesday, but since buyers have come to know that prices are moderate and values good, with the assurance that they can take orders without being in danger of finding the market bare when they try to pick up the stock, they feel encouraged to take hold liberally. The result was that a large volume of business was done all through last week.

There are no heavy supplies of Beauties, but other roses are abundant, and every buyer's needs can be satisfied. It

Fine — Fresh — Fragrant
Fancy Peas

We have many thousands daily

Nothing in the market to compare with our Fancy grade. They make a hit wherever used. Can supply splendid, long-stemmed Pink, Lavender and White in any quantity. We are doing a big business in these, both local and shipping, because they never fail to please.

REMEMBER—To be sure you get them in best condition, we pick specially each afternoon the stock to fill all shipping orders on file at 12 o'clock.

Fancy Carnations

The way we have built our business to its present large proportions is by handling regularly—all the time—the best grade of goods this market affords. Our carnations have been a strong factor in our success. They will do as much for you and your trade if you handle them regularly. Remember—it's not what you pay but what you get that determines value.

Fancy Roses

Maid, Killarney, Richmond and Bride are in extra fine form. Our supply is large and we can meet any requirements. Fancy long stock, and fine heads on the shorter stems. Note our prices and order liberally. If your customers see them, they'll sell.

Fancy Violets

Push the Violet trade—there's money in it. We handle the cream of the stock, both New York Doubles and Home-grown Singles, and can supply in quantity. Write or wire for prices on special large lots.

Fancy Bulb Stock

Tulips in all colors—long-stemmed, fancy stock. Fine Jonquils and Daffodils; popular for table work. Plenty of Easter Lilies and Callas. Fancy Valley ALWAYS on hand.

Green Goods

We have a large supply of Smilax, fine, long, heavy strings. Can furnish Asparagus Sprays in bunches. Also, the best Hardy cut Ferns in this market. All other Greens of highest quality.

is a condition which leads to general satisfaction throughout the trade. The quality of roses, except Beauties, is all that could be desired, the stock is fine, and with moderate prices a big business is again being done in roses.

Carnations are coming in heavily, and are of excellent quality. The regular buyers are getting good value for their money, and when it comes Friday there always is someone to clean up the accumulation at a price in proportion to the freshness and condition of the stock. There is a prospect of a flurry in white at the end of this week and the beginning of the next one, but the wholesalers do not undertake to say whether the average price will go up or down. It looks as though the growers were storing up the white carnations in anticipation of the demand for them to dye for St. Patrick's day. St. Pat does not like sleepy flowers much better than St. Nick does, so an overstocked market will surely result in loss for the growers. First-class white carnations will command a good price next week; they have been known to go up to 5 cents upon a similar occasion. Large quantities of dye are being sold.

The sweet pea is the flower of the hour; those who have the right goods are doing a big business, and some houses are so well fixed that their sales on this specialty run into a fine total. But at the same time the overstock of the short stuff is so great these have little sale; almost none at all unless they are white. The retailers are handling fancy sweet peas in large quantities.

The violet appears to have been relegated to a minor position. The supplies continue heavy, but the quality does not average as well as it did and prices are low, except for the very best goods. The retailers still are handling violets in quantity, but there is no excitement in this department. Bulbous stock is less abundant than it was, but still ample for all requirements. Southern Illinois jonquils are in heavy supply and exceedingly slow sale. The green goods market is quiet.

Club Meeting.

Thirty-two were present at the club meeting March 4. A committee consisting of E. F. Winterson, P. J. Foley and Walter Scott was appointed, after full discussion, to confer with the executive committee of the Horticultural Society with regard to the club's interests in the fall flower show.

The resignation of J. H. Pepper as recording secretary was received with regret and L. H. Winterson unanimously elected in his place. Mr. Pepper is about to remove to New York.

A wreath was ordered sent to the funeral of E. V. Hallock, president of the New York Florists' Club, and J. H. Pepper, J. C. Vaughan and F. F. Benthey were appointed to prepare suitable resolutions.

The following new members were elected: Allie Zech, Emil Maerz, Paul Kubish, Frank Ayers, F. Haage, F. Krause, Chas. Zapfe, R. F. Simons, F. Merker, Charles Bemish and George Armbrust, of Oak Park, and Chas. S. McCauley, of Geneva. Ten new members were proposed.

Allie Zech was added to the committee on sports.

Refreshments were served, as usual.

Death of Mrs. Kidwell.

Ida M. Kidwell, wife of John F. Kidwell, of J. F. Kidwell & Bro., died at 5:30 p. m., Tuesday, March 9, of cancer of the stomach. She was 50 years, 6 months, 26 days of age. The funeral will be held Friday, at 1 p. m., from the family home, 3804 Wentworth avenue, thence by carriages to Mount Hope.

Various Notes.

H. Bauske, when he made up his mind to seek outside the houses for the cause of the trouble in the west end of his range, secured Alderman Reinberg's assistance in getting the gas company to send out its men and waste no time about it. A leak was found and stopped. Mr. Bauske is one of the best rose growers for this market, and it is said the plants already are breaking nicely for a fresh start.

H. N. Bruns and E. Wienhoeber have returned from a fortnight's trip east. They visited several cities on a circle tour, going the northern way and returning by the southern route. They were in Washington the balmy spring day Taft became president.

E. C. Amling reports that spring is twelve days' earlier than last year in southern Illinois. Last year his first jonquils came March 16; this year, March 4.

Those who went from Chicago to Elgin March 8 to attend the funeral of J. B. O'Neil were Carl Cropp, A. Henderson, J. B. Deamud, George Asmus and John Degnan.

O. J. Friedman has changed his plans and, instead of moving to Jackson boulevard May 1, will move early in April to 185 Michigan avenue, a vacant store which is now being remodeled for his use.

Peter Tremulis, well known in this market, opened a flower store March 6 at Rockford, Ill., which had hitherto been without a Greek retailer. No doubt the Rockford florists would have been content to struggle along under the old conditions, for the new store sold to the public on the opening day $200 worth of stock bought in this market.

L. Coatsworth has been laid up for several days with an attack of rheumatism.

"Wire Jack" is dead. He passed away March 6 and was buried March 9. He had been with Kennicott Bros. Co. practically ever since the firm was started. Anyone who had a dime for every wire frame Jack has made would

White Lilac

$1.00 per bunch. This crop of lilac, now ready, is of the larger variety, and very fine stock. This price is one-third lower than we ever sold it before and we know it will meet with large demand, as it is the high-class spring flower of the market.

Killarney

A fine crop in all length stems. The heads are exceptionally long and large—with color. In saying they are the finest stock in Chicago, we voice the opinions of the most careful and critical buyers on the market. $4.00 to $12.00 per 100.

Maids

Something choice. They are their own best salesman. A trial convinces. $3.00 to $8.00 per 100.

Carnations

White Perfection, White Enchantress, White Lawson, Lady Bountiful. The best white on the market. Our Victory, a red; has not been out-classed yet. Lawson and Enchantress—Winsor—well grown and fancy stock, $2.00 and $3.00 per 100. For St. Patrick's day, white stock billed at Chicago market rates.

Tulips

Fancy varieties. $3.00 to $5.00 per 100.

Valley

A good grade, $3.00 per 100.

Violets

Eastern and Home-grown—single and double. Our wide experience in handling Violets—our choice selection of the best growers of fancy stock—the fact that we can always fill your orders with stock that is fresh—are reasons why everybody wants Randall's Violets.

Easter Lilies

Longiflorum Giganteums. Our reputation as to these flowers for Easter has been established for years. Grown by the most critical grower, from the most expensive bulbs. Packed at the greenhouse and shipped in original packages direct to the consumer. No bruised or inferior flowers. You can't afford anything but the best in this line at Easter time. Get our prices. C. E. Morton, formerly a retailer in this city and now part owner of the Redondo Floral Co., Los Angeles, is in town for a visit.

Fred Sperry, of Vaughan & Sperry, observed Lent by partaking of finnan haddies for dinner March 2. The result was a case of ptomaine poisoning which laid him up for a week.

C. M. Dickinson was advised March 8 that President C. E. Gullett, of the State Florists' Association, has appointed him a vice-president and member of the board of directors for two years. Mr. Dickinson became a life member of the society at the last Springfield meeting.

The Chicago representation at the Buffalo rose show will not be large. August Poehlmann is president and will preside at the convention. George Asmus will attend, going from Cincinnati, where he will attend a meeting of the S. A. F. board of directors March 13 to 15.

The Atlas Floral Co. is now running the two stores at 35 and 39 Randolph street, but the latter will be given up when the lease is out.

Mrs. F. Beu, who was the first one to show green-dyed carnations in this section, has invented a dye for coloring whites yellow. She says it is selling even better than the green dye.

Schnell & Poppe, on West Madison street, will retire from business.

Peter Reinberg was 51 years old March 5. His neighbors and friends waited until Sunday evening for a surprise and celebration. As a memento of the occasion they presented him with a handsome humidor. Mr. Reinberg declares that he will not again run for alderman, but is being urged by the party leaders to stand for the democratic nomination for mayor.

Louis Wittbold has made a number of improvements in his cement bench construction during the winter, and E. H. Hunt is preparing for an active season on the Wittbold specialties. Undoubtedly the time will come when practically all bench construction will be of concrete.

F. F. Benthey says he finds Winsor well liked by the retailers for its keeping qualities. It is among the best of the carnations for shipping.

It is reported that the Milwaukee parties who were preparing to go into the greenhouse business at Maywood have got cold feet and forfeited their payment for an option on the land.

George Reinberg is now cutting cattleyas quite heavily.

The A. L. Randall Co. says the approach of Easter is quite apparent in the supply department.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

March has maintained its reputation as the blizzard month and last week, into the midst of a most delightful spring temperature, suddenly hurled the worst wind, snow, rain and sleet storm since the great blizzard of 1888. Trees, wires and even houses fell before the gale. The bad weather lasted until the week ended. Its only good effect was a fair advance in the values of roses. These advanced about twenty-five per cent above the quotations of the beginning of the week, especially for the best quality of Maids, Brides and Beauties. Cattleyas also have made a move forward and are not plentiful. Occasionally $1 each was asked for the choicest selections. Washington took about everything first-class that could be spared for the national celebration.

Carnations hold their average well, and quality is now at its high tide. Lent has doubtless had some effect upon the volume of business, so many society people having retired to the sackcloth and ashes of their country places. Weddings are scarcer, the big balls are about over and the notable dinners have had their day and are forgotten. Violets remain at low ebb in price and abundant in quantity. Only the special large bunches of selected touch 50 cents. The street men load up daily with the leftovers, at as low as Easter is in the air. Less than a month before the festival which promises this year to be greater than any of its predecessors, and for which growers and plantsmen are preparing with evident expectation of an overwhelming demand.

The Funeral of E. V. Hallock.

The funeral of E. V. Hallock was held Saturday, March 6, at Queens, L. I., and was largely attended, many of his friends from Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and nearer cities and towns paying their last tribute to the memory of one who was universally loved and respected. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. They filled the room where the body reposed and were banked on every side in loving arrangement and profusion. The offerings of the New York Florists' Club and the Society of American Florists were especially beautiful. John B. Nugent, Jr., made up many of the set pieces, and they were on exhibition in his windows and seen by thousands before being sent away. The New York Florists' Club especially feels the great loss and bereavement whereby their honored president was so suddenly called away. By his unselfish devotion to the club's welfare and his active participation in every department of its life, he had endeared himself to all its mem-

Club Meeting.

The March meeting of the Florists' Club was largely attended, nearly 100 members being present. Harry Turner occupied the president's chair. All routine business, on motion of C. B. Weathered and F. H. Traendly, was suspended. The sudden death of President E. V. Hallock, Tuesday, March 2, weighed heavily on the club members and the evening was one of sadness and expression of sympathy for the bereaved. Feeling addresses were made by Harry Turner, Patrick O'Mara, Benjamin Hammond, Isaac Hendrickson, F. H. Traendly and C. H. Totty. These were reminiscent and covered twenty years of fellowship and affectionate esteem. Mr. Hallock's charming personality, his devotion to the interests of horticulture, to the school gardens, and especially his earnest loyalty to the club of which he was so proud, were the themes of those who paid loving tribute to his memory. Resolutions on his death were read by W. F. Sheridan and adopted by the club.

A grand exhibit of roses was staged, but the report of the committee on awards was held over until the April meeting of the club and adjournment was made early, with no business considered, out of respect to the memory of the departed president.

The volume presented by one of the club members for the best new rose of 1908 or 1909 introduction was awarded the Waban Rose Conservatories for White Killarney.

W. A. Manda showed the Cherokee rose, Rosa Sinica, and the South Orange Beauty. A vase of My Maryland came from Myers & Samtman, Philadelphia. Vases of twenty-five Richmond and twenty-five Killarney were from A. Farenwald, Philadelphia. Brides and Maids came from Henry Hentz, Jr. A vase of My Maryland was from A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn. White Killarney was staged by the F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown. Bride, Maid and Killarney were shown by W. G. Badgley, Chatham. American Beauties were from the Brant-Hentz Flower Co., of Madison, N. J. Chatenay, Mrs. Jardine, Kate Moulton and My Maryland were shown by Robert Simpson, Clifton, and a vase of Bridesmaid came from V. Hamann, of Summit, N. J.

The quality of all exhibits was excellent and the report of the award committee will doubtless do all the exhibitors full justice. The committee that got together such a display deserves great praise.

Visitors were H. A. Barnard, of H. Low & Co., England; A. Farenwald, of Philadelphia; Page F. Potter, of Rutland, Vt.; W. R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Wm. Weber, Oakland, Md.; M. Barker, Chicago, and many of the prominent rose growers of this vicinity.

Various Notes.

H. A. Barnard, representing Hugh Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, England, was in the city last week, and is making a business tour of the country.

Considering the inclement weather, Wm. Elliott says his auction sale last week, the first of the season, was more than satisfactory. He considers the outlook for the auction sale of nursery stock as exceptionally good.

of Bayside, L. I., and Miss Emma Trojan, of Elmhurst, L. I., were married on inauguration day, March 4, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lynch, the retail florist at Jersey City. Mrs. Millang has been the efficient bookkeeper of the firm during the last six years, and will continue in her position for a time. She is a charming and popular young lady.

St. Patrick's day, Wednesday, March 17, promises a procession of nearly 100,000 loyal Hibernians, every one of whom will wear a green carnation if the florist has enough mesmeric power to make the demonstration popular. There will be many a green wholesale window Tuesday.

March 17 the annual banquet of the National Association of Gardeners takes place at Sheffel hall, Seventeenth street and Third avenue, at 8 p. m. At the same place the two days' exhibition will be seen and many prizes will be awarded. Large crowds are expected. After the banquet several New Yorkers will take the midnight train for the rose convention in Buffalo.

J. Von der Linden is no longer president of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., 39 Twenty-eighth street. Jacob Houck, of Bloomfield, N. J., now holds that honor, and J. J. Brozat, instead of A. Kramer, is the treasurer. Manager Coan reports the aggregate of business for February in advance of any month since the association was formed.

Miss Murray, of Montreal, was a recent visitor.

W. Atlee Burpee, of Philadelphia, and J. C. Vaughan, of Chicago, were among those from a distance at E. V. Hallock's funeral. Many of the prominent growers and wholesalers of New Jersey, Long Island and New York were also in attendance.

Julius Roehrs, Sr., is back from his southern trip with John Westcott and Robert Craig to Cuba and the Isle of Pines.

James Lyons, with M. A. Bowe, a son of one of the old-time Staten Island florists, has the sympathy of all in the loss of his sister March 4. On the same day the mother of F. W. Creighton, one of A. T. Boddington's representatives, passed away, and the trade extends its sympathy to the bereaved.

The new Fleischman store is open at the corner of Forty-second street and Fifth avenue, only one door away from the establishment of Thomas Young, Jr. Only a couple of blocks away another high-class store will open in the fall. Fifth avenue from Thirty-fourth street to Fifty-seventh street will have more handsome florists' stores appealing to æsthetic Manhattan than any other city on the globe can show.

Charles Thorley moves from Broadway to West Twenty-eighth street April 15.

The old Fleischman store on Broadway and Twenty-fifth street, with its $30,000 fixtures and $10,000 ice box, still has the sign "To let" in its windows.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The market has adapted itself to Lenten conditions. The lower level of prices has brought more buyers into the market, adding tone. Rose and carnation crops are not particularly heavy, the demand being about sufficient to absorb the supply at listed quotations. Violets are in strong supply, and on the stormy days of last week were hard indeed to market. Bulbous flowers are also in oversupply, but where prices are reduced most of the stock finds buyers. Harrisii lilies are more abundant and of fine quality. Gardenias are plentiful. Cattleya Schrœderiana is practically the only orchid obtainable. Smilax is selling a little better, but prices have not advanced. There is considerable shipping; local business rather dull, except funeral work.

The new crop of American Beauty roses is expected shortly, but has not yet made its appearance.

Southern daffodils are fairly plentiful.

The Isle of Pines.

Robert Craig returned last week from his visit to the Isle of Pines, where he spent the month of February. His son, Robert A. Craig, authorizes the announcement that his father has purchased a place of 175 acres on this island, including a house, barn and other buildings. The Isle of Pines is 100 miles due south of Cuba. The climate is delightful, summer all the year around, with wet and dry seasons. Here, it is understood, Mr. Craig proposes growing dracæna canes in particular, and other plants and vegetables in general. The Isle of Pines Appeal is authority for the statement that the price paid was $15,000.

Adjustable Waterproof.

M. Rice is enthusiastic in his commendation of the new pot covers manufactured for his firm. The strong point about these pot covers is that they are flexible, and will fit different makes and sizes of pots and pans. "Usable, serviceable, and adaptable" is the way Mr. Rice puts it. All are made in two shades of green, the one outside, the other inside, and may be turned over, with a collar, so to speak, when used on a pan, or placed in full position on a standard size pot. Mr. Rice thinks this novelty of last season is the best supply sent out in many a day.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. William Bayersdorfer, father and mother of "the merchant prince" of this city, will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary March 15.

John Ratcliffe, of Ratcliffe & Tanner, Richmond, Va., paid a flying visit to this city, leaving March 8.

Alexander B. Scott writes from Summerville, S. C., where he is spending his vacation, that he is enjoying playing golf fully as much as growing roses.

Prof. George Kaiser delivered an interesting lecture on "Mosses and Lichens" before the Germantown Horticultural Society March 8.

Ernest Zieger, of Pittsburg, Pa., was here last week.

The fakers bought heavily of violets for the inauguration of President Taft in Washington last week, and, as one of my friends described it, they got hurt, especially their feelings. It was mostly their feelings, as they only paid 8 cents a hundred for violets, and could not, therefore, lose much.

The Florex Gardens have commenced work on the two extensions of their carnation houses at North Wales, Pa.

William Rheder, of Wilmington, N. C., has been among the visitors to this city lately.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., returned from his southern trip March 7.

The Market.

We have entered well into Lent and the first week was evidently kept to the letter, if denying themselves such luxuries as flowers is keeping Lent. However, they have recovered somewhat and the last few days have not been so bad. Still, there is nothing doing in society among the "live ones" to help the decorators, and I heard the superintendent of one of our largest cemeteries complaining that things were very quiet among the "dead ones," not nearly the usual numbers of designs coming to the funerals, and less extras, such as the lining of graves with flowers and all the little touches the cemetery people add to catch a few dollars.

Notwithstanding all this, flowers are coming in more plentifully every day and the commission men are getting rid of them somehow or some place. Prices, of course, are suffering. The commission men are not holding so hard, and roses, violets and carnations, which are plentiful, are being sold for any price that will move them. Lilies are plentiful—enough and to spare. The supply of Beauties is poor, with quantities of culls for which there is no market, but they are not missed, for there are enough fine Richmond and Killarney, with stems twenty-four to thirty-six inches long, to take their place. The only trouble will be that when the Beauties arrive in quantities the buyers will be weaned away from them and fancy Richmond and Killarney will largely take their place.

The retail shops are showing some fine blooming plants and, where they grow them themselves, are pushing them harder than the cut flowers, which they have to buy. With the artistic decorations which are used and the prices at which the plants are sold, it is no wonder they are able to persuade cut flower buyers to take them.

The street stands are certainly profiting by the drop in price and make grand displays, selling fine carnations at 25 cents a dozen, violets in bunches of 100 for 25 cents and everything else at proportionately low prices.

The Florists' Club.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday night, March 2, and had the usual fine display of blooming plants from the home growers, the awards going to the worthy. The attention of the club was called to the fact that we are to get ready for next year's carnation convention and that there was no time like the present to begin, and President Burki had the following list of committee appointments read, in the selection of which he has shown his rare judgment, as every name seems to fit in just where he has placed it, as the right man in the right place:

Finance—E. C. Reineman, chairman; H. Meuschke, E. C. Ludwig, P. S. Randolph, John Bader, Geo. W. Burke.

Entertainment—T. P. Langhans, Saml. McClements, E. C. Reineman; chairman to be named.

Exhibition—A. W. Smith, manager; H. L. Blind, W. A. Clarke, W. Q. Potter, John Jones.

Reception—Chas. Crall, Gust Ludwig, De Forest Ludwig, Gust Frishkorn, Thos. Jenkinson, B. L. Elliott.

Press—Wm. Falconer, H. P. Joslin, Geo. W. Burke, E. C. Reineman.

Decoration—Ernest Zieger, J. W. Ludwig, Ed. Blind, Wm. Loew, E. A. Wiseman, Harvey Sheaf.

The following is the list of prizes awarded at the club's exhibit:

In the three classes for private gardeners, Fred Wissenbach was first in the class for forced bulbs and was awarded a cash prize donated by W. C. Beckert. In the class for forced flowering plants, other than bulbs, N. C. Madsen was awarded a cultural certificate for three fine lots of cyclamen. In the third class for private gardeners, Primula obconica, there were no exhibits.

Frank Crook, gardener for J. H. Park, showed a plant of Eranthemum pulchellum, a plant of Clivia miniata and a pot each of tulips, daffodils, hyacinths and amaryllis.

N. S. Park Conservatories showed two plants of Chorizema varium.

E. C. Ludwig, vase of mixed bulbous flowers.

Phipps Conservatories, a large table with thirty or more pans of tulips, hyacinths and daffodils; also cinerarias, and new Narcissus Elvira.

South View Floral Co. showed a vase of Rose-pink Enchantress, cut Saturday and keeping in good shape.

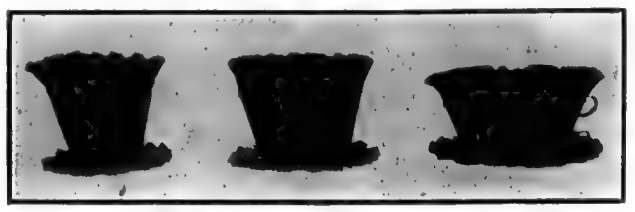
Various Notes.

Ernest Zieger, of the Zieger Co., has been in the east securing Easter novelties during the last week.

The retailers, who have been meeting occasionally for some time, met last Tuesday evening and took dinner at the Rittenhouse, and if they did not do much business they certainly had a pleasant social time. One thing is certain, that never in the history of the trade in this city has there been such good feeling among the several firms who in business must be strong competitors, and realizing that these meetings are the cause, they decided to continue them. Hoo-Hoo.

Boone, Ia.—J. Loehrer is favorably located in the central part of the town. He has a first-class store and spares no effort to run it in first-class style.

BOSTON.



The Market.

Business is a little quieter than it has been and prices have dropped a little. On the whole, however, Lenten conditions are satisfactory. February proved an excellent month and everything points to a banner Easter trade. Roses are more abundant, but the quality is not so good as a year ago. No such Killarney and Richmond are seen as in March, 1908, and first-class Beauties are not abundant. Bridesmaid is coming in of fine quality and will not be discarded right away, although Killarney is much the better seller. A few hybrids appeared this week. These, however, cut little figure in the market nowadays. Carnations are selling fairly well. Violets are in heavy supply. The greenhouse singles will soon be on the wane, however. A few hot days would finish some houses.

Bulbous stock goes a little more slowly, but does not accumulate as it did a year ago. Sweet peas are fine and sell well. Pansies are extra good. Valley sells more slowly. Gardenias are coming in a little more freely. Lilies are just enough for requirements. There are a fair number of callas. Of miscellaneous stock quite a variety is now coming in. Ferns are good, except hardy daggers. No change in smilax and asparagus.

Various Notes.

Several of the local craft are planning to take in the rose convention at Buffalo March 17. Exhibits from here will not be numerous. As a rule, roses are not quite up to last year's average in quality.

A large audience gathered at Horticultural hall March 6 to hear the closing lecture of the season, on "Various Methods of Propagation," by Jackson Dawson, and much disappointment and regret was felt when it was learned that sickness prevented Mr. Dawson from attending. His paper, however, was read by W. P. Rich. J. A. Pettigrew, who presided, called for a general discussion and many present participated.

Great regret was felt in and around Boston when the news of E. V. Hallock's sudden death became known. The Gardeners' and Florists' Club was planning a warm welcome for him on the occasion of his promised visit March 16. Robert Cameron will read a paper on "Perennials" in place of Mr. Hallock. There will be interesting exhibits and other attractions.

The members of the Boston Coöperative Flower Market feel sure of an excellent exhibition in Music Hall Market, March 20. About all stall-holders and quite a few outsiders will contribute.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co. are busy constructing their Japanese garden, which will be the star attraction of the coming spring show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, opening March 24. M. H. Walsh will again make a big display of specimen rambler roses in great variety. The mantel decorations are interesting to the retailers.

Quite a number of florists and gardeners are planning to attend the dedication ceremonies in connection with the new range of greenhouses at Amherst, Mass., March 12. J. K. M. L. Farquhar will make the principal address.

F. J. Dolansky, whose productions are well known at the Park Street market, is planning a large addition to his greenhouses during the coming season.

William Nicholson reports a brisk trade in shamrocks. Seed from all sources germinated poorly last season and he will be unable by many thousands to fill his orders.

There is a strong call for carnation plants, both pot grown and rooted cuttings, the demand according to the leading growers much exceeding the supply.

At the solicitation of a number of members it has been decided to postpone the Gardeners' and Florists' Club banquet until April 14, a better date than March 31, originally chosen. W. N. CRAIG.

During the last few days large crowds have been attracted to the show windows of Thomas F. Galvin, where W. W. Rawson & Co. have produced a most natural spring garden. The garden is edged with the old-fashioned English boxwood plants and these are bordered by a row of hyacinths which are just bursting into bloom. Each variety bears a label with its name attached. Real new grass has been used as a lawn effect and the flower beds, which contain hyacinths and lilies of the valley, are again edged by the pink Begonia Erfordii, which makes an excellent contrast. At the rear of a natural slope is a commodious bungalow with a broad veranda in front which is adorned by well-trimmed box trees. To the left evergreens form the appearance of a thicket where the undergrowth is nothing but lilies of the valley. The whole window is suggestive of spring.

WASHINGTON.

Inauguration Week.

The first official act of President Taft was not, as it should have been, to fire the weather man. Never did a government official more richly deserve discipline, for not only did the forecaster fail to give warning of the unparalleled storm which upset all the elaborate plans for inauguration day, but he actually predicted that the drizzle of March 3 would pass on and that we should have clear skies for that quadrennial day of days when all business Washington counts on garnering what the highbrows call dross and the shorthairs know as dough. The rain, and snow, and sleet, and wind simply put an end to all business of a transient nature with the florists. Of course the social functions, for which flowers had been ordered in advance, were held as scheduled, but the business would have been much larger had the weather been good. It even was difficult to secure the stock for orders that had to be filled March 4 and 5. Practically everything that comes in by rail was hours behind time.

The Inaugural Decorations.

The big job of the week was the decoration of the Pension building for the ball. J. H. Small & Sons did this. It was a rather more elaborate decoration than usual and used up a great deal of stock. The great inner court of the building was canopied with deep cream bunting and the walls were draped in the same color. Everywhere the old ivory tone was carried out, the only notes of color being in the floral decorations along the inner wall of the cloistered archway extending around the building, tier above tier, and in the massing of azaleas, bougainvilleas, rambler roses and other plants, forming a mass of blossoms about the fountain in the center.

The mural decoration of the cloistered archway was purely of grouped flowering plants and vines. These clusters of greens and brilliant hued blossoms crowned the spaces between the short pillars of the colonnade running around the hall, surmounting every arch. The dominant note of color was the brilliant pink of azaleas, which were used profusely, being massed with other plants in trailing smilax, asparagus, and festoons of southern smilax and laurel.

Azaleas, bougainvilleas, with rhododendrons of various hues, from shell pink to magenta and mauve, were massed with palms and tropical plants in the basin of the fountain, which was filled with water, though the jet of the fountain itself did not play. Plants and flowers completely covered the fountain proper, making a small island in the center of the basin, and the outer circle of plants was connected with the island now and then by tiny bridges of bark, the whole carrying out a sort of grotto effect. Acacia, spiræa, and other tall and graceful plants rose above the mass of clustered blossoms here and there, giving the effect of a suggestion of spring.

The president's box was made the brightest spot in the great scene, and in the supper and other rooms the florists had used much skill and stock.

Gude Bros. Co. put up the decorations in the court of honor on Pennsylvania avenue, where President Taft reviewed the great parade in spite of slush and storm. It is a joke that in the baskets that surmounted the masts the Gudes had used artificial waterproof flowers and plants. In many respects the storm lent a new and unexpected beauty to the setting that framed the pageant. The White House grounds presented an unbroken sheet of snow and the trees all along the route of the procession were heavily laden with the glistening covering. The court of honor, with its four orange and white pylons, and its myriad Venetian masts, looped together with hundreds of yards of laurel garlands, stood out gay and resplendent against a glittering white background. Snow fringed the shields and the garlands, and icicles clung to every staff from which floated the streamers inscribed with the monogram "TS," for Taft and Sherman.

All the leading stores, Shaeffer, Cooke, Freeman, Kramer, Loose, Blackistone, Marche and others, had a share of the work for the innumerable dinners and other affairs of the week.

There were any number of visitors in town, and quite a few florists among them, but the train service was so interrupted that thousands of people never left the station; having arrived too late for the spectacle, they took the first train

CARNATIONS.

son, color cerise, on the variety Mrs. Bradt, a white ground variegated with red, I procured Enchantress.

The Lawson was raised from Daybreak, a flesh-colored variety, with pollen from Van Leeuwen, a dark pink. You see the color of Daybreak cropping out.

Was this simply chance? Or was it the working out of Mendell's theory? There is food for reflection and careful study along these lines.

Again, I can tell you that from a batch of first year seedlings tested three years ago, we retained 250 scarlets for a test in the greenhouse, and that today we have three left of the 250 varieties, with the possibility of disseminating one. Of the remaining 3,250 we retained four, with a possibility of disseminating two or three at most. Think of it! Four out of 3,500! Then tell me where the luck comes in.

Yet, a few years ago hundreds of those varieties so discarded would have been called wonders. It is owing to the present high standard of the carnation that it becomes more difficult each year to produce a decided acquisition. Yet, looking backward through the earliest years of my experiments, I can see where I discarded many a fine carnation through this critical sifting down. Still it is much better to be on the safe side.

Time to Fertilize.

The best time to commence cross fertilization is during late October or early November; that is, just after the disappearance of flies and bees that usually come into the greenhouses on the approach of cold weather. Pollen at this season is also more plentiful than during December, January or February.

The best time in the day to cross-fertilize is from 11 a. m. to 2 p. m., the earlier the better, providing of course that the day is warm and sunny and the pollen perfectly dry. WASHINGTON.

Inauguration Week.

The first official act of President Taft was not, as it should have been, to fire the weather man. Never did a government official more richly deserve discipline, for not only did the forecaster fail to give warning of the unparalleled storm which upset all the elaborate plans for inauguration day, but he actually predicted that the drizzle of March 3 would pass on and that we should have clear skies for that quadrennial day of days when all business Washington counts on garnering what the highbrows call dross and the shorthairs know as dough. The rain, and snow, and sleet, and wind simply put an end to all business of a transient nature with the florists. Of course the social functions, for which flowers had been ordered in advance, were held as scheduled, but the business would have been much larger had the weather been good. It even was difficult to secure the stock for orders that had to be filled March 4 and 5. Practically everything that comes in by rail was hours behind time.

The Inaugural Decorations.

The big job of the week was the decoration of the Pension building for the ball. J. H. Small & Sons did this. It was a rather more elaborate decoration than usual and used up a great deal of stock. The great inner court of the building was canopied with deep cream bunting and the walls were draped in the same color. Everywhere the old ivory tone was carried out, the only notes of color being in the floral decorations along the inner wall of the cloistered archway extending around the building, tier above tier, and in the massing of azaleas, bougainvilleas, rambler roses and other plants, forming a mass of blossoms about the fountain in the center.

The mural decoration of the cloistered archway was purely of grouped flowering plants and vines. These clusters of greens and brilliant hued blossoms crowned the spaces between the short pillars of the colonnade running around the hall, surmounting every arch. The dominant note of color was the brilliant pink of azaleas, which were used profusely, being massed with other plants in trailing smilax, asparagus, and festoons of southern smilax and laurel.

Azaleas, bougainvilleas, with rhododendrons of various hues, from shell pink to magenta and mauve, were massed with palms and tropical plants in the basin of the fountain, which was filled with water, though the jet of the fountain itself did not play. Plants and flowers completely covered the fountain proper, making a small island in the center of the basin, and the outer circle of plants was connected with the island now and then by tiny bridges of bark, the whole carrying out a sort of grotto effect. Acacia, spiraea, and other tall and graceful plants rose above the mass of clustered blossoms here and there, giving the effect of a suggestion of spring.

The president's box was made the brightest spot in the great scene, and in the supper and other rooms the florists had used much skill and stock.

Gude Bros. Co. put up the decorations in the court of honor on Pennsylvania avenue, where President Taft reviewed the great parade in spite of slush and storm. It is a joke that in the baskets that surmounted the masts the Gudes had used artificial waterproof flowers and plants. In many respects the storm lent a new and unexpected beauty to the setting that framed the pageant. The White House grounds presented an unbroken sheet of snow and the trees all along the route of the procession were heavily laden with the glistening covering. The court of honor, with its four orange and white pylons, and its myriad Venetian masts, looped together with hundreds of yards of laurel garlands, stood out gay and resplendent against a glittering white background. Snow fringed the shields and the garlands, and icicles clung to every staff from which floated the streamers inscribed with the monogram "TS," for Taft and Sherman.

All the leading stores, Shaeffer, Cooke, Freeman, Kramer, Loose, Blackistone, Marche and others, had a share of the work for the innumerable dinners and other affairs of the week.

There were any number of visitors in town, and quite a few florists among them, but the train service was so interrupted that thousands of people never left the station; having arrived too late for the spectacle, they took the first train son, color cerise, on the variety Mrs. Bradt, a white ground variegated with red. I procured Enchantress.

The Lawson was raised from Daybreak, a flesh-colored variety, with pollen from Van Leeuwen, a dark pink. You see the color of Daybreak cropping out.

Was this simply chance? Or was it the working out of Mendell's theory? There is food for reflection and careful study along these lines.

Again, I can tell you that from a batch of first year seedlings tested three years ago, we retained 250 scarlets for a test in the greenhouse, and that today we have three left of the 250 varieties, with the possibility of disseminating one. Of the remaining 3,250 we retained four, with a possibility of disseminating two or three at most. Think of it! Four out of 3,500! Then tell me where the luck comes in.

Yet, a few years ago hundreds of those varieties so discarded would have been called wonders. It is owing to the present high standard of the carnation that it becomes more difficult each year to produce a decided acquisition. Yet, looking backward through the earliest years of my experiments, I can see where I discarded many a fine carnation through this critical sifting down. Still it is much better to be on the safe side.

Time to Fertilize.

The best time to commence cross fertilization is during late October or early November; that is, just after the disappearance of flies and bees that usually come into the greenhouses on the approach of cold weather. Pollen at this season is also more plentiful than during December, January or February.

The best time in the day to cross-fertilize is from 11 a. m. to 2 p. m., the earlier the better, providing of course that the day is warm and sunny and the pollen perfectly dry. In transferring the pollen, some use a magnifying glass, camel's-hair brush, and pair of tweezers. I have never used either, until recently, when I find it necessary to use eyeglasses.

the flower when half developed, as I think it injurious to the normal development of the other important parts of the flower, so essential to success. My custom is to split the calyx in three or four places, so that the petals can drop down around the stem, thus leaving the pistil, stamens, anthers and stigma fully exposed to light and air. The stamens can in this way be easily removed between the thumb and forefinger with the anthers and pollen intact, and transmitted as desired.

In using the camel's-hair brush for conveying the pollen there is danger of getting it mixed, as it is difficult to clean the brush before using on a different cross.

Objects Kept in View.

In crossing, one should always have a definite object in view—an ideal to work up to. Keep in mind the very best of the various types now in existence—also their defects—then go to work with a determination to excel. The first requisite and one to be always kept in mind is a healthy, vigorous constitution. That means disease resistance. Next comes color, always indispensable, for no matter if all other points have been obtained and the color is undesirable, the plant is only good for re-crossing, because of its desirable habits. Then one must work for the necessary stem and strong calyx to hold the flower erect. Size, form, substance and, last but not least, fragrance, must all be considered. Fragrance I regard as indispensable.

The process of cross-fertilization is so simple that I need not go into it in detail. One must study the various varieties to be used, and fine judgment is sometimes required to know when the flowers have reached the proper stage for the experiment. In some varieties the pollen is perfectly ripe and ready for use as soon as the flower expands, while in others it does not appear for several days after the bloom develops. On the ends of the stamens are the anthers which, when they burst, produce the pollen. When ripe it is in the form of a powder. The stigma is the part to which the pollen is applied, and as it reaches the proper stage for fertilization the upper surface assumes a rough, hairy appearance. It is now ready for crossing, and upon this surface the pollen should be spread, being careful that it is properly ripe and dry, when it will be seen to adhere easily. If fertilization has taken place, the petals of the flower will wilt and fade within from one to two days, and often in a few hours, which is a sure indication that the operation has been a success.

After the petals dry up, they may be removed without danger of injury to the seed pod forming, and to prevent accumulation of moisture which might otherwise cause the pod to decay.

The Seeds.

Flowers fertilized early in October and November will usually ripen their seed in about six or seven weeks. Those crossed in December, January and February require eight to ten weeks and those in March about six weeks.

The seed pods should be picked with four to six inches of stem attached, carefully wrapped in paper, or enclosed in envelopes, and allowed to dry thoroughly. This usually requires about two weeks. The seed should then be carefully removed and planted at once.

Flats thoroughly drained with a layer of one to two inches of ashes, over which a like quantity of sifted loam of a light, sandy nature has been spread, makes an ideal compost. Level off carefully, press moderately firm, sow in rows one to one and one-half inches apart and an eighth of an inch deep, which can be made by pressing a narrow strip of wood into the soil. Cover carefully with about an eighth of an inch of soil, water with a fine sprinkler and place upon a shelf in a light situation out of the reach of mice, which are extremely fond of carnation seeds. One mouse, if he gets busy, will destroy hundreds of seeds in a night. This happened to me one season when I had sown the seeds in 4-inch pots, which were placed on a bench, and I had omitted to cover them with a sheet of glass, as was my custom then. I lost almost an entire season's seeds by my neglect, in one night, and I confess I did not feel kindly toward that mouse next morning.

bright, a paper should be spread over the flats during the day, and removed towards evening. This prevents too rapid evaporation. The seeds will usually germinate in from four to ten days, when all shading should be removed and the flats kept in a light, airy position free of draughts. It requires good judgment in watering to prevent damping off by excess of moisture, or injury by becoming too dry.

When the seedlings have developed their second leaves, they should be transplanted into small pots or flats. I prefer the latter, as there is less danger of a check by becoming too dry. They should be kept in a light, airy position to insure a compact growth, in a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees. Then they can be planted in the field during May, when danger of check from frosts has passed.

Plant in rows similar to general varieties. Those making a compact, bushy growth should not be stopped back but allowed to bloom, to determine whether they are worth being transplanted into the greenhouse later for a further test. Those inclined to run up with a single stem and no side growths should have the centers pinched out, so as to induce a bushy growth, so valuable later, should the variety prove an acquisition. The idea of encouraging the seedlings to bloom early is to be able to select from the field those worthy of further trial in the greenhouse. This enables one to save much valuable space that might otherwise be taken up by worthless sorts.

Character of the Seedlings.

In selecting seedlings from the plants that have bloomed in the field, only those developing desirable characteristics should be taken into the greenhouse. The usual result from a batch of seedlings raised from the ordinary commercial varieties is fifty per cent singles, thirty-five per cent splits or abnormal blooms, and fifteen per cent non-splitting. These figures sometimes vary to less singles and more split blooms.

It is often desirable to save single varieties exhibiting profuse blooming qualities and healthy, vigorous constitutions. Select those with a strong, well-formed calyx and wide petal; make the single variety the seed bearer, using pollen from extra double and even split varieties. Later I may be able to give more definite data from experiments in this direction. Beacon is the first variety I have disseminated, raised from a single yellow variety crossed with a double scarlet seedling.

The selection of desirable colors is an important matter. One is apt to get enthused about some particular shade; prejudiced in favor of his own, so to speak, for you know every fellow "thinks his own crow the blackest."

The buying public is, after all, the real critic and I have found it a pretty safe rule to abide by the taste and selection of the ladies, as they inspect and comment upon the various shades of color in the seedling house. I can well remember when Enchantress was in its second year, with some thirty-five plants in bloom, the ladies used to stop and exclaim "Magnificent! Exquisite!" Of course a smile of satisfaction on my part was the result, as I thought, "Here is a winner!"

In conclusion let me urge upon you to get all the theory you can. Put it into practice, but don't stick to any man's say so. Work with a definite object in view, keep careful notes, watch results, and keep before you as a watchword and guide to success, first, last and all along, the word Selection.

NO FLORISTS THERE.

This is one of W. N. Rudd's stories: "Once upon a time, and not so long ago," says Mr. Rudd, "a party of visitors was being shown through one of the great penitentiaries. Everywhere was spotless cleanliness—not a speck of dirt anywhere; floors fresh scrubbed, hand rails polished till they shone, nothing out of place, lawn close cut, great stone buildings one unbroken expanse of gray, and at last the bareness of it all got upon the nerves of the visitors.

"'Don't the monotony oppress you?' asked one of the guests. 'Wouldn't it take away the grimness to have some flowers? Why don't you have some window-boxes, and flowers on the lawn? Wouldn't they have an elevating influence on the prisoners and make your own life less dreary?'

"'Yes, they would,' replied the warden, 'and we've often wished we had some flowers, but, you see, while we have men here of almost every occupation and profession, we haven't even one florist.'"

THE ART OF SELLING.

[A paper by F. E. Palmer, of Brookline, Mass., read before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston.]

The important, in fact, the fundamental element in a successful sale is that it should be of advantage, or profit, to both parties. This simple proposition has, I fear, an unimportant place in the mind of the average salesman; it is nevertheless true and should be made the basis of every transaction between man and man. An exchange of services which necessarily involves loss to either party cannot be called legitimate business.

A second basic principle in all commerce, and one that should be understood by both buyer and seller, is that demand precedes supply.

In the process of evolution from the simple barter of goods between our forefathers to the complexities of trade in modern civilization, the above two axiomatic truths have become somewhat obscured. Derangements have also crept into the body politic which have aggravated the confusion, and reversed the natural order of things until the man who sells has come to be looked upon as the obsequious servant of him who buys. This attitude has become, by custom, so much a second nature that we take it for granted the seller is always under obligation to the buyer, and that labor shall forever bow the knee to capital. Volumes have been written on this important phase of economics and volumes more will doubtless be written on it before the subject is exhausted. No more fruitful study could possibly invite the consideration of business men, especially salesmen.

Relationship Between Buyer and Seller.

Consistently with the above principles, the relationship between buyer and seller should be entirely of a friendly nature, and the appreciation of this fact constitutes the primary lesson in the art of selling.

In some simple kinds of trade little is required of the salesman but to hand over the article called for and take the amount determined upon as payment. In such cases little special knowledge is required, and certainly no determination of values. When, however, it comes to the selling of flowers, plants, seeds, shrubs and trees; the supplying of decorative schemes—from the simple bunch destined to cheer a sick friend to the elaborate display for ball room or dinner table; the simple potted plant or the varied collection for the garden, the mysterious seed package or equally doubtful dormant tree and shrub, then the salesman comes in touch with one of the higher requirements of humanity and the satisfying of these æsthetic needs becomes, indeed, a fine art. In such cases how many elements can enter into a sale, possibly every one of which may have to be supplied by the intelligent salesman! Most likely the purchaser has a very vague picture in mind as to what he wants, also an equal uncertainty as to the amount to be expended. Imagine a customer in such a frame of mind, also somewhat fastidious of taste and exacting in requirements, and it will readily be seen that a very different problem is presented than in most other commercial transactions.

Qualities of a Good Salesman.

Perhaps the first requirement of a salesman will be that delicate tact which makes his patron feel at ease, and will so gracefully convey information—or correct an error—that not the slightest sting of confusion or mortification will be felt. This trait in a salesman, or, in fact, in any man, is one of the rarest assets. Next to tact comes enthusiasm, that earnest spirit of service which quickly discovers the customer's needs, cheerfully gives information, evinces a willingness to show every flower in the place if necessary and is never tired out. This quality is as rare as tact and generally goes with it, perhaps being born in a man rather than acquired. Add to these the ability to arrange the flowers artistically, so that a very common thing may become one of beauty; the ability, also, to deftly and rapidly pack and tie the box, in order that the flowers may not suffer, and that time—which up to this point has been used to advantage—may not be wasted on mere details.

It is easy to conceive, as the customer is courteously dismissed, the satisfying effect that all this intelligent effort has upon him. Not only has he been educated and pleased, but the value of a simple dozen of roses has been enhanced in his eyes possibly a hundredfold. In this way a value has been created and credit has redounded both to the house and to the salesman.

Stress has been laid on the philosophical side of the art of selling, rather than on its material and technical aspect. This is because of the firm belief that the qualities mentioned, besides conducing to the elevation of the florists' trade and other kindred businesses, have an immediate and cash value, and that higher ideals will ultimately prevail in trade relations. Indeed, the day of the "deaconing" of the apple barrel, the sanding of sugar, watering of milk, "salting down" of flowers, and general misrepresenting of goods is happily passing away.

Brief Rules for the Business Man.

Perhaps the following epitome will serve to convey the writer's thoughts in a pointed and more easily remembered form:

It is not such a good practice to "soak" a customer as to satisfy him.

It is better to size him up as to his needs, rather than as to his ability to pay a big price.

It is more to the advantage of both parties that good, fresh stock be sold than to entertain the delusion that a customer will come oftener if the goods perish quickly.

Common decency dictates that equal courtesy be extended to every patron, regardless of the size of his pocketbook.

Success depends more on absolute reliability than on a glib tongue and a plausible story.

It is taken for granted that a salesman should be well informed on the technical and scientific details of his business, although this knowledge has been lamentably absent in the florists' trade.

Selling a certain line of goods at or below cost, as a "leader" to attract the public, is not legitimate business, the object being to mislead buyers into the belief that all other goods in the store are equally low priced.

Any other action having as its prime object the ruin of a competitor, is pernicious.

The giving away of flowers is no part of selling and should be charged up to advertising.

Finally, for one desirous of perfecting himself in the art of selling, no better lesson can be learned than from a careful study of his own experiences as a buyer. It is safe to say that he will find himself attracted by the cordial, friendly greeting, especially if his name be remembered, the prompt offer of service, and the manifest truthfulness of all information given.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The business was really good last week, considering that Lent has put a stop to social work and weddings. The wholesalers cleaned up fairly well each day and about the only thing left over was bulb stock, of which consignments have been heavy the last two weeks.

Prices went up a little. In roses all popular sorts are not any too many in any of the grades, the demand about cleaning them up each day. Carnations brought a much better price last week and these, too, cleaned up fairly well, light colors selling at especially good prices.

Violets are not nearly so plentiful as they were the week previous and the price is up to 35 cents per hundred for choice. If the fine, warm weather stays with us until the end of the month, it is doubtful if our violet growers will be able to furnish any for Easter.

There are extra fine, long sweet peas coming in, and plenty of them. White and lavender sell best. The bulb stock is of good quality. Quite a lot of tulips had to be dumped last week, mostly red and yellow. Good mignonette is coming in. Smilax, galax and all other greens have a good demand.

Various Notes.

F. W. Ude, Jr., of Kirkwood, Mo., will erect three new houses this summer, each 100 feet long, which will be used for violets.

Max Herzog will be found at one of the city parks this spring.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, left Monday night for a week's trip to Chicago to visit some of the large plants at that place.

cepted a position as manager of a railroad in South America.

The Foster Floral Co. had the decorations of the new American hotel, which opened Monday, March 8. Floral designs were numerous. All florists were busy for the occasion.

The third spring flower show of the St. Louis Horticultural Society, which takes place March 24 to 26 in the Grand avenue Masonic Temple, promises to be larger than any of the two previous shows, and from what can be seen among the local growers the display should be a good one.

The Engelmann Botanical Club held its regular monthly meeting Monday evening, March 8. A. H. Nehrling, of the Missouri Botanic Garden, presented a paper on "Fancy-leaved Caladiums," using colored plates and herbarium specimens to illustrate.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-seventh annual convention, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 22 to 24, 1909.

CENTRAL New York had the heaviest snow fall of the winter March 5—fourteen inches at Syracuse.

THOSE who pushed larger numbers of catalogues into the south this season are well pleased with the results.

TWO engines were still pumping, March 10, on the ruins of the warehouse of the Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago, that burned February 26.

THE Western Canners' Association met at the Sherman house, Chicago, Wednesday, March 10. The seed trade had some representatives at the meeting.

CUCUMBER seed of all sorts is well cleaned up. The reduced harvesting of this crop during the past two years is now being felt and values are away up.

THE onion set market has remained firm during the week; prices have advanced and the available supply is reported to be much less than at the same date last year.

THERE is still a demand in certain quarters for dependable onion set seed. This sort of stock is not any more plentiful than it was, although offers enough are in evidence, with takers shy as to whether it is right or not.

SOME of the beans that were so plentiful a short time ago must have been disposed of largely, as at present it is hard to get them at reasonable prices. Conditions always change, and surpluses are usually disposed of before any one is really hurt by an oversupply of anything in seeds.

THE weather in general has been more seasonable so far since January 1 this year than it was last. This, it is thought, has helped the mail order trade and accounts largely for the steady receipt of orders and possibly has something to do with the reported increase in this line of the trade over last year.

IT has been noted in at least one seed house that the increase in the early mail orders and the increase in the southern orders were pretty nearly equal. In other words, the trade is growing nicely in the south, where the orders are early, with whatever increase the north shows to be largely handled during the rush season.

THE large demand for the canners' varieties of peas, and the good prices obtainable for them, have had an effect in shortening the available supply of stock seed for the coming year's crop. If the demand for canned peas continues good and brisk for a year or two more it is quite a question as to where the stock seed will come from by that time.

MAIL order trade is said to be much better so far than it was last year. Judging from the reports at hand, there should be a very great increase over last year in the quantity of seeds sold. This, in the face of reports of shortages all along the line since the harvest of 1908 was completed, causes some to wonder as to where the additional quantities can come from.

MICHIGAN bean growers are urging the retention of the present duty of 45 cents per bushel on their product, which some of the large handlers have asked to have removed in the new tariff bill.

AFTER the recent fire, the Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago, found the east wall of the warehouse west of the one destroyed to be bowed in some eight inches. The warehouse, used for seed grain, has been cleared and the wall will come down.

VALLEY pips still are arriving from Hamburg, much later than usual. H. F. Darrow had 130 cases on the boat that reached New York March 1.

THERE is said to be almost no business being booked by the canners of tomatoes for the 1909 crop and it is likely to affect the market for both tomato seed and plants.

IT is reported that a settlement with the creditors of the National Seed Co., Chicago, was made on the basis of 16 cents on the dollar, by G. W. Russell, Illinois state agent for the London Guarantee and Accident Co.

C. E. KENDEL, secretary of the American Seed Trade Association, is sending his friends copies of the illustrated report of the Home Gardening Association, showing the large amount of work that is being done at Cleveland. Mr. Kendel is chairman of the committee on training garden.

VALLEY IN DENMARK.

Lily of the valley pips have for years been grown in Denmark, but the industry has been on a small scale and the Danish exports were insignificant compared to those of Hamburg; indeed, many large handlers of pips scarce knew that Denmark had any part in the industry. But last autumn Denmark sent a greatly increased quantity of pips to London, which is practically her only market, and the quality was notably good. Those who have placed these Danish pips in cold storage in previous seasons report that they are excellently adapted to the purpose. It is said the acreage in Denmark was not only increased in the last few years, but will undergo a much further extension this season, large quantities of planting stock having been procured from Germany, where it was specially plentiful this season as a result of the growing conditions in 1908.

FARMERS HAVE MEANS.

The Crop Reporting Board of the Bureau of Statistics, United States Department of Agriculture, estimates, from the reports of correspondents and agents of the bureau, that the quantity of wheat in farmers' hands March 1, 1909, was about 21.6 per cent, equivalent to 143,692,000 bushels, of last year's crop, as compared with 23.5 per cent (148,721,000 bushels) of the 1907 crop on hand March 1, 1908, and 24.6 per cent (158,008,000 bushels), the average for the past ten years of the quantity on hand March 1. It is estimated that about 59.2 per cent of the crop will be shipped out of the counties where grown, as compared with 58.0 per cent of the 1907 crop, and 56.6 per cent, the average for the past ten years, so shipped out.

The quantity of corn in farmers' hands March 1, 1909, is estimated as 39.3 per cent, equivalent to 1,047,763,000 bushels, of last year's crop, as compared with 37.1 per cent (962,429,000 bushels) of the 1907 crop on hand March 1, 1908, and 39.0 per cent (900,663,000 bushels), the average for the past ten years of the quantity of the crop on hand March 1. It is estimated that about 21.3 per cent of the crop will be shipped out of the counties where grown, as compared with 18.0 per cent of the 1907 crop, and 20.0 per cent, the average for the past ten years, so shipped out. The proportion of the total crop which is merchantable is estimated as 88.2 per cent of the 1908 crop, as compared with 77.7 per cent of the 1907 crop, and 83.4 per cent the average of the past ten years.

The quantity of oats in farmers' hands March 1, 1909, is estimated as 34.6 per cent, equivalent to 278,847,000 bushels, of last year's crop, as compared with 35.5 per cent (267,476,000 bushels) of the 1907 crop on hand March 1, 1908, and 37.0 per cent (311,199,000 bushels), the average of the past ten years of the quantity of the crop on hand March 1. It is estimated that 30.3 per cent of the crop will be shipped out of the counties where grown, as compared with 28.0 per cent of the 1907 crop, and 27.3 per cent, the average for the past ten years so shipped out.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Trade Conditions.

Business last week was fairly good, several large funerals assisting materially in keeping up a good average. There has been a slight falling off in carnations, but violets were never more plentiful or in better demand. Every department store in the city had a special violet sale on Saturday and all of the florists met the competition.

Everyone is getting ready for Easter in this vicinity and all have great expectations. We have had a mild winter so far, with the crops slightly off, but everything is reported as promising for Easter. Bulbous stock will be a prominent feature of this season's trade.

Various Notes.

At the annual meeting of the Westerly Board of Trade, held Tuesday evening, Samuel J. Reuter was elected a member of the committee on municipal improvement and traffic.

Michael Sweeney was one of the guests at the first banquet of the recently organized Catholic Club of Rhode Island, in this city.

Vose & Sons, 241 Main street, Woonsocket, have just been enlarging their show rooms for the display of a large stock of house plants.

Joseph D. Fitts, superintendent of parks of this city, has purchased a farm at Slocum village, and A. C. Knight, recently manager of the Greeme farm, took charge March 10.

rose bushes, of which they have more than thirty varieties, before April 1.

Frank P. Barker, of Warren, brought in 18,000 Princess violets March 6, making a total of 65,000 during the week.

Carl Jurgens, of Newport, has gone to Europe for a stay of several months.

Paul Berkowitz, representing Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, was in the city March 6 taking orders for Easter.

Peter Byrnes, of Wickford, is preparing to erect two new houses in the spring. They are to be 28x100 and 20x100, respectively.

Johnston Bros. have just adorned the front of their store, on Dorrance street, with handsome brass signs.

Louis J. Reuter, of Westerly, delivered a lecture on carnations at the annual carnation meeting of the Morris County, N. J., Gardeners' and Florists' Club, March 10.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island will be held March 15.

J. Kopelman had a few camellias Saturday that were bought up almost before they were taken out of the box. These and orchids have taken the place of violets with the swell trade.

Samuel Kinder & Son, of Warren, had a fine dark crimson carnation on exhibition at the recent Boston show, and N. D. Pierce, of the Norwood Floral Co., Norwood, showed his new yellow carnation.

William B. Hazard had a special order for eight corsage bouquets for a wedding party last week. They were large bunches of violets, with lilies of the valley in the center.

Gibson Bros., of Newport, had the family pieces for the funeral of Mrs. John Carter Brown last week. Four wagon loads of floral tributes were sent from their place. One was a large wreath of orchids and another was a standing cross five feet in height, made both sides, entirely of roses. W. H. M.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

The month of March is always the best month to sell pot plants and annuals in New Orleans. It is the opening of the planting season, and when the winter has been severe enough to kill the tender varieties, many gardens are fixed up again with fresh plants. The trouble seems to be that for several years in succession we have had no really cold weather. Still business is quite fair at the markets, but as every florist is anxious to dispose of his plants, prices have a going-down tendency.

Various Notes.

From Lake Charles comes the understanding that a flower show will be given in November by the Ladies' Enterprise Club.

J. H. Menard is getting ready to put on the market a new bedding begonia, of which he speaks highly.

George Sanford, the palm specialist, has his hands full, digging up plants for spring orders. M. M. L.

Forcing Gladiolus

Gladiolus Gandavensis Hybrids

Many florists plant these in boxes, or among their carnations, in the winter. They are excellent for decorative purposes and realize good prices, either wholesale or retail. Gladioli are a good catch crop and take up but little room. The following are the best for this purpose:

America. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color. $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000.

Augusta. The florists' best white Gladiolus. First size bulbs, 1¾ inches and up. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.75 per 100; $16.00 per 1000.

Shakespeare. White and rose. $4.75 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

May. Pure white, flaked rosy crimson; the best forcer. Selected bulbs, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis (true). Fiery scarlet. Selected bulbs, $1.50 per 100; $13.00 per 1000. First size bulbs, $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Boddington's White and Light. Extra selected bulbs. 1¾ in. and up. $1.50 per 100; $14.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

American Hybrids. A mixture of the choicest varieties of Gladiolus in cultivation. $1.00 per 100; $9.00 per 1000.

A CHEAP CEMENT WALL.

In several different issues of the REVIEW I have noticed articles on methods of constructing cement walls. While the methods described have been good, most of them would be rather expensive for the average florist and I believe I can safely recommend the system that we use here, in Vermont, where our weather varies from 25 degrees below zero to 100 degrees above. A wall that will stand those variations is proof against almost anything.

First erect such frames or molds as will be needed to enclose a wall of the proposed height and thickness. The frames must be well braced, so that they will not give any, and must be made of square-edged boards, so that they will not leak much.

Fill the frames with stones of any convenient sizes, to about one foot in depth.

Then take five parts of sand and one part of cement, and mix them well while dry. When well mixed, add enough water to make the cement as thin as molasses in July. Pour this mixture into the frames until it comes to the top of the stones. Then put in another layer of stones and more of the mixture, and continue in this way until you build the wall to the desired height.

The chief point to be remembered in building this kind of wall is to be sure to make the cement thin enough to run down between all the stones. It needs two men to do it well—one man to keep stirring the mixture while the other dips it into the frames.

In twenty-four hours, in warm weather, the wall will be hardened enough so that the frames may be taken down, with care. It will take a week or more for the wall to dry out thoroughly, and then you will have the same thing as a solid stone from one end to the other, which will stand anything from a tornado to an earthquake.

The cost of the cement here is $2.75 per barrel of 400 pounds. For a wall six inches thick it costs for the cement about what it would for the lumber to double board a wall. Two men can put up the frames and build from forty to fifty feet of wall three feet high in a day, if the stones and sand are handy. The wall can be improved in beauty by plastering it over with cement after taking down the frames, if desired.

The people about here are making walls of this kind for their houses and barns, as they are substantial, cheap and easily built. Anyone with a little common sense can build them. Use the best cement. E. G. Hunt, Jr.

Fremont, Neb.—C. H. Green has planned an extensive enlargement to his greenhouses.

Omaha, Neb.—Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hess have the sympathy of the trade in the loss of their son, Henry G. Hess, who died of diphtheria March 1, at the age of 15 years. It is reported, also, that Paul B. Floth and L. Henderson's little girl are seriously ill.

...THE...
Chrysanthemum
By Arthur Herrington
Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

PACIFIC COAST.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are in the midst of the Lenten season and business shows the quietness which is to be expected. The weather, which practically put the retailers out of commission during the months of January and February, has changed for the better, and plenty of sunshine, blue skies and warm winds are rapidly drying out the excess of moisture. Flowers of all descriptions, with the possible exception of fancy roses, are plentiful and the demand is apparently only for light colored stock.

Violets are a glut in the market and yet they are the best selling article that the retailer has to deal with. Carnations are in good form and quantity, and the prices show a tendency to drop slightly, although they are a shade higher than at the corresponding time last year. Valley, after having been rather scarce for a few weeks, is again in abundant supply and moves well. The same can be said of longiflorum and Harrisii. All the white varieties of narcissi are out of bloom and even the daffodils are on the wane. There are a few late sorts, however, that will be in evidence for a couple of weeks yet. Fruit blossoms are being used lavishly in what little decorating is being done, and are a great assistance when long-stemmed flowers are as scarce as they are at this season of the year. Smilax is scarcer and wild maidenhair is more plentiful than it has been at any time. Asparagus and the various kinds of adiantums grown under glass are rather scarce, and the wild varieties come in handy in a pinch.

Various Notes.

C. E. Lilley, the green goods man, will locate permanently at some point in Mendocino county, California.

W. W. Saunders, of Sebastopol, Cal., is in town on a few days' visit.

L. E. Blochman, of Santa Maria, Cal., spent several days in San Francisco during the present week.

A. Lacroix, one of San Francisco's pioneer landscape gardeners, is now located permanently in Alameda, Cal.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, is in town. G.

CALIFORNIA NURSERY TRADE.

Not in many years have the conditions in the general nursery business on the Pacific coast been so quiet as they are at the present writing. From appearances, inquiries and orders booked throughout last summer and fall, it was only reasonable to suppose that we were to have a good season's trade, but now that practically all of central and northern California has been in the clutches of Jupiter Pluvius for many weeks and the rainfall has been the greatest recorded in years, we will have to call it a bad year.

The rains have not been accompanied with cold weather, and as a result deciduous stock has shown a decided inclination to leaf freely, so that much of it is really unsuitable for planting, even should we have no more rain. Almonds, early peaches and plums are in full blossom in the nursery heeling-in grounds. Planters have been unable to get on their land to plow or cultivate it, and when this is possible the trees will be even more advanced than they are at present.

This, of course, does not affect ornamental evergreens so much, as the season for handling them is much later than for deciduous stock. The trade in roses has been good, and some other lines are well cleaned out. Thousands of eucalypti have been planted, but this was mostly accomplished before the heavy rains commenced. With the general run of ornamental stock the season will be a very poor one.

In the southern portions of California the outlook has been much better. The rains have neither been so heavy nor so long continued, and the growers are better satisfied, as often there is a shortage of moisture and they lose thereby. The present season has been a godsend as far as sufficiency is concerned.

With the advent of the month of March we enter into the last month in which planting is done on an extensive scale in central and northern California, and even should we have the most favorable conditions from now until the first part of April, the season is bound to be abnormally short. G.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus

Last year, owing to the almost total failure of the Asparagus Plumosus to seed, I was unable to fill my orders, but this season I am to the front with about 2,000,000 seed.

The plants, after a year's rest, blossomed freely and matured a heavy crop of what I believe will be the strongest seed ever sent out of California. The Asparagus Plumosus grown here needs no introduction to you, however, as you are already fully acquainted with its merits. You can get seed promptly, as they are being harvested now, and can be delivered upon receipt of your order.

Seeds will be sold by count, with the usual guarantee as to germination, and I will again sell at my usual low, cash-with-order prices as per following list:

1,000 seeds	$ 2.00	13,000 seeds	$20.00
6,000 seeds	10.00	25,000 seeds	35.00
50,000 seeds			62.50

I shall be glad to receive your order and know you will be pleased with the results.

GLADIOLI

Best New and Standard Varieties

Those who are not acquainted with the beauty and grace of Gladioli blossoms have missed one of the beautiful things of this world. Their easy culture and free-flowering habit make them distinctly "the people's flower."

To introduce Gladioli to those who are as yet not acquainted with these lovely flowers, I herewith offer some of the finest new and best standard varieties at prices within the reach of all. The brilliant flowers of these sorts with their delicate colorings and markings have created quite a sensation in Santa Cruz, where some of them were never seen before.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN. Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

W. B. Cole, Painesville, O., is making many improvements in his nursery, including electric lights.

About all the cheap surplus lists have been called in; even Kieffer pear is being held for fair prices.

W. M. Bonnewell and Earl Cooper have bought a tract of land at Hastings, Neb., and will engage in the retail and wholesale nursery business.

The Phillips Nursery Co. has been incorporated at Rochester, N. Y., with a capital of $5,000. The incorporators are Harry Bartlett Phillips, Rochester; J. Chester Johnson, Englewood, N. J., and Henry E. Gaudy, 276 Bleecker street, New York.

The Wooster Nursery Co., Wooster, O., is sending out a new 32-page catalogue. The nursery has a town office at 40 South Market street, and its farm is located just east of the Experiment Station. T. E. Ewing is president and general manager, and Stephen Green is secretary and treasurer.

FREE TREES.

Commissioner James S. Whipple, of the New York State Forest, Fish and Game Commission, says that though the capacity of the state's tree nurseries were greatly taxed last year he expected to double the capacity this year. Last year the state planted about 1,100,000 of these young trees, but under the new law permitting the furnishing of stock from the state nurseries at cost to individuals there is such a demand for the trees that there will be none left over for planting on state lands. The output to individuals this year will be about 1,500,000 young trees, most of which are pines, with some spruce.

RHODODENDRON MAXIMUM.

The number of Rhododendron maximum planted throughout the country is increasing yearly, and when we consider how serviceable and effective they are, especially when they are planted in such a way that they grow well from the start, it is no wonder there is an increasing demand for them.

When intending to plant any kind of tree or shrub, it is well to consider the exact conditions surrounding the plants where they are at home, and to make their new home conform as nearly as possible to the original one. Rhododendron maximum grows luxuriantly in low and shady places in many parts of the country, and they show to best advantage where the soil wherein they grow is the year round rather moist than otherwise.

In digging these plants, it can easily be seen that the soil in which their roots are imbedded is composed in great part of decayed leaves and other vegetable matter, which goes to show that, in preparing a place for them, nothing much better than leaf-mold can be added to the soil. If peat is available, however, the addition of some of that material will be conducive to still better results.

In the event of leaf-mold and peat being scarce, well rotted stable manure, worked well into the soil, will do much good.

Low ground or shady slopes, or places where the plants will have the partial shade afforded by deciduous trees, buildings or walls, suit there requirements.

It is all very well to have a desire for individuality in everything, but in some things, as in the case of Rhododendron maximum, the result will be much better if they are planted so close together that they will have the appearance of one mass of green, than if they are planted so far apart that the limits of each can be distinguished. When they are planted close together, each one not only helps to shade its neighbor's foliage, but it also shades the soil over the roots, which is just as important.

A covering of leaves on the soil in which rhododendrons are growing is helpful in summer as well as in winter, since it retains the moisture and serves as a protection from the intense heat.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business last week was only fair, but the lack of funeral work undoubtedly caused the inactivity. Beauties were short of the demand. Other roses held their own, especially white. Sweet peas and violets were plentiful. The supply of carnations exceeded the demand on Wednesday, and some had to be sold cheap in order to clean up and make room for next day's consignments.

Club Meeting.

The club meeting, held March 4, was an important one and all the regulars, with a few exceptions, were present. The committee which had charge of the preliminaries for a fall show handed in a favorable report, which included a satisfactory guarantee list, reported to be signed by all who were approached, with one exception. Upon the strength of the fine report, the president appointed the following committee, to have full charge of the show: C. Dallwig, W. Zimmerman, A. Kellner, C. C. Pollworth, N. Zweifel, J. J. Heitman and H. V. Hunkel, with the last mentioned as chairman. The show is to be held in our new auditorium, now under construction, the second week in November.

The treasurer's report showed that the club never was in better financial standing. The entertainment committee, after the recent dancing party, helped to increase the funds.

A letter from the State Board of Agriculture was to hand. It accepted all suggestions made by the local club in regard to the arrangement of the premium list, for outdoor flower beds, and also accepted one of our members, not a competitor, as one of the judges in this department. President C. Dallwig was chosen by the club to fill the position as judge.

Various Notes.

At Hunkel's Seed Store they say that so far there has not been much doing, but they expect to make up for lost time in the near future.

W. E. Dallwig, the seedsman, reports business in the poultry line as slack so far.

The C. C. Pollworth Co.'s Easter stock of lilies, azaleas, rhododendrons, etc., is in fine shape at this time.

The Beauties at Holton & Hunkel's plant are just off crop now, but they do not worry, as they anticipate a good lot for Easter.

Otto Sylvester, of Oconomowoc, Wis., called on some of the local carnation growers, to size up some of the newer varieties.

FORCING GREEN ONIONS.

In the Review of March 4, page 58, I noted L. M. B.'s difficulty in forcing green onions. I have had similar experience myself, but think I have overcome the difficulty by using a perennial or winter onion, called Egyptian Tree and various other names. I plant the shallots or top onions as early as possible after ripening in August, in rows a foot apart and one to two inches apart in the row, in rich soil. I keep them well cultivated the next season, dig before frost and store in a trench or other suitable place until wanted. Freezing will not hurt them. When ready to plant, set as close together as they will stand, in a cool house, with a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees, or under the bench will do. I prefer setting on a bench for best results. In three to four weeks they will be ready to pull. Try them and you will be surprised at the results.

I may say I intend to try the new White Welsh onions for the same purpose. I will sow the seed this spring outside, cultivate them as other onions and treat them as described above. L. M. B. might try them also, and report results.

ENDIVE.

I would like to hear from someone about the European methods of French endive culture. The local gardeners can give me no information on that point. Is it grown in any amount in this country? If not, can you give any reason for it?

W. B. W.

Endive has risen in popular esteem a good deal of late years, largely owing to the growing popularity of wholesome salads. Its close relation to chicory, with its salutary properties, and the fact that when thoroughly blanched it suits so many palates, are also points in its favor. Its culture in America is much less common than might be expected. On private estates it receives some attention and as fine heads can be grown here as in any part of the world, France and England not being excepted, and that without any special culture. It is surprising that commercial vegetable growers in the United States have so much neglected this splendid salad plant. It is grown little for market. The best growers of it that we have met are Italians who make a specialty of salad plants.

The culture here does not differ greatly from the European methods. In midsummer it is not in special request; therefore sowings need not be made before May, and from that time successional batches may be started until the middle of July. Endive is hardier than lettuce and of easy culture. It prefers a light, sandy, but well manured soil, but will grow almost anywhere. The plants must be thinned out to at least a foot apart and can be transplanted readily in moist weather. For a late fall or early winter crop, the first week in July is a good time to sow the seeds.

Endive, to be marketable, must be well blanched. There are various methods of blanching. The simplest is to tie the tops of the leaves, leaving the center rather open to allow of its development. Then, a week later, give it a tie. In warm, summer weather the plants will be fit to use within two weeks. As the weather becomes cooler it will take longer. Ordinary wooden shingles are sometimes laid over the plants. These answer well, but as they are liable to be blown about by winds, the tying up method is to be preferred.

To secure a winter supply, the plants can be grown in coldframes, or can be carefully lifted after being tied up, and planted on the floor of a dry, cool cellar. They should always be handled dry. An old-fashioned but good method of keeping endive in winter is to lay the plants on their sides and cover with perfectly dry sand.

There would seem to be no reason why endive could not be profitably grown under glass in the same way as lettuce for a winter crop. The cultural needs are identical, the blanching being the only additional requirement for the endive. Too many plants should not be blanched at a time, as when in this condition they do not keep long. Demand must regulate the number to be so treated. At present practically all the endive sold in the big cities in winter is imported from France, where it is grown either outdoors all winter or under cloches or hand lights. There would seem to be a good opening here for some wide-awake American vegetable growers.

The best varieties of endive are Broad Batavian, known as escarolle in the eastern markets, and Green Curled, sold as romaine. The prices of these at wholesale vary from 50 cents to $1 per dozen heads the year around. Present prices are 75 cents to $1 per dozen in the Boston market.

W. N. Craig.

TOMATOES IN 5-INCH POTS.

We contemplate growing about 3,000 tomatoes under glass until about April 25, and then planting outdoors from 5-inch pots. Please give us a few pointers in regard to the variety (pink), time to sow the seed, the soil and the temperature. We prefer to stake and grow single stems. We grew Early June Pink last year, with good results, but this variety throws such numerous laterals that one man cannot keep up with them. We should only grow two or three trusses at most, and stop them and stake them, of course. We are located in Virginia.

D. & S.

To have plants well established in 5-inch pots by April 25, it would be necessary to sow your seed not later than March 1. Sow in flats rather thinly, in a rather free soil that does not contain manure or fertilizers in a fresh condition. Soil that was taken from the rose or carnation benches last summer, and exposed to the weather and frost, makes good material for this purpose when taken indoors a few days previous to using, to allow it to warm up and dry out a little.

The best pink variety we have tried is Livingston's Globe. As the name denotes, it is a globe-shaped fruit. It is uniformly clean and smooth, a free setter and a heavy bearer.

A night temperature of 60 degrees will be necessary to give the seeds a free start. Keep well exposed to light to keep the plants firm and stocky, and after they are large enough to handle they can be pricked off, either singly into 2¼-inch pots, or into flats, about two and one-half inches apart. If into pots, they will have to be kept moved up as the pots become filled with roots, to prevent check, until the 5-inch size is reached. If into flats, they will require to be potted up into 3½-inch pots before they become weak and drawn, and later moved into the 5-inch size.

The temperature should be regulated by the growth of the plants, as this growth will depend largely on weather conditions. A night temperature of 55 degrees is about right, but should growth be too rapid and incline to softness, it is well to reduce the temperature a little, to keep the growth firm. As the time for planting out approaches, the plants should be gradually hardened off so that they will not be injured by exposure when planted out.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive aud most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000

The Market.

The cut flower trade here is good. Roses are good and plentiful and meet with ready sales. Carnations are also in good supply and demand. Tulips, Dutch hyacinths and narcissi are coming in well. Harrisii and callas are plentiful. Sweet peas are fine, with good, long stems, and are selling well. Daffodils are of fairly good quality. Freesias are good and are used mostly in funeral work. Quantities of violets are coming in and meet with a satisfactory demand. Green goods, such as asparagus, smilax and galax, have the best call. The weather is fine.

Various Notes.

Honaker Bros. have begun the erection of three new houses, one 30x100 feet for violets, one 38x200 feet for carnations, and one 28x150 feet for carnations.

James P. Keller has been busy with funeral work at the downtown store, on Main street.

August Le Clere is very busy at the asylum these days, with landscape work.

Wilson M. Tiplady, gardener for J. B. Haggin at the Elmendorf farm, on the Maysville road, has several remarkably good seedling carnations, which will be heard from in the future. Mr. Tiplady's carnations are unexcelled.

The Michler Bros. Co. has the largest stock of hardy plants in town. Their callas and violets are good.

Anderson & White are busy preparing for Easter and spring at their greenhouses, on Georgetown street.

S. S. Kelley is cutting Rose-pink Enchantress and Beacon of good quality. Several thousand geraniums at his place will be fine for the spring sales.

William Bell has been busy with funeral work.

John Ballow, with Mrs. E. C. Henry, Frankfort, Ky., is cutting quantities of carnations. Blue Grass.

Rockland, Me.—The Mather greenhouses, on Pleasant street, will have a new and commodious office and a bulb cellar added to their equipment in the spring.

Guthrie, Okla.—Furrow & Co. are building an additional greenhouse, 50x150, on their farm, just north of the city. They now have about an acre of ground under glass.

SCRANTON, PA.

Club Exhibit.

The Scranton Florists' Club will have an exhibit March 25 and 26, at St. Luke's parish hall. Cash prizes will be given for thirty-four different exhibits, which will consist of a great variety, such as foliage plants, blooming plants, baskets of plants, new varieties of carnations, standard varieties, etc.

The florists expect that this will be a very successful exhibit. They are not going into it this year without experience, as they have profited by the mistakes they made in the first exhibit two years ago. All the details will be looked after carefully, as everybody has entered into it with enthusiasm. There is little doubt that it will be a great success, and will stimulate interest among the florists as well as among the buying public. Exhibits will be solicited not only from local growers, but from growers all over the country. The committee will see that all have equal opportunities.

The judges have not as yet been decided upon, but they will probably be men of varied experience, so as to be competent to judge the great variety to be shown.

Various Notes.

We have had a great number of Hollanders with bulbs on the brain to see us this week, and they all seem to do a little business.

Schultheis & Co. have completed their new place at the Dunmore cemetery and are moving stock there this week.

The Florists' Club Bowling Team met Friday evening, as usual, and rolled five games, as follows:

	1st.	2d.	3d.	4th.	5th.	Av.
Wm. MacDonald	134	198	117	123	137	142
B. E. Cokely	181	210	166	155	141	170
J. T. Cokely	164	113	157	149	147	146
T. B. McClintock	181	156	164	172	137	162
	660	677	604	599	562	...

The Bowling Club expects to bowl every Friday night, and each member feels that in a short time the above score will look like nothing. At any rate, these columns will show in future whether their feelings deceive them or not. C.

LENOX, MASS.—The Lenox Horticultural Society held a most successful banquet at the Curtis hotel March 4. The attendance, decorations, menu, toasts and all other features were good. The committee for the banquet was Edwin Jenkins, chairman; Walter Jack, Alfred H. Wingett and Frederick Heermanns.

J. D. COCKCROFT, Northport, Long Island, N. Y.

New Carnations--1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The color of Mrs. Chas. Knopf is somewhat darker than Enchantress during the winter months. The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal; closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Immediate delivery.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50 00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The cold wave which struck us March 3 and 4 was accompanied by one of the worst snow storms we have had for ten years. The snow was only ten inches deep, but was of that wet and sticky kind that hangs to everything, and it caused thousands of dollars of damage to the telephone, telegraph and railroad systems. There was not one telephone that was not put out of commission. All the wires were blown down and 4,000 telegraph poles will have to be replaced. The railroads, both steam and electric, did not run at all after 12 o'clock midnight, March 3, till March 5. There were no trains running to Washington on inauguration day and no one was able to go over to witness the inaugural ceremonies. On Saturday, March 6, we were treated to another fall of snow, which soon turned to a heavy rain, which crippled the flower market.

The market has been crowded with cut flowers, which were a drug. The market was in a poorer condition than for many weeks. Roses, which hitherto have sold well, have suffered with other flowers. Carnations are in heavy oversupply, and many have had to be cleared at low prices. First-class flowers have made fairly satisfactory prices, but the demand has been unequal to the supply. Single violets have shortened up considerably, owing to so much cloudy weather. Bulbous stock is almost a glut once more, and it requires a good deal of talking to sell it.

Various Notes.

Philip B. Welsh, of Glen Morris, Md., is making preparations to build another large house for carnations.

Lehr Bros., of Brooklyn, Md., are erecting a large house for carnations.

J. G. Harrison & Sons, of Berlin, Md., have rented two stands in Lexington market, where can be found a fine assortment of both fruit and shade trees. This is considered a good thing for the patrons of this market. Their agent will attend the market each market day. Q.

FINDLAY, O.—William Fellabaum has withdrawn from the firm of E. J. Foster & Co., by selling his one-third interest to the remaining members of the company.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

The promise of spring has been with us during the last week. Our great quantities of snow are melting fast, and the air is noticeably warmer. Other signs of spring are the preparations for Easter, the great harvest of the florist. Easter lilies, azaleas and hydrangeas are everywhere to be seen in bud, and the prospect is for a good variety of fine plants. About the usual variety of cut flowers will be on the market.

Various Notes.

Souden & Desmond find business first-class at the new store, and consider their new location a great advantage. They are contemplating the erection of a large greenhouse.

E. Nagel & Co. are growing some good valley.

Miss Whitted had a good week in funeral orders; also a fine wedding decoration, with a bride's bouquet of valley, lilacs and orchids.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. has some fine single violets.

The department stores are still slashing prices, with violets 10 cents per bunch and bulb stock at 25 cents per dozen.

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

The Lenten season is having its usual effect on trade, although funerals have been numerous and flowers in demand. Shamrocks are seen for St. Patrick's day.

Various Notes.

Corsages of violets, as prizes for card parties, are in vogue here at present.

Chas. G. Offerle has a nice lot of genistas in bloom.

P. F. Randolph, representing Thompson & Norris Co., of Brooklyn, was in the city last week.

The Misses Berger, of West Lake road, have been busy taking orders for nursery stock for spring planting. B. P.

Fremont, Neb.—During the summer C. H. Green will rebuild five greenhouses, raising the gutters from a height of four and a half to six and a half feet and lengthening the houses from 118 to 139 feet. He will also add one new house, 18x139, and erect a 60-foot brick stack. Business, he says, is good, and stock immense, both in quantity and quality.

PREPARE FOR EASTER

FROM WHOM WILL WE PURCHASE OUR EASTER SUPPLY?

This seems now to be the daily talk of every florist. "I know what I am going to do," a wise man remarked the other day. "I have been so often deceived I will be no more, but I shall send in my order direct to our friend Godfrey Aschmann. He shall be my man this Easter. He has everything full and plenty and what he advertises is no BLUFF. We can always depend on him to get what we need, and cheap, too. As much as we know, he goes himself to Europe and selects in Belgium the cream of Azaleas, Palms and Araucarias. He does all that for the sake of his customers, to please them."

An immense stock of choice Easter plants, blooming Easter week, or earlier, if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment. Come yourself or mail your order direct to headquarters.

Our reputation in growing Easter plants for the wholesale market, to which we ship all over the entire country, Canada and Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Oceans, for many years past, is sufficient guarantee to prove our ability.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas

Azalea Indica is a specialty with us, grown for us under contract by an Azalea specialist in Belgium for the last twenty years. Have three houses full of the choicest. Only best, well-known American varieties are imported, planted in the fall as soon as they arrive from Belgium into 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. pots, placed in greenhouses and kept cool in the winter, and are now in excellent condition, covered with buds, just right for Easter. Please bear in mind the fact (mostly unknown to some azalea consumers) that fully 30 per cent to 40 per cent of the newly imported azaleas in dormant state will lose their buds and leaves during sea voyage and during winter up to February 1, and have to be kept over for another year. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers, and, therefore, you can't expect an azalea at this time as big and as cheap as if you would buy them in dormant state in the fall.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Van der Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tip-top condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade. All sizes in the following prices—60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Bernard Andrea alba (white). We have mostly big plants, $1.50, $2.00, $3.00 to $3.50 each; a few smaller sizes, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25. Niobe, also white, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Vervaeneana, De Schryveriana (double variegated), 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Dr. Moore and Memoire de L. Van Houtte (double pink), $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Professeur Wolters, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Empress of India, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Apollo (red), 50c, 60c, 75c to $1.00. Other good varieties, such as John Llewellyn, Empereur du Bresil, Talisman, Helene Thelemann, Juliette, etc., 75c, $1.00 to $1.25. When we are out of one color, we send the next similar color; also, if we are out of the size ordered, we send the next size either above or below the price mentioned.

Easter Lilies, Lilium Multiflorum, the genuine Japanese Easter Lily, directly imported by us. We have a friend in Japan who looks after our interests there. He picks out for us only the good, healthy ones, and marks them while they are growing, the 10-in. bulbs, and therefore he ships to us the cream of the plants of Japan. We have lilies this year to burn; can supply, if nothing happens, every customer and others who want lilies. If you see them growing in our greenhouses you must all admit they are "crackerjacks." We sell them cheap, too. Where other florists get 15c per bud, we only charge you 10c per bud, for plants in 6-in. pots, having 5, 8, 10 and more buds to the plant. Plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud, 6-in. pots.

Tournesol Tulips, best double tulips, variegated, three bulbs in a pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $14 00 per 100.

Begonia, new, improved Erfordii, 5-in. pots, $2.50 per dozen. Flambeau, 5-in., $2.00 per dozen.

Primula obconica, 5-in., $2.00 to $2.50 dozen.

Yellow and White Daisies, 5-in. pots, $2.00 dozen.

Cineraria hybrida grandiflora. Henry F. Michell Co.'s new improved strain. Our plants and flowers of this strain are twice the size of those of other years, with perfect green foliage, almost as big as a bushel basket, 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Spiraea Gladstone. This variety, owing to the dry summer in Holland last year, will be very scarce this Easter, but we, fortunately, secured enough to fill one house full, and they are now in fine condition, full of buds, 6-in. to 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each. Spiraea Floribunda, Compacta, Japonica and Superba, 6-in. pots, 25c, 30c, 40c and 50c each.

Hybrid roses, grafted, such as John Laing, Brunner, and Magna Charta, 6-in. pots, 30c; 3 ft. high, 50c, 75c to $1.00. Hermosa, 5-in., 30c to 35c. Rambler Dorothy Perkins, 6-in., 50c to 75c.

Jerusalem Cherries for Washington's birthday, 6-in. pots, full of berries, 35c, 50c to 75c.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moonflower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Hyacinths, four best colors, King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, in cold frame, 4-in. pots, 10c to 12c.

Daffodil Von Sion, best double, three bulbs, $2.50 per doz.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful evergreen decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 19th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds, same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, 7 to 8-in. pots, 4 to 5 years old, 3, 4 and 5 tiers, 20, 25 and 30 inches high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca. This is a beautiful blue variety, very graceful and beautiful. Specimen plants, 6-in., 7-in., 8-in. pots, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25, 30 and 32 in. high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 6-in. pots, 20, 25, 30 and 35 in. high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. Can meet all applications.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in. pots, 3 plants in a pot, 25c.

Ficus Elastica (rubbers), 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25c, 30c, 40c and 50c.

Two houses of ferns. Whitmani ferns, 8-in. to 9-in. pans, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50; 7-in. pots, very large, $1.25 to $1.50.

Boston Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Scottii Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Amerpohlii, very fine, 6-in., 50c to 75c.

Wilsoni in pans, 35c.

Asparagus Plumosus, large, 8-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5 good leaves, 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c and 75c; 4-in., 35c.

Kentia Forsteriana, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25, 30, 40 to 45 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each; 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 20 to 25 in. high, 50c to 60c.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business was fair last week. There was nothing rushing, but the demand was about equal to the supply. Roses might even be called scarce, especially white ones. Red, as is usual, were scarce. In carnations, with the exception of white, the supply was heavy. They came in by the thousand and sold at low prices. White ones only brought a good price and they sold out clean. Lilies were good property and bulbous flowers of all kinds met a good demand. Southern-grown jonquils are arriving in large quantities and sell at a low price. They are used mostly by the storemen in making up their show windows in spring fashion. Violets have been doing a little better, but the price that can be obtained for them is still low. Some fine single ones are coming in from the north, which bring a good price.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Society will be held in the club room Saturday, March 13, at 8 p. m. It is expected that this meeting will bring out the full membership of the club, as not only will some important business be transacted, but the executive board of the S. A. F., being in session in this city at the time, will attend the meeting and every member of the club is expected to make a special effort to be present to meet these gentlemen. After the business meeting there will be a social session, at which C. E. Critchell and Wm. Gardener will officiate, serving lunch, cigars, etc.

The executive board of the S. A. F. will meet in this city, beginning Saturday, March 13, and continuing till March 16, inclusive. Their headquarters will be at the Hotel Sinton. On Monday evening the Cincinnati Florists' Society will entertain them with a banquet at the Sinton. It is expected that this will be largely attended by local florists. Nothing will be left undone to make the stay of the executive board in this city as pleasant as possible, so as to give the officers a taste of what the local society will attempt to do when the convention is in this city next August.

The Bletcher Floral Co. has moved into new quarters at 134 East Fourth street. The new place is handsomely fitted up and the move is undoubtedly a good one.

J. F. Pogue has been on the sick list for some time, but is about again and says he is as good as ever.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren G. Matthews, of Dayton, O., were callers, making the rounds of the wholesale houses.

C. J. Ohmer.

DECORATOR

This Grand Geranium is a decided improvement on the old standard variety, Alphonse Ricard. The floret is larger and is produced in equally large trusses. The color is a full shade brighter, and the plants bloom much quicker after shifting into the flowering pots, and are also much freer. A grand bedder.

DENVER.

The Market.

There has been a slight falling off in business since Lent commenced, and as Gypsy Smith, the evangelist, is here, people have taken to church on week days. Of course, there are the usual small dinners and other occasions, which keep business going some, but not fast enough to use up the quantities of stock which came in last week. Carnations and roses were a drug on the market and some dealers bought good carnations for $1 per hundred. American Beauties seemed to be the only exception, as they were somewhat scarce. Violets, also, have been plentiful, both single and double.

Various Notes.

R. S. Mahan and family, of the Columbine Floral Co., have returned from California, after a three months' stay, and are much improved in health.

The Denver Club Floral Store is the name of a new stand, in connection with a cigar store, which has been opened at the corner of Seventeenth and Glenarm streets.

The sympathy of the trade goes out to G. A. Rolin, of the firm of Newlander & Rolin, in the loss of his wife, who died on Monday last. The funeral was held Saturday, a large number of the florists attending. The rooms were filled with beautiful flowers, including clusters and violets in which the choicest flowers were combined.

A. C. Sinram opened his new store the first of the week. E. S. K.

NATICK, MASS.

Alexander Montgomery, Jr., is planning to build a rose house on a plot of seventy acres in East Hadley. The clay subsoil is admirably adapted for the purpose. Mr. Montgomery is a graduate of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, class of '98, since which time he has been associated with his father at Waban Rose Conservatories. He is the author of a monograph on "Grafted Roses." He will grow roses for the wholesale market.

The Review is ahead of any other paper for florists and I cannot do without it.—H. W. Wright, Amarillo, Tex.

Albuquerque, N. M.—The Albuquerque Floral Co., of which Mayor Felix Lester is president, will spend $25,000 on a florists' plant in this city.

SALVIA PRIDE OF ZURICH.

I should like to draw attention to a beautiful, but as yet not widely known summer-flowering bedding plant, says a writer in the Horticultural Trade Journal (English). I refer to the new dwarf summer-flowering salvia, Pride of Zurich, or, as some have named it, Glory of Zurich. In the first place, its height and habit are ideal, and the freedom with which it produces its vivid scarlet flowers is remarkable. This salvia grows about ten to twelve inches high, and about the same distance through, and is so free that I have seen plants carrying as many as eighteen flower spikes at one time. The foliage is of a pale bright green, and smaller than that of Salvia splendens. The color of the flowers is a rich, dazzling scarlet, quite as rich as those of the autumn-flowering variety just mentioned, and borne in great profusion. The plant maintains a healthy, clean, free-flowering habit throughout the whole season. After a season's trial it is very gratifying to be enabled to say that it does as well, and flowers quite as freely, in the northern districts as in those of the south.

This plant possesses another good quality, namely, that of rapidly recovering its beauty after heavy rains, and in this respect equals, if not surpasses, the best geranium. This salvia grows and flowers freely in any ordinary garden soil. I feel confident that a plant so neat and graceful in habit, combined with its freedom of bloom, is bound to become popular when better known, and I can safely recommend Salvia Pride of Zurich as one of the best and most brilliant bedding plants ever introduced. Like lobelia, the stock must be true, and grown from cuttings.

VISITORS AT KEW.

The number of persons who visited the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, England, during the year 1908 was 2,710,220. These figures show a decrease of 252,494 visitors over the year 1907, when the number of visitors was the largest yet recorded. During the last ten years (1898-1907) 16,428,084 persons have visited the gardens, giving an average of 1,642,808. In 1908 the total number on Sundays was 1,321,384 and on weekdays 1,388,836. The number of visitors on Sundays is the largest on record, being in excess of that for 1907 by 52,883. The maximum attendance on any one day was 98,388 August 3. The smallest number on any one day was 68, January 21. The greatest number on a Sunday was 70,904, July 26, and is a record number for a Sunday.

HORTICULTURAL BOOKS

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price.

Pronouncing Dictionary.
A list of plant names and the botanical terms most frequently met with in articles on trade topics, with the correct pronunciation for each. 35 cents

The Dahlia.
By LAWRENCE K. PEACOCK. A practical treatise on the habits, characteristics, cultivation and history of the dahlia with a descriptive list of all the best varieties. Copiously and elegantly illustrated. 30 cents

Handy Manual.
By J. W. JOHNSON. Illustrated with plans for greenhouse heating and ventilating, by a practical steam and hot water engineer of long experience. 125 pages. $1.00

The Rose—Its Cultivation, Varieties, etc.
By H. B. ELLWANGER. Directions for cultivation—for planting, pruning, propagation, the treatment of diseases and insect enemies—particularly valuable for its classification. Alphabetical and descriptive list of nine hundred and fifty-six varieties. Cloth. $1.25

Mushrooms—How to Grow Them.
By WM. FALCONER. This is the most practical work on the subject ever written, and the only book on growing mushrooms published in America. The author describes how he grows mushrooms and how they are grown for profit by the leading market gardeners, and for home use by the most successful private growers. Engravings drawn from nature expressly for this work. Cloth. $1.00

The Nursery Book.
By L. H. BAILEY. A complete guide to the multiplication of plants. The book comprises full practical directions for sowing, the making of all kinds of layers, stools, cuttings, propagation by bulbs and tubers, and very complete accounts of all the leading kinds of budding, grafting and inarching. An alphabetical catalog of about 1500 plants—of fruit, kitchen-garden, ornamental and greenhouse species—with directions for their multiplication. Cloth. $1.25

The Propagation of Plants.
By ANDREW S. FULLER. Illustrated with numerous engravings. Describing the process of hybridizing and crossing and also the many different modes by which cultivated plants may be propagated and multiplied. Cloth. 359 pages. $1.50

Greenhouse Management.
By PROF. L. R. TAFT, of Michigan Agricultural College. A manual for florists and flower lovers on the forcing of flowers, vegetables and fruits in greenhouses, and the propagation and care of house plants. It treats of all the plants commonly cultivated by florists and amateurs, and explains in a thorough manner the methods that have been found most successful in growing them. Particular attention is paid to the growing of cut flowers, the growing of fruits under glass, etc. Of special value will be the directions for treating plants when attacked by insects and fungi. The preparation of the soil, the use of various manures, composts and fertilizers, watering, ventilating and heating receive careful and minute attention. Cloth. 400 pages. $1.50

The Pruning Book.
By L. H. BAILEY. This is the first American work exclusively devoted to pruning. It differs from most other treatises on this subject in that the author takes particular pains to explain the principles of each operation in every detail. Specific advice is given on the pruning of the various kinds of fruits and ornamental trees, shrubs and hedges. Considerable space is devoted to the pruning and training of grape vines, both American and foreign. Cloth. 530 pages. Illustrated. $1.50

Insects and Insecticides.
By CLARENCE M. WEED, D. SC. A practical manual concerning noxious insects and the methods of preventing their injuries. Profusely illustrated. A generally useful handbook on noxious insects. It covers the whole field of insect pests very thoroughly and is especially valuable for its complete and up-to-date methods of fighting insects. The work is intensely practical. All the important insect pests are described and remedies for them, and methods of preventing their injuries described in detail. Cloth. $1.50

Handbook of Plants and General Horticulture.
By PETER HENDERSON. This new edition comprises about 50 per cent more genera than the former one, and embraces the botanical name, derivation, natural order, etc., together with a short history of the different genera, concise instructions for their propagation and culture, and all the leading local or common English names, together with a comprehensive glossary of botanical and technical terms. Plain instructions are also given for the cultivation of the principal vegetables, fruits and flowers. Cloth. $3.00

Commercial Violet Culture.
By B. T. GALLOWAY. An illustrated, comprehensive and complete treatise on the commercial culture, growing and marketing of violets for profit. Of interest to the amateur as well as the commercial grower. Cloth. 224 pages. $1.50

Handbook of Practical Landscape Gardening.
By F. R. ELLIOTT. Designed for city and suburban residences and country schoolhouses, containing designs for lots and grounds, from a lot 30x100 feet to a 40-acre plant. Cloth. $1.50

Practical Floriculture.
By PETER HENDERSON. An illustrated guide to the successful propagation of florists' plants. A detailed account of the requisites to success and a clear explanation of improved methods. For the amateur and professional florist. 325 pages. Cloth. Postpaid. $1.50

Bulbs and Tuberous Rooted Plants.
By C. L. ALLEN. A complete history, description, methods of propagation and full directions for the successful culture of bulbs in the garden, dwelling or greenhouse. The illustrations which embellish this work have been drawn from nature, and have been engraved especially for this book. Cloth. $1.50

Greenhouse Construction.
By PROF. L. R. TAFT. A complete manual on the building, heating, ventilating and arrangement of greenhouses, and the construction of hotbeds, frames and plant pits. Lucid descriptions and 118 diagrams and illustrations make every detail clear to the amateur and professional gardener and florist. Cloth. 218 pages. $1.50

Gardening for Profit.
By PETER HENDERSON. The standard work on market and family gardening. The successful experience of the author for more than thirty years, and his willingness to tell, as he does in this work, the secret of his success for the benefit of others, enables him to give most valuable information. The book is profusely illustrated. 376 pages. Cloth. $1.50

The Horticulturist's Rule Book.
By L. H. BAILEY. In no other volume can there be found such a quantity of valuable information in such a handy form for florists, fruit growers, truck gardeners and others. The chapters on insecticides and fungicides, plant diseases, seed tables and planting tables, cements, glues, etc., will all be found exceedingly valuable. Cloth. 302 pages. 75 cents

The Chrysanthemum.
By ARTHUR HERRINGTON, formerly president of Chrysanthemum Society of America. The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. 50 cents

The History and Culture of Grafted Roses for Forcing.
By ALEX. MONTGOMERY, JR. The most important contribution to the modern literature of the rose. Of much interest to every rose grower and of utmost value to growers of grafted roses. Containing practical description of the process of grafting with full details of planting and culture; also directions for treatment to carry the plants a second year. 25 cents

Henderson's Picturesque Gardens and Ornamental Gardening.
By CHARLES HENDERSON. A volume containing half-tone illustrations of the prettiest and most famous gardens and parks of the world, vividly portraying lawn, garden and landscape effects, plant and tree groupings, decorative bedding, herbaceous gardens and borders, formal gardens, lawn gardens, Italian, Japanese and English gardens, rock gardens, wild gardens, bog gardens, subtropical gardens, sunken and terrace gardens, rosariums, hardy ferneries, arches, columns, festoons, etc., picturesquely draped with vines, as well as numerous other garden embellishments. Each illustration is described and explained. Cloth with gold. $2.50

Cabbage, Cauliflower and Allied Vegetables.
By C. L. ALLEN. An explanation of the requirements, conditions, cultivation and general management pertaining to the entire cabbage group. The chapter on seed raising is probably the most authorative treatise on this subject ever published. Insects and fungi are given due attention. Illustrated. 128 pages. Cloth. 50 cents

Greenhouse Heating.

The Review is glad to answer in this department any inquiry with regard to greenhouse heating. Give all the details of your problem, not only as a guide to an intelligent answer, but so that others similarly situated may derive a benefit.

FLOW PIPE TOO LONG.

We have a house on the southwest corner of our plant that is piped to heat to 55 degrees at 15 degrees below zero, but it falls short about 10 degrees, standing at 45 degrees when the other houses are running at the desired temperature. We think the cause of this is that three 4-inch flows and the one 4-inch feed to the above-mentioned house are taken off the main flow (which is 7-inch) within a foot of each other. This 4-inch feed has to travel seventy-five feet along the house running east and west, under the gutter, and fifty feet along the east gutter of the southwest house, feeding back through 1,000 feet of 2-inch pipe. This 4-inch feed also supplies three radiators in the workroom. Do you think that by taking the 4-inch feed directly from the boiler we could get the desired result?
M. C.

From the information given I can only say that the distance the hot water is carried in this case is considerably in excess of the profitable limit with a gravity system. It is likely that if you carry the flow directly from the boiler to this house the piping will prove more efficient. It may be that more piping will have to be installed, or the plant converted to a steam basis.
L. C. C.

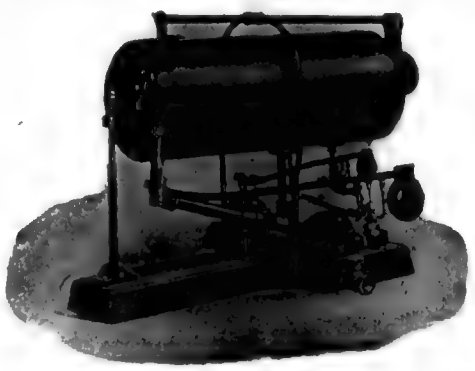
IN MINNESOTA CLIMATE.

I want to heat a double greenhouse, fourteen feet wide and eighty feet long each. There will be three benches in each house. We want to keep a temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees in the coldest weather, Minnesota climate, which may be 30 degrees below zero. I am thinking of putting four 1½-inch steam pipes under each bench. The boiler will be in a pit at one end. Half of the pipes in the houses would be flows and half returns. How would the system work?
O. A.

As I understand your statement, you have two houses, each fourteen feet wide and eighty feet long, without a partition wall, which you wish to heat with steam by the use of 1½-inch pipe. If so, I would suggest that you use ten 1½-inch returns under the benches in each house, three under each of the two interior benches and four pipes under each of the benches next the outside wall. A single 2-inch main flow from the boiler carried under the ridge of each house to the most distant end of the house, there to feed the ten 1½-inch returns, will prove a most satisfactory arrangement.
L. C. C.

RETURN PIPES TOO SMALL.

How can I improve my present heating system? I have two houses, 20x75, and use hot water. I start with a 2½-inch pipe running through the end wall at the west end, and run two 2-inch pipes to the front end on the top of the purlin posts, to feed a coil of seven 1¼-inch pipes on each side. The boiler is about one foot lower than the lower end of the coils. The other house is heated from the same 2½-inch pipe, and has one coil of five pipes and another of six. The tank is about one foot above the highest point—as high as I can get it at present.



The end of the coil near the boiler is always cool, especially the bottom pipes. If I raise the tank five or six feet, will that help any?
O. P. M.

An independent riser to each house will undoubtedly help, but one of the main troubles is the size of the pipes used as radiators or returns. It is seldom wise to use pipes smaller than 1½-inch for returns, and for runs seventy-five to 100 feet in length pipes not smaller than 2-inch. If the expansion tank can be elevated six to ten feet above the highest point in the system and connected with the main return close to the boiler, the piping you have will be more efficient and the circulation better. If you cannot keep the expansion tank in the shed, extend it above the roof and build a hood over it. L. C. C.

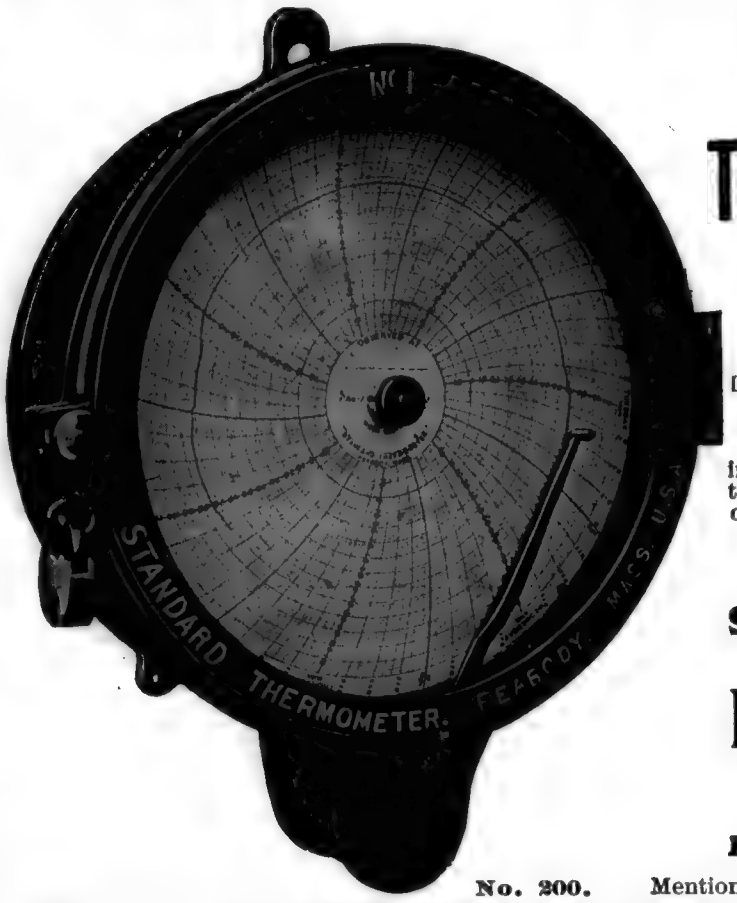
THREE HOUSES AND A LEAN-TO.



I am planning to build three connected greenhouses, running east and west, with a lean-to, 7x90, extending north and south along the west end of the houses. The boiler-room will be located north of the lean-to, or, in other words, at the northwest corner of the range. The north house will be 42x83 and will be used for carnations. The other two houses, both for roses, will be each 25x83. The lean-to will be used as a propagating house. The height of the walls is six feet and a half. The outside walls contain three feet of cement and forty-two inches of glass, and there are forty-two inches of glass, also, in the partition walls.

What is the best way of piping these houses for low pressure steam? The boiler can be set as low as you think best. I am figuring on using a tubular boiler and should like to know what size and kind would be most suitable. I am located in southern Ohio. In the rose houses I want a bottom temperature of 60 or 62 degrees and an overhead temperature of 55 degrees. For the carnations I want 55 degrees of bottom heat and 50 degrees of overhead heat.

C. F. B.

A satisfactory arrangement for the heating of a plant such as you propose, with steam, can be worked out as follows: Carry a 4-inch main riser from the boiler through the lean-to house as far as the middle of the end of the middle house; from there continue the riser with a 2½-inch pipe. Take off a 2½-inch pipe at the middle of the 42-foot house and run it to the far end of the house, under the ridge. At the east end divide the riser to supply twenty-five 1¼-inch returns, placed under the benches. At the center of each rose house take off a 2½-inch flow pipe, to be carried under the ridge to the far end and there to feed twenty 1¼-inch returns in each house. A boiler to do this work should be rated to carry at least 3,000 square feet of radiation. A boiler with 400 square feet of heating surface, which is about equal to a thirty horse-power tubular boiler, will do the work. L. C. C.

Flowers are plentiful and the poor grades sell very cheaply. At Tiedtke's department store carnations go at 19 cents and 10 cents a dozen, violets at 10 cents a bunch.

The Youngstown Floral Co. has dissolved partnership, Wm. Feniger buying out Mr. Spanner. The latter started in business again on Summit street at Madison, in the best retail district. The floor of his store is about three feet below the sidewalk, which gives the passer-by a chance to view the entire contents of the store at one glance. Business on the opening day, March 6, exceeded Mr. Spanner's hopes.

Market Good.

Up to the present time the Lenten season has not checked the condition of trade to any great extent, as there has been a good demand for funeral work. The weather conditions during the last week were just what the florist delights to see while he is making preparation for Easter. Trade for St. Patrick's day promises to be good. Of course white carnations will be in demand. There is a good supply of stock of all kinds at present and the florists are able to fill their orders in a satisfactory manner. Roses could not be better in size, color and foliage. Carnations also are at their best. Owing to plenty of design work, calla, album and longiflorum lilies sell well, likewise valley, violets, Roman narcissi, etc.

Club Meeting.

The Dayton Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting at the establishment of John Young, nearly all the members being present. After the business session the annual election of officers took place. Herman H. Ritter was reëlected to the office of president; Warren G. Matthews, vice-president; Horace Frank, who has been secretary of the club ever since its organization, was again elected to fill that office, and George W. Bartholomew was reëlected treasurer. The president appointed James W. McNary and Arthur Schmidt as a committee to arrange for topics of discussion for the good of the club and its members at the monthly meetings. Forrest P. Mitman and Fred C. Moon, partners in the Hiess Co., were taken in as members.

Various Notes.

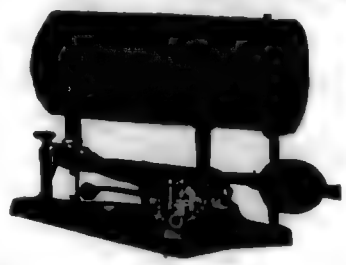
Not only was the city of Dayton represented at the inauguration of President Wm. Taft, but the Dayton florists as well. Horace Frank, of the Hiess Co., who is a member of the Taft Glee Club of this city, left March 2 for Washington, and arrived there in due season, which was more than a good many did. Mr. Frank reports a most enjoyable time.

Arno and Julius Hendrichs returned March 8 from a two weeks' visit at New Orleans, La., where they were the guests of M. Cook and family. They report a most enjoyable time.

Mrs. Elizabeth Young is confined to her home with an attack of the grip.

Mrs. J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, was the guest of Misses M. & L. Johnson for a few days last week.

The Dayton Floral Co. is carrying a new line of porch and window-boxes, made of iron, and painted white. The box makes an attractive appearance and they report good sales on same. They also report the outlook for Easter most promising, and stock for that date is in fine condition. The new electric line, which has recently been put into operation, passes by the plant, making a great improvement and convenience for them.



Stock with the Miami Floral Co. is in fine condition, especially Easter lilies. Business with them has been satisfactory and the outlook for Easter is good.

H. H. Ritter says business last week was good, especially in the pot plant line. He has several orders booked for St. Patrick functions and expects to commence dyeing in a few days.

The Advance Floral Co. has realized a good business on carnations in the last week.

Visitors of recent date are: Harry Marquardt, representing Ralph M. Ward, New York; August Martial, of Reed & Kellar, New York, and F. W. O. Schmitz, of Prince Bay, N. Y. R. A. B.

AUBURN, R. I.

The Budlong Establishment.

The constantly growing establishment of J. A. Budlong & Son Co. is one of the most extensive in the east and always well repays a visit. Roses are here a leading feature, over 75,000 being grown. Of these, 37,000 are Bride and Maid, the balance mostly Killarney, Richmond and Chatenay. Next season about 20,000 each of Richmond and Killarney will be planted, 8,000 Chatenay and a good batch each of My Maryland and White Killarney. The numbers of Bride and Maid will be considerably reduced.

All the big rose houses were in the pink of condition. In one house a batch of 3,000 Killarney, planted May 1, 1908, had given over 75,000 flowers up to February 1, 1909. In another house 5,500 Richmond had furnished over 125,000 flowers in the same period. John Pritchard, the able manager, formerly with W. H. Elliott, at Madbury, N. H., said Killarney gives fully as many as, or more flowers than, Bridesmaid and sells much better. All roses are grafted, with the exception of Chatenay, which is found to succeed much better on its own root. The only purely summer rose grown is Kaiserin. Rhea Reid under trial has proved disappointing, as also has Mrs. Jardine, but My Maryland it is hoped will make good another season. Black spot and mildew were conspicuous by their absence and from the number of thick bottom shoots coming up, there will be a wealth of fine flowers for months to come.

About 25,000 carnations are grown. Enchantress looks splendid. Winsor, Victory, Beacon and other popular sorts are also grown. Flowers are sold in Providence and shipped to Boston and New York, the Park Street Market, Boston, handling the bulk of the cut. A fine lot of new rooms for cut flowers have been recently completed. These are commodious and convenient.

The present rose houses vary in length from 350 to 700 feet, there being four of the latter length, the widest being fifty-two feet. Ground is broken and work started on three additional houses for roses, two 35x450 and one 35x350. The necessity of more glass is caused by an inability to fill the constantly growing demands for the firm's roses.

The battery of boilers, seven in number, aggregate 1,600 horse-power, about 4,000 tons of coal per annum being consumed. In addition to the greenhouses the Budlong Co. operates an immense farm, vegetables for pickling, such as cucumbers, onions, peppers, etc., being their specialties. About 400 acres are devoted to cucumbers alone. A big pickle factory, employing several hundred hands, is also a feature on this interesting and up-to-date establishment. W. N. Craig.

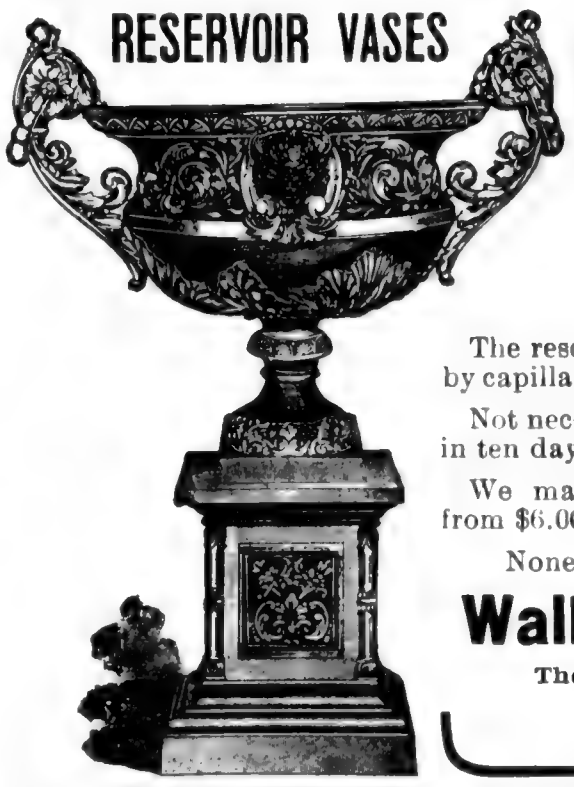
AUBURN, R. I.

The Budlong Establishment.



The constantly growing establishment of J. A. Budlong & Son Co. is one of the most extensive in the east and always well repays a visit. Roses are here a leading feature, over 75,000 being grown. Of these, 37,000 are Bride and Maid, the balance mostly Killarney, Richmond and Chatenay. Next season about 20,000 each of Richmond and Killarney will be planted, 8,000 Chatenay and a good batch each of My Maryland and White Killarney. The numbers of Bride and Maid will be considerably reduced.

All the big rose houses were in the pink of condition. In one house a batch of 3,000 Killarney, planted May 1, 1908, had given over 75,000 flowers up to February 1, 1909. In another house 5,500 Richmond had furnished over 125,000 flowers in the same period. John Pritchard, the able manager, formerly with W. H. Elliott, at Madbury, N. H., said Killarney gives fully as many as, or more flowers than Bridesmaid and sells much better. All roses are grafted, with the exception of Chatenay, which is found to succeed much better on its own root. The only purely somatic rose grown is Kaiserin. Rhea Reid under trial has proved disappointing, as also has Mrs. Jardine, but My Maryland it is hoped will make good another season. Black spot and mildew were conspicuous by their absence and from the number of thick bottom shoots coming up, there will be a wealth of fine flowers for months to come.

About 25,000 carnations are grown. Enchantress looks splendid. Winsor, Victory, Bonnaffon and other popular sorts are also grown. Flowers are sold in Providence and shipped to Boston and New York, the Park Street Market, Boston, handling the bulk of the cut. A fine lot of new rooms for cut flowers have been recently completed. These are commodious and convenient.

The present rose houses vary in length from 350 to 700 feet, there being four of the latter length, the widest being fifty-six feet. Ground is broken and work started on three additional houses for roses, two 35x150 and one 35x350. The necessity of more glass is caused by an inability to fill the constantly growing demands for the firm's roses.

The Market.

Trade has been good in Lent, the fine weather and choice stock contributing in no small degree to this gratifying condition. Several funerals of prominent citizens have also created a good demand. White roses have been a little scarce, but otherwise the supply has equaled the demand.

Club Meeting.

On account of the dance and card party coming on the preceding night, the regular meeting of the State Florists' Association was postponed from February 16 to February 23. The attendance was small, owing to the stormy night, but the meeting was full of interest and enthusiasm.

The state fair committee reported that the prospects were poor for obtaining additional space for exhibits or increased premiums, though the matter will be kept alive and pushed until final decision is made.

The entertainment committee reported a small deficit on the party given February 15.

After considerable discussion on the advisability of holding a flower show the coming fall, Messrs. Olson, Swanson and May were appointed a committee to enlist the coöperation of the St. Paul Institute of Arts and Sciences, and their report is awaited with interest.

Carl Haugen exhibited some Princess of Wales violets, scoring 96 points, and some cyclamen, scoring 83 points. Nagel & Son exhibited Lawson and Winsor carnations, scoring 79 and 76 points.

The next meeting will be held March 16, at the hall, 510 Snelling avenue, St. Paul. W. E. Fraser, of the State Agricultural School, will deliver a short lecture on "Fertilizers," which should be interesting to all in the trade.

LOWELL, MASS.

The Sunday Bill.

Several florists of this city recently appeared before the legislative committee on legal affairs, at the state house, Boston, to exert their influence in favor of senate bill 144, which, if passed, will allow the trade here to sell and deliver flowers on Sunday, under certain restrictions as to hours.

Richard A. Griffith, who acted as principal spokesman for the florists, drew attention chiefly to Sunday funeral work, and cited instances to show that the handling of funeral orders on Sunday is often unavoidable. His statements were corroborated by La Forest Beals, William D. Whittet and William J. Collins. Nobody appeared in favor of that part of the bill which provided for the Sunday sale of fruit.

HOLLAND, MICH.

September 1, 1908, Charles S. Dutton opened a retail flower shop on the main business street of the city. He has for several years previous to this sold his product from the greenhouses. The new enterprise has been a success from the start. The Christmas trade was the largest in the history of the business. There has been since then a steady sale at good prices of cut flowers and potted plants. Tulips, daffodils and hyacinths in pans have been in especial demand. The additional trade will soon necessitate larger growing facilities. Mr. Dutton has recently associated with himself in business his son, Henry P. Dutton, thus adding new blood to the enterprise.

WHITMAN, MASS.

Under a foreclosure of mortgage, the Barrows greenhouse property passed into the possession of J. R. Callahan & Co., of Bridgewater, March 2. Negotiations are now in progress to take care of the interests of H. H. Barrows, and it may be possible that the property will again come into his possession. The property has been the subject of some contention of late.

Monmouth, Ill.—Charles A. Hewitt has received the material for the erection of two more greenhouses, which were much needed on account of the rapid expansion of his business. He grows both flowers and vegetables.

Blackinton, Mass.—A. F. Stevens, who purchased the Gove farm about two years ago, has now erected a greenhouse, just east of his residence. He gives his attention chiefly to vegetables and potted plants.

WORCESTER, MASS.

The first exhibition of the season of the Worcester County Horticultural Society was in Horticultural hall March 2. It was interesting to growers and was largely attended.

Mrs. Thomas Pollard displayed a merry widow hat, made of moss and berries and trimmed with pink carnations.

Herman F. A. Lange had some splendid tulips and Baby Dorothy ramblers. The schizanthus exhibited by Edward W. Breed was much admired. Leonard C. Midgley showed some fine roses and carnations and George MacWilliams, gardener for Marston Whitin, entered some fine orchids.

Edward W. Breed showed cineraria, and cyclamen were entered by H. F. A. Lange and Mr. Breed, both of whom showed four plants. Lange showed Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, and Mr. Breed and Mr. Lange entered azaleas, three plants each. Mrs. J. C. Whitin and G. Marston Whitin showed orchids. Carnations grown by H. A. Cook, H. F. A. Lange, L. C. Midgley and Mrs. J. C. Whitin were shown, while the hyacinths exhibited were from Lange's and Breed's greenhouses.

Primula Sinensis were shown by Breed and Lange, and primula, any other variety, were also from their greenhouses. The rose display by Lange was particularly pleasing, Queen Beatrice, Bride and Bridesmaid, Richmond, Mrs. Jardine, Killarney and Mme. Chatenay roses being shown.

The premiums were distributed pretty evenly among the above exhibitors.

AMHERST, MASS.

Massachusetts Agricultural College.

The new instruction building for floriculture and market gardening, and the new range of greenhouses, will be dedicated Friday afternoon, March 12. The instruction building has been named "French Hall," and the new greenhouses will be known as the "Durfee Planthouses." The exercises will be held in French Hall, beginning at 2 o'clock, and will be followed by an exhibit of flowers. One of the principal speakers will be J. K. M. L. Farquhar, of Boston, whose subject will be, "What the Greenhouse Has Done for Horticulture."

Kenosha, Wis.—Z. G. Simmons, for whom J. H. Wilcott is gardener, has decided not to add to his glass this season, but next spring will build two iron-frame greenhouses.

Here is a striking comparison between the size of a wood post and our wrought iron.

And here you see the angle purlin used in our iron frame house in comparison with the old-fashioned wood purlin.

The Good Sense of It

WHEN you buy a greenhouse, constantly keep in mind that strength and durability do not always go together. Take, for instance, a 5-inch wooden post; it is plenty strong to start with, but it doesn't stay strong; while our Guaranteed Wrought Iron Post is less than a third the size, and keeps on being just as strong for years and years. In fact, it has stood an actual test of a quarter century. Wood posts actually cost more, because you have to use twice as many and dig twice the holes. And think of the difference in shade. By the same good sense compare the wood and angle purlin.

The matter simmers down to two things: Our Semi-iron house is actually the cheapest house you can afford to buy, and our Sectional Iron Frame is the best investment. Both are constructed on the lines of greatest endurance and greatest lightness—for the money.

THE AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY

The Buffalo Convention.

The tenth annual exhibition of the American Rose Society is the social event at Buffalo this week. The Rose Society always has been fortunate in its places of meeting, but never has had finer quarters than those of this year. The Iroquois hotel is not only the finest in Buffalo, but one of the best in the country, and is frequented by the class of people it pays florists to reach and interest. The Iroquois is the scene of the leading social affairs at Buffalo, and the rose exhibition is attracting a large attendance from the best people in the city. The exhibition hall is a beautiful place of itself, and this year the roses are not the whole thing, as they were at Chicago last year, and the show has variety among its other attractions. The rose exhibition is held in connection with the annual spring show of the Buffalo Florists' Club, including blooming plants as well as cut flowers.

The exhibition was staged Wednesday afternoon, March 17, and everything was in readiness at 5 p. m., the hour set for the admission of the public. There is not a superabundance of stock, the entries not being as numerous as last year, when the society met in a great rose-growing center, but whatever was lacking in numbers was made up for by the uniformly high quality of all the exhibits, making the show a success in the eyes of the trade and decidedly so to the public. Secretary Hammond said: "We have a fine show; while not the largest, it is complete, and all stock is in superb shape." Pot roses were missing again this year.

The most striking feature of the show is a handsomely decorated table of White Killarney roses and ferns placed against a mirror. Bassett & Washburn had a fine vase of O. P. Bassett and Joseph Heacock showed Dorothy Gordon carnation.

The Awards.

The judges were Peter Bisset, Washington, D. C.; Lawrence Cotter, Jamestown, N. Y., and George Asmus, Chicago. The awards were as follows:

Fifty American Beauties, Brant-Hentz Flower Co., Utica, N. Y., first; Myers & Samtman, Wyndmoor, Pa., second.

Fifty Killarney, A. Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa., first; Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, second.

Fifty Richmond, E. Towill, Roslyn, Pa., first; no second.

Twenty-five Beauties, Bassett & Washburn first, E. Towill second.

Twenty-five Bride, Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, first; Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co., Bakerstown, Pa., second.

Twenty-five Maid, Peter Crowe, Utica, N. Y., first; Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co., second.

Twenty-five Cardinal, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, no second.

Twenty-five Rhea Reid, W. H. Elliott, Brighton, Mass., first; Peter Crowe second.

Twenty-five My Maryland, Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J., first; A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., second.

Twenty-five Mrs. Jardine, Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Pa., first; E. Towill second.

Twenty-five Mrs. Potter Palmer, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, no second.

Twenty-five Perle, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, no second.

Twenty-five Mme. Chatenay, Robert Simpson first, Poehlmann Bros. Co. second.

Twenty-five Ivory, United States Cut Flower Co., Elmira, N. Y., first; no second.

August Poehlmann.

(President American Rose Society.)

Twenty-five Wellesley, one entry, disqualified.

Twenty-five Killarney, Poehlmann Bros. Co. first, Peter Crowe second.

Twenty-five Richmond, E. Towill first, W. H. Elliott second.

Best and largest collection of teas and hybrid teas, six or more varieties, Gude Bros. Co., Washington, D. C., first; no second.

One hundred Richmond, A. Farenwald first.

Best arranged vase or receptacle, to contain not to exceed one dozen roses, Beauties barred, W. H. Grever, Buffalo, first; E. A. Slattery, Buffalo, second.

Best twenty-five Killarney, white or pink, Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., first, on White Killarney.

Thirty-six My Maryland, Robert Simpson first.

Twenty-five My Maryland, Robert Simpson first.

Fifty Killarney, the Michell trophy, A. Farenwald first.

Twenty-five Beauties, the Pulverized Manure Co. trophy, E. Towill first.

Special prize of Lakeview Rose Gardens, Robert Simpson first.

Sweepstakes for best collection, Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co.

The judges scored White Killarney 87 points, and it was easily the central point of interest in the show. All the growers who have the pink variety will plant it for next season, as well as many others who look upon it as the best thing that has come out in years.

The judges also passed upon South Orange Beauty, shown by W. A. Manda, good for pot culture or outdoor use, but not for cutting.

Charles Sandiford, Buffalo, was given honorable mention for his table of cyclamens.

The Business Session.

The annual business session of the society was called to order at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening, March 17, by President August F. Poehlmann. While the adjective large hardly would apply to the attendance, the audience certainly was interested, for there is in this country no more earnest body of floricultural workers than that composed of the regulars of the American Rose Society, and this year's attendance is about as it has been in previous years. President Poehlmann, after brief introductory remarks, presented his annual address, which was as follows:

President's Address.

"Following custom, it devolves upon me to address you at this, our tenth annual convention.

"Through the courtesy and cordial invitation extended to this society by the Buffalo Florists' Club, represented by their able leader, William Kasting, and associates, we find ourselves here tonight. What these men have accomplished to make us feel welcome, no one can fail to see. Buffalo, lying, as it does, almost midway between the large rose-growing centers of the east, west, north and south, is ideally situated for our convention and exhibition.

"It is only eight months ago that the Buffalo Florists' Club, in conjunction with the Niagara florists, participated in entertaining the S. A. F. most royally, ample proof that we are indeed in the hands of friends, who appreciate our coming, and whom we in turn can but thank most heartily for their brotherly, generous, hospitable spirit.

"Here, then, are past friendships renewed, new friendships formed and opinions exchanged—all of which serve to make us enjoy this old world, and enrich us in the knowledge of the beautiful.

"From these gatherings, inspirations are given to something more lofty—

What these men have accomplished to make us feel welcome, no one can fail to see. Buffalo, lying, as it does, almost midway between the large rose-growing centers of the east, west, north and south, is ideally situated for our convention and exhibition.

"It is only eight months ago that the Buffalo Florists' Club, in conjunction with the Niagara florists, participated in entertaining the S. A. F. most royally, ample proof that we are indeed in the hands of friends, who appreciate our coming, and whom we in turn can but thank most heartily for their brotherly, generous, hospitable spirit.

"Here, then, are past friendships renewed, new friendships formed and opinions exchanged—all of which serve to make us enjoy this old world, and enrich us in the knowledge of the beautiful.

"From these gatherings, inspirations are given to something more lofty—more divine; something in the future superior to what we had heretofore.

"Here we find the real enthusiast, wrapped in wonder at the progress made in the growing of the queen of flowers, the rose.

"Who, that has any material interest or love for roses, can help but admire the beautiful specimens arrayed here for our inspection? Who of you, lovers and growers of the rose, but came to this gathering with a certain object, that object to improve yourself in your chosen profession?

The Garden Roses.

"In the matter of outdoor roses and other subjects, so many valuable suggestions have been submitted at former conventions, which appear in the annual bulletins, that I hardly know what more to offer.

"To my mind, the field for and sale of outdoor roses is unlimited wherever good rose soil is located or obtainable.

"Study well your varieties, their habits, wants, and hardiness, the soils and localities wherein they will thrive best, and then proceed. Comparatively little has been done in this line, when we consider the immense, unbounded resources at our hands, and the society's aim, which is: 'A rose for every home, a bush for every garden.'

"This branch of the work is left almost entirely to the nurserymen, many of whom have established an immense business, and who, like the commercial rose growers, are ever on the alert for something new with which to delight their customers, and thereby advance their own interests.

"By placing the various roses, best adapted to the different localities, past the experimental stage, where good results are obtained, you will do much toward discrediting the doubts and fears of the investing public and create an unprecedented demand.

"In this connection, it occurred to me that a good way to bring outdoor roses more prominently before the public would be to obtain permission from public officials to plant plots or individual bushes in public squares, gardens or parks, without charge; showing the name of each variety and of the party who supplied them, in small yet plain letters.

The New Sorts.

"One of the principal attractions at these annual exhibitions is to see these new creations of the floral world, these new wonders of the rose kingdom.

"We see, we like, we buy, we try. They make good, or we lose out. On first failure we may try again.

"A race horse is good only when he makes good. He may be a good looker, but be out of the running. So with many of our pets. They are relegated to the background if the remuneration is not sufficient. The ambitious grower is never satisfied to leave the trial of new varieties to his neighbor, but will try himself to find a winner. Often these new things turn out pretty hot ones. It is quite natural that there are many disappointments. It cannot be otherwise. One winner, however, will cover the shortcomings of a multitude of raw ones.

"The breeders, hybridizers and introducers of new roses deserve encouragement and support, even if they manage to put one over occasionally. New varieties put life in the business. Keep on striving for high standards. The trade demands it.

"In the cut roses, a number of new delegates are in the field looking for recognition. Notable among these are White Killarney and My Maryland. Both will be extensively grown. The society offers ample reward to its exhibitors and deals fairly with all new introductions.

Disseminating Knowledge.

"Your various committees have faithfully attended to and accomplished the work imposed on them. Your secretary in particular was indefatigable and conscientious in the full performance of his duties, to which I can attest by reason of his voluminous correspondence, and deserves the sincere thanks of this society.

"I would like to impress once more on all interested in the sale and culture of outdoor roses the need of disseminating reliable knowledge among the public.

"During our meetings a number of very instructive essays will be read by men experienced in their lines, and which will be entitled to our careful thought and consideration. The discussion which usually follows will open up new sources of knowledge and give to us new ideas. Of one thing we are certain: we are progressing with the times. Let us forever keep on doing so.

"To further the society's work and aim, we want it to be known that all lovers of the rose are welcome to our ranks. The annual bulletin, which contains much valuable information, is published at considerable expense by the earnestness and care bestowed on the various subjects. To place the society on a solid financial footing, we ask you to be with us. Annual membership dues are $3, life membership $50.

"To the Buffalo Florists' Club and associates, who have provided the society with workers to carry on this exhibition, and have looked after the society's welfare, I wish to again express our hearty thanks, hoping that each of you feels well repaid by the pleasure it has given us to be with you."

Secretary's Report.

Secretary Hammond read the minutes of the previous session, which were approved, and he then presented his annual report, which was in part as follows:

"No society could have a more loyal set of backers than has the American Rose Society. The past year has seen the society sustained by a number of men who claimed the privilege of assisting in meeting the expenses. President August F. Poehlmann has taken the keenest interest in affairs. Separated by distance, as a society such as this is, it requires a long view to keep all matters together and moving.

"The schedule of prizes has been carefully revised by the committee appointed by the president, J. N. May, Robert Simpson, Alexander Montgomery, Frank R. Pierson and Bejamin Hammond. The first schedule was made up ten years ago and remained in force until this season. Last November, during the national flower show in Chicago, a general meeting of the Rose Society was held, at which time the sum of $350 was pledged by the gentlemen then present as a fund for the prizes to be offered this spring. At that meeting the important matter of ways and means was freely discussed. The offer of medals as prizes of honor was advised and stress was laid on the propriety of making use of the society's medals. The mint of the United States at Philadelphia has the society die. There never has been a gold medal struck, the value of which would be determined by its weight when struck. A few silver and bronze medals were once made. These have been distributed, except one bronze medal.

"The secretary would suggest as one practical way to largely extend the usefulness and membership of this society that one silver and one bronze medal be offered as a rose prize to local horticultural societies, to be known as the American Rose Society's prize, for the best display of roses without regard to variety at the local show, but that each society applying for the same shall have at least one regular and two associate members of the American Rose Society. This idea is advanced as the outcome of the discussion at the meeting referred to above. To put this to an available test I am authorized by a gentleman to say that he will pay for six silver and six bronze medals to be used as a start in this direction to popularize our society.

"President Poehlmann, in response to a request by interested parties, has appointed a committee to pass upon the important matter of registration of new roses. The chairman of that committee is ex-President Robert Simpson. This committee would give us prestige as a regular standing committee, as large interests may come before it for consideration.

"The annual bulletin of the society was issued after the close of the calendar year 1908, thus bringing all business up to the year's end. This book tells its own story. The cost of it was a little more than half covered by the advertisements furnished by a few at the rate of $10 for each page. Without the least taint of discourtesy the secretary would bring a matter to notice: That is, a request that when a prize is offered in money, it be sent in as soon as possible and, furthermore, if named for a special purpose and not so won, it may revert at once to the general fund to make good the total amount always required for the regular prize list.

"Our life membership has not increased the last year. Our invested fund has, however, reached the total of $2,950 in the hands of our efficient treasurer, Harry O. May. We have tried to keep in touch with each of our members on record, but so far the responses to the annual due bills have not been as full as desirable.

"At the last annual meeting the subject of a rose journal was one of moment. The tentative effort to start it into being, with the cost defrayed by an advertising card, was sidetracked by the proposition to launch and support it by subscription for a year as a trial. This plan never materialized. In the meantime the Gardeners' Chronicle has offered to give a magazine page each issue for the use of the American Rose Society as its popular paper. I hold a little money sent in for the rose journal project, which will be returned."

Treasurer's Report.

Treasurer Harry O. May made the following report of the financial affairs of the society for the year ending March 12, 1909:

Receipts	$2,152.07
Disbursements	1,968.93
To balance on hand	$ 183.14

"In addition to the above general account, four life members have joined the society, making a total of fifty-nine. The money of the life membership is added to a permanent fund, the interest from which is used in current expenses. The permanent fund now amounts to $2,950."

Papers Read.

Wednesday evening W. W. Coles, of Kokomo, Ind., presented a paper, pointing out some of the reasons why so many small retail growers fail with roses, and a paper by J. F. Huss, Hartford, Conn., on "The Rose Garden," also was presented. Both these papers appear in this issue.

For Thursday's session papers are promised by L. C. Corbett, Washington, D. C., entitled, "The Values of Soils for Special Work," and by George D. Leedle, Springfield, O., entitled "Roses as Popular Home Flowers." Thursday evening Leonard Barron, of New York city, is to give an illustrated lecture on roses, using the stereopticon.

PRIMULAS AND CINERARIAS.

I am growing some fine primroses, both Chinese and obconica, but cannot get any seed. Please tell me how to treat them. Is hand pollination necessary? I should like to make some crosses on cinerarias. Please give explicit directions, so I can get good seed. G. O. K.

Hand fertilization must be resorted to if you desire any results from either Primula obconica or P. Sinensis. Select the plants you intend to pollinate and place them apart from other plants of the same genus. Use a fine camel's-hair brush to carry the pollen grains from one flower to the stigma of another. Select a bright day for this operation and protect the flowers with gauze if you do not desire any outside agents, such as bees, flies, etc., to interfere with your work. Pinch off flowers not fertilized, to throw all possible vigor into the remaining ones. Stand the pots, if possible, on a sunny shelf. The reason you have failed in getting seeds from your primulas has been because no agencies have pollenized the flowers, and this is absolutely necessary for fertilization.

You will have no trouble in getting an abundance of seeds from your cinerarias. You will find it difficult, however, to keep any of these true to color. They are sporty and are difficult to fix. Cineraria stellata so far has never been offered in distinct colors. C. W.

RANUNCULUS.

GROWERS WHO FAIL WITH ROSES.

[A paper by Walter W. Coles, of Kokomo, Ind., read before the American Rose Society, at the Buffalo convention, March 17 to 19, 1909.]

In traveling over the country visiting floral establishments, we find that not over twenty per cent of the small retail growers make a success of roses. In fact, by far the larger per cent do not get enough out of their rose space to pay for the fuel. I have reference only to the florist who grows roses, carnations, and a general assortment of flowers and plants in a limited area. I know there are quite a number of florists, with but 10,000 to 25,000 feet of glass, who make a specialty of roses and whose stock is a credit to many of the larger growers. But this paper is for the small, all-around grower, and if it benefits even a very small per cent I shall feel well repaid for the short time it has taken me to pen these remarks.

Lack of Suitable Conditions.

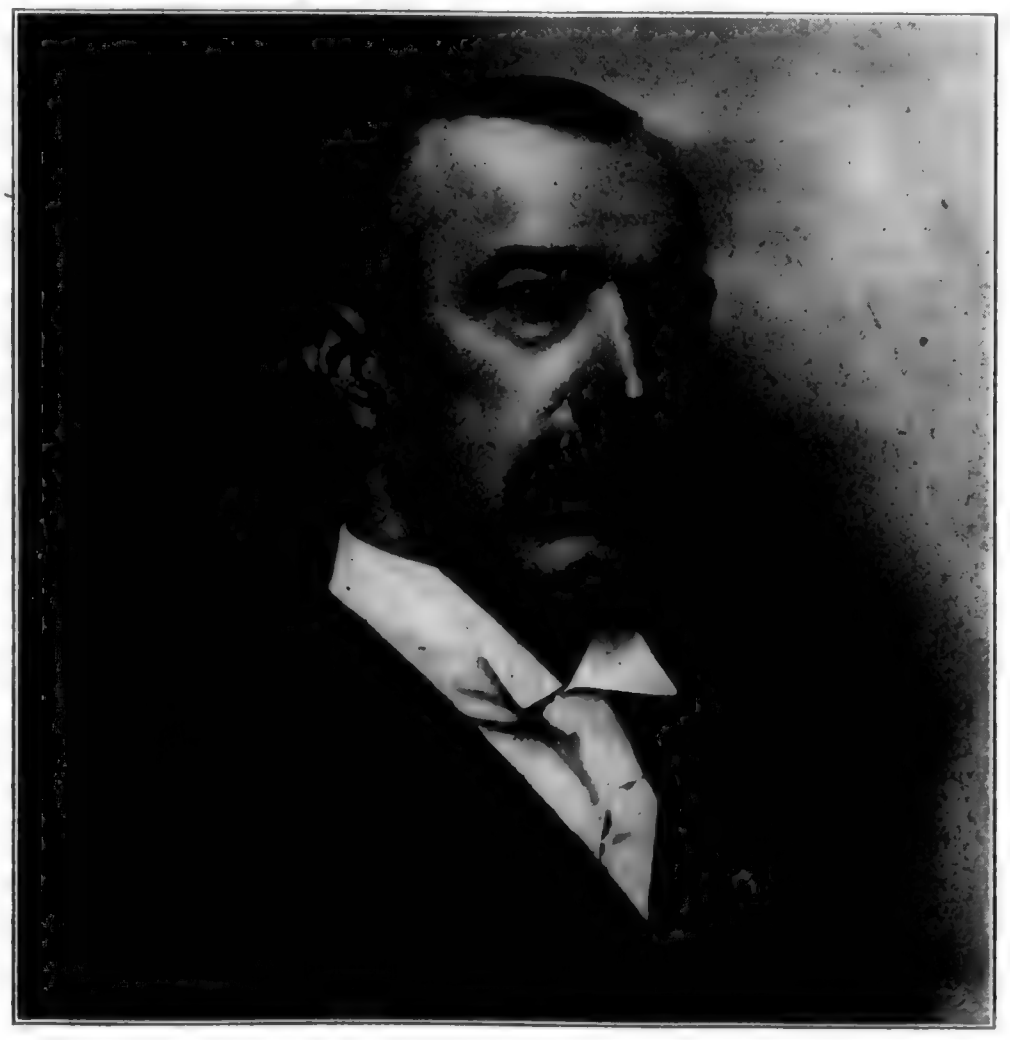
The first great handicap is a lack of suitable conditions. Carnations, bedding plants and a general line of stock are grown in the same house, in the same temperature, with success varying from fair to very good. Then roses are attempted. Under such conditions they cannot be kept at the proper temperature without hurting the other stock. Often they cannot be properly syringed on account of soaking other stock close by, and red spider gets a foothold. Sometimes doors left open carelessly, or necessarily for other purposes, cause a draught and start mildew. On account of spoiling tender stuff in the house, fumigating is put off and aphis gets a hold. Shading is put on for other stock and roses suffer under their part of it. Under such conditions it is practically useless to try to grow roses.

If a separate house can be devoted to roses, the above conditions can be eliminated. But even then there are usually many difficulties. A night fireman is seldom kept, and while the temperature may be kept right in the daytime, it is allowed to fall at night. Then the grower usually has so many other duties that the houses are sometimes neglected. If the house was not built for roses, perhaps the heating is inadequate and things cannot be kept right, even with the best of attention.

Neglect Rather Than Ignorance.

The above are conditions as they exist in hundreds of places. Added to this is a lack of knowledge of rose growing, and greatest of all, whether the knowledge be great or small, is the lack of doing what is known. The grower knows that he should plant early in June, but it is put off on account of the press of other work. He knows he should syringe and fumigate regularly, but for one reason or another it is not done. We will give a few general cultural remarks, but insist that the grower's success depends on combined knowledge and doing.

On such places the grower usually puts in a batch of cuttings, roses, carnations, geraniums, etc., in January or February. When rooted they are usually potted off and grown in the same house with a miscellaneous lot of plants. The result is usually a weak lot of plants, covered with red spider and mildew. They are shifted from 2-inch pots to 3-inch and sometimes grown under shaded glass. Some time in June or July they are planted on a bench, the glass still shaded, and a few panes of glass out here and there; which, however, he will put in good shape next week. But next week he is busy with the funeral work and the following week the carnations in the field must be hoed or weeded, and he thinks the roses will grow if they receive water once a day.



The Sad Result.

The result is, that in September or October, when his plants should be strong and healthy for the winter, they are weak and puny, but the red spider and mildew are still with them. To make matters worse, a few roses are needed during the summer for funeral work and the life is cut out of the plants, to save expenses, as the grower thinks. A few roses are usually cut in October and November, at a time when they can be bought at from $2 to $4 per hundred, but from December 1 to April 1, when roses are wanted and usually are scarce, his plants are standing still and do not return enough to pay for the fuel it takes to keep them alive.

The Remedy.

In the first place, the small grower or retail florist who uses but an average of seventy-five to 100 roses per week should not try to grow his own cut roses. He would make more money by buying them from some good grower, but those who feel that they must or will grow their stock should plant nothing but strong, healthy, clean plants. If they cannot grow them they should buy them and plant them in good, rich, new, mellow soil, sometime during the month of June. If the house is shaded, even if only slightly, see that the shading is all removed.

The next important thing is to repair all broken glass and, as soon as one is broken or blown out, replace it at once, as you would have to do in winter. From July 1 to September 1 give them lots of air and lots of water at all times. I firmly believe there are more roses ruined during the summer for want of water and air than from any other cause. It is money well spent to hire sufficient help in June to plant roses, as one month in June and July for roses planted on a bench is worth three times as much as in October and November. Keep the buds pinched off until the plants are strong and healthy and breaking freely, and at this point a top-dressing of cow manure will be beneficial.

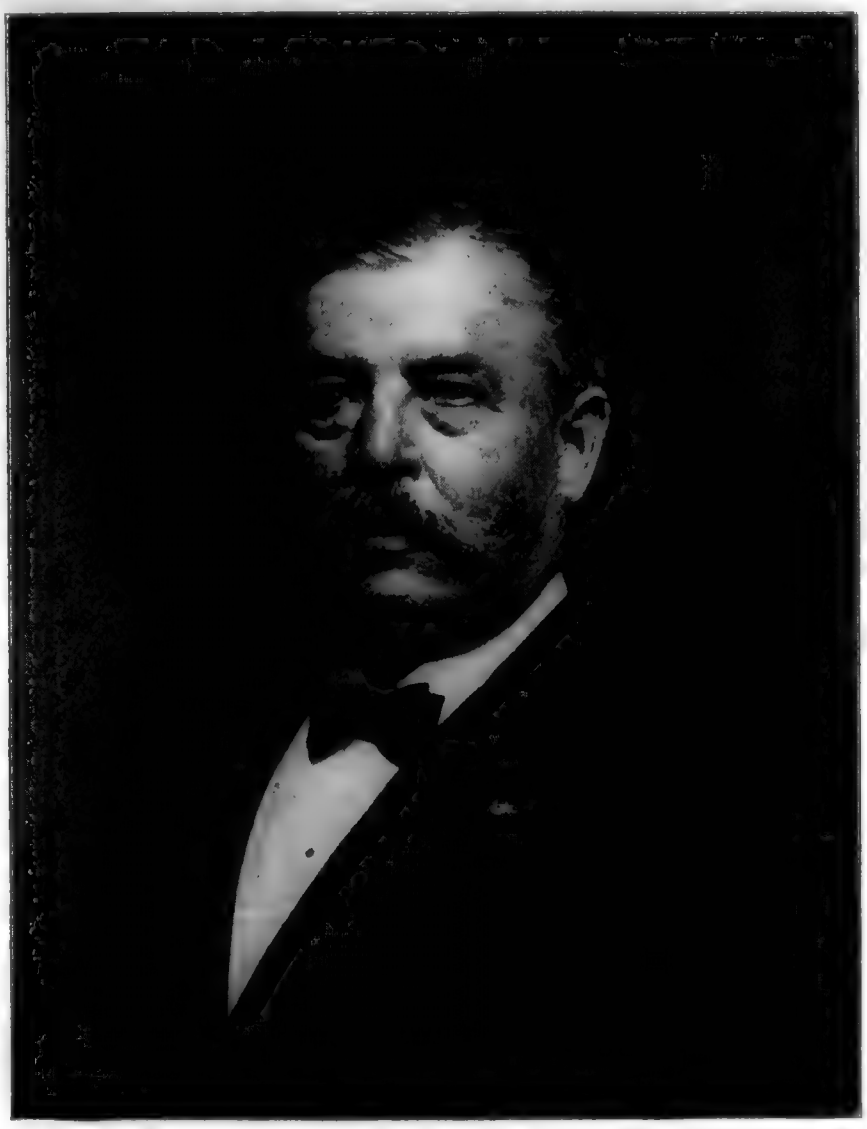
Grow Only a Few Varieties.

Do not grow too many varieties. For the small grower or beginner I would recommend but three kinds; Bride, Bridesmaid and Richmond. Don't fool with the American Beauty; let the Beauty specialists attend to them.

If roses must be grown in a small way, give them as many of the advantages that they receive on larger places as possible. Acquire as much knowledge as can be gained from reading and practical experience, and then see how large a per cent of this knowledge can be put into practice.

THE ROSE GARDEN.

[A paper by J. F. Huss, of Hartford, Conn., read before the American Rose Society at the Buffalo convention, March 17 to 19, 1909.]



It may be an unusual moment to write, when nature is in winter garb, about the rose garden; still, the very name is enough for the lover, to stimulate thoughts which bring back everything so highly interesting in the rose garden. Everyone may not care to have a garden of roses exclusively, but who among lovers of flowers would not like to have in his own garden the scene of three years ago that the rose committee witnessed here, on our place, which for private uses may be taken as a model?

But we cannot leave the rose with this notice. Grand as are the masses of roses we have occasionally met with, we have never yet seen anything even approaching our conception of the scenes of grandeur and beauty that might be worked out by the massing of the modern varieties of roses. A rose garden is now almost indispensable, either as a part of, or as an adjunct to, every large and comprehensive garden. If in the original plan of a garden it cannot be conveniently worked in with the general arrangement of floral gardens, then a separate piece of ground is set aside for the purpose. This I have often seen, and have always found it a most interesting spot. But apart from the immediate question, whether there is a separate rose garden or not, roses should be found plentifully in every general garden, on account of the varied forms they are capable of assuming, either naturally or by training. They are seldom out of place anywhere. What with dwarf roses, standards and climbers, there exists ample material to adorn the most select position, or to obliterate the most awkward spots, bringing them into harmony with the general design.

Form of the Rose Garden.

But what should the form of a rose garden be? I will give my ideas as briefly as possible.

It should be formed, if possible, on level ground, with as many beds as the space selected will allow. Such beds should be four feet wide, planted with three or four rows of plants, two feet apart, and a grass border three or four feet wide between beds will enable anyone to reach each plant to cut the roses without stepping into the bed. Such grass borders are easily kept, by mowing once a week with a lawn mower. At the same time this grass walk sets off the flowers to great advantage. With some fifteen or twenty beds, with a double amount of well selected, best flowering varieties, say, forty plants in each bed, it will make a very attractive collection. These beds may be in the form of a square or oblong.

The rose garden can be made very attractive and artistic. All depends upon the gardener who has charge of such estates, or upon the landscape gardeners who have to make designs for a small bed or a regular rose garden.

The rose garden should be surrounded with a border, three feet wide, of hybrid teas, a few fine standards or French briars, or of laxa stock, which are the two most flexible stems for the layering in the fall.

Fences, Pergolas and Terraces.

A very light wire fence, with a ¾-inch iron post, with two or three wires a foot or eighteen inches apart, and planted with Crimson Rambler roses, will make an excellent appearance from a distance. A still more imposing scene can be obtained by forming a pergola, which can be easily constructed with ¾-inch gas pipe driven into an 18-inch cedar or locust post, eight feet high, with a cross bar on the top from one post to the other, with a grass walk in between, as many of our rose members will remember having seen at our place, which was pronounced by all a veritable paradise of roses. Such a pergola or arch should be planted with as many varieties as there are posts, or not more than two to a post, as with our advanced progress in hybridization of so many valuable climbing roses, the choice is at everyone's command, and gorgeous sights can be obtained, of most bewildering beauty, of plants that bring forth their blossoms at the same periods, of hybrid perpetuals and the rest of teas or hybrid teas.

Again, a rose garden may be laid out on a terrace, as ours is located. There may be a bank sodded or sown with grass seed. But such a bank should be in full harmony with the rest of the rose garden and should be planted with trailing roses and pinned down, making it a "bed of roses." It will add greatly to the rose garden.

Good taste and art should be exemplified in every detail of a rose garden. We have also a great many dwarf roses, like the Baby Ramblers and the midget roses, that are used to form borders, especially around hybrid perpetual beds, to hide the bare ground. They are very attractive, and the result is one that will meet with the delighted approval of every lover of rose gardens. Such sights cannot easily be forgotten.

Soil and Manure.

Almost any soil will grow roses, as we see them in yards or gardens, providing a proper selection of varieties is made, and attention is given to the application of suitable manure. Roses, of course, enjoy a rich soil, but to keep adding cow, horse and pig manure upon a naturally rich ground is not as beneficial as a change to nitrate of soda in the case of light soils, or soda for those that are naturally very close and stiff. This subject is, therefore, more a question of judicious manuring than selection. The golden rule is to add what the ground is most deficient in, and never to apply close, moisture-retaining manure to a soil that is naturally stiff and moist. A very dry and sandy compost may easily be made suitable, by adding a few loads of stiff, fibrous loam and clay, also by manuring with fairly well rotted cow manure; while in many cases, by adopting the opposite plan, a stiff, poor soil may be worked into equally good condition. The ideal ma-

GROWERS WHO FAIL WITH ROSES.

[A paper by Walter W. Coles, of Kokomo, Ind., read before the American Rose Society, at the Buffalo convention, March 17 to 19, 1909.]

In traveling over the country visiting floral establishments, we find that not over twenty per cent of the small retail growers make a success of roses. In fact, by far the larger per cent do not get enough out of their rose space to pay for the fuel. I have reference only to the florist who grows roses, carnations, and a general assortment of flowers and plants in a limited area. I know there are quite a number of florists, with but 10,000 to 25,000 feet of glass, who make a specialty of roses and whose stock is a credit to many of the larger growers. But this paper is for the small, all-around grower, and if it benefits even a very small per cent I shall feel well repaid for the short time it has taken me to pen these remarks.

Lack of Suitable Conditions.

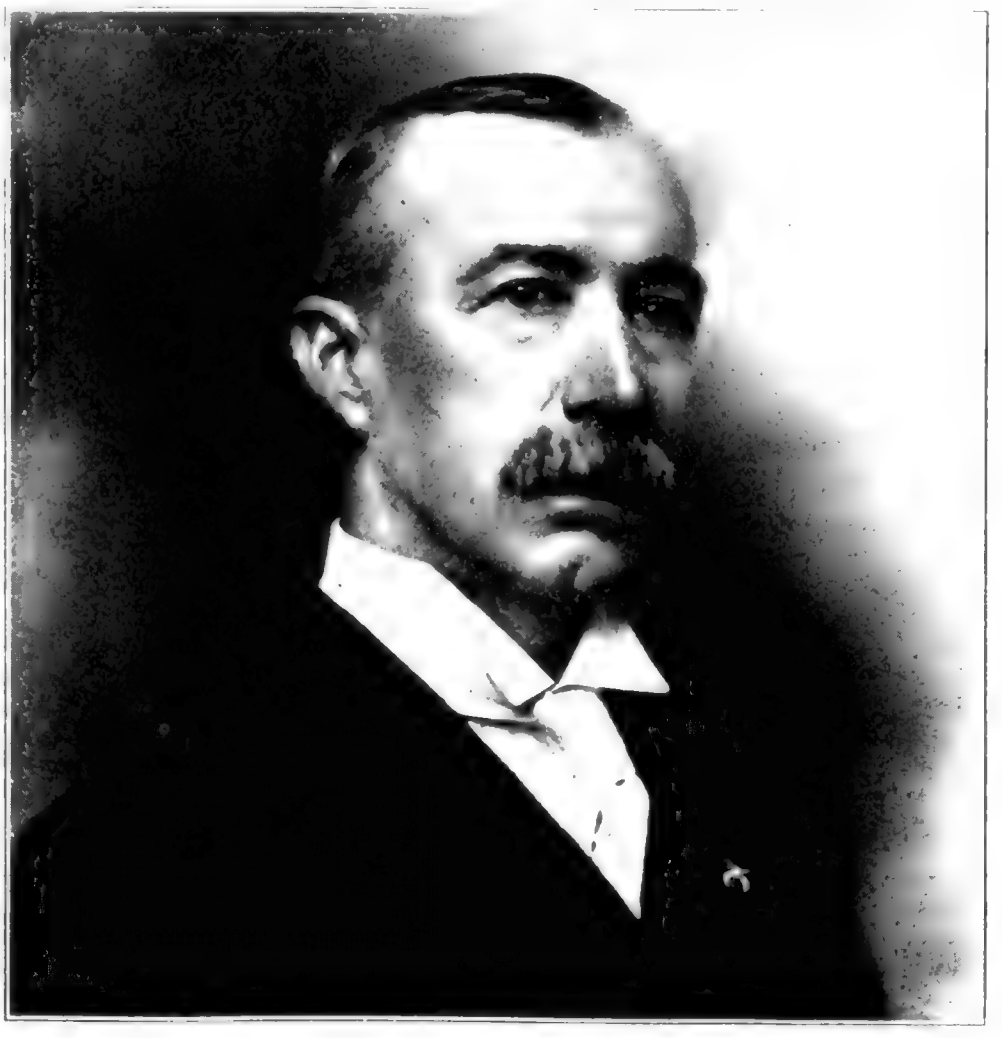
The first great handicap is a lack of suitable conditions. Carnations, bedding plants and a general line of stock are grown in the same house, in the same temperature, with success varying from fair to very good. Then roses are attempted. Under such conditions they cannot be kept at the proper temperature without hurting the other stock. Often they cannot be properly syringed on account of soaking other stock close by, and red spider gets a foothold. Sometimes doors left open carelessly, or necessarily for other purposes, cause a draught and start mildew. On account of spoiling tender stuff in the house, fumigating is put off and aphis gets a hold. Shading is put on for other stock and roses suffer under their part of it. Under such conditions it is practically useless to try to grow roses.

If a separate house can be devoted to roses, the above conditions can be eliminated. But even then there are usually many difficulties. A night fireman is seldom kept, and while the temperature may be kept right in the daytime, it is allowed to fall at night. Then the grower usually has so many other duties that the houses are sometimes neglected. If the house was not built for roses, perhaps the heating is inadequate and things cannot be kept right, even with the best of attention.

Neglect Rather Than Ignorance.

The above are conditions as they exist in hundreds of places. Added to this is a lack of knowledge of rose growing, and greatest of all, whether the knowledge be great or small, is the lack of doing what is known. The grower knows that he should plant early in June, but it is put off on account of the press of other work. He knows he should syringe and fumigate regularly, but for one reason or another it is not done. We will give a few general cultural remarks, but insist that the grower's success depends on combined knowledge and doing.

On such places the grower usually puts in a batch of cuttings, roses, carnations, geraniums, etc., in January or February. When rooted they are usually potted off and grown in the same house with a miscellaneous lot of plants. The result is usually a weak lot of plants, covered with red spider and mildew. They are shifted from 2-inch pots to 3-inch and sometimes grown under shaded glass. Some time in June or July they are planted on a bench, the glass still shaded, and a few panes of glass out here and there; which, however, he will put in good shape next week. But next week he is busy with the funeral work and the following week the carnations in the field must be hoed or weeded, and he thinks the roses will grow if they receive water once a day.



The Sad Result.

The result is, that in September or October, when his plants should be strong and healthy for the winter, they are weak and puny, but the red spider and mildew are still with them. To make matters worse, a few roses are needed during the summer for funeral work and the life is cut out of the plants, to save expenses, as the grower thinks. A few roses are usually cut in October and November, at a time when they can be bought at from $2 to $4 per hundred, but from December 1 to April 1, when roses are wanted and usually are scarce, his plants are standing still and do not return enough to pay for the fuel it takes to keep them alive.

The Remedy.

In the first place, the small grower or retail florist who uses but an average of seventy-five to 100 roses per week should not try to grow his own cut roses. He would make more money by buying them from some good grower, but those who feel that they must or will grow their stock should plant nothing but strong, healthy, clean plants. If they cannot grow them they should buy them and plant them in good, rich, new, mellow soil, sometime during the month of June. If the house is shaded, even if only slightly, see that the shading is all removed.

The next important thing is to repair all broken glass and, as soon as one is broken or blown out, replace it at once, as you would have to do in winter. From July 1 to September 1 give them lots of air and lots of water at all times. I firmly believe there are more roses ruined during the summer for want of water and air than from any other cause. It is money well spent to hire sufficient help in June to plant roses, as one month in June and July for roses planted on a bench is worth three times as much as terial is fairly stiff, not too wet, and not less than three feet in depth, with a good drainage, so that by heavy showers the roots are not left in water. With such well prepared rose beds they can be enriched at will.

Roses will thrive perfectly well for at least eight to ten years. After that time, if still in good condition, they should be gradually transplanted in late fall, the plants well pruned out, suckers cleaned out, the soil deeply trenched and mixed with good rotted manure, and the roses replanted, when they will thrive anew and will last for many years. But we should never lose sight of the newer varieties of roses, and should supplant such older varieties as have lost their usefulness. A wide-awake gardener or lover of roses will naturally keep up with the times.

Pruning.

Pruning in the latitude of the New England states cannot be very well done before April 1, as the removing of the winter protection is usually begun by that date. This has been my experience. The pruning of every class of roses is a vital operation. All useless wood should be carefully cut out, only retaining the good, strong canes, and hybrid perpetuals and hybrid teas are pruned alike, say, a foot from the ground. You can easily retain the same height from year to year, as they should always, every year, be renewed with new canes and the old ones cut out.

As to climbing roses, the pruning is very different, as you keep five or six long canes around each of the posts you have for the arch, and keep these young ones as long as they cover the intended arch, or pergola, as it may be called. The old wood is cut, but sometimes we have not enough canes to produce the desired effect, and one or two of last year's growth are retained, and the side shoots are cut back to two or three eyes. The canes are then carefully tied up with fine willows, such as the European well trained gardener uses, or with any other material that is commonly used, in such a clean way, where the strong winds will not move them from their holdings. The same operation is used to decorate a wire fence. As for the trailing roses, they are pinned down so that the bank may be well covered with the low canes, and top shoots are cut back to two or three eyes. The pruning done, the soil is at once loosened up carefully with a spade fork.

Red Spider and Other Pests.

One thing should not be lost sight of, and that is, to have water close and conveniently at hand. As soon as the plants begin to bring up the growth of leaves, they need to be syringed nearly every day, to keep red spider, aphis and greenfly away in the dry season. This method has been followed with splendid success for many years. And when later the rose bug or chafer appears, Slug Shot is used with splendid effect, and if water is at hand, can easily be cleaned off long before the lady of the house, or the gentleman either, wishes to visit the roses. There is nothing more inviting than to see a clean, well kept rose garden, with clean leaves and perfect flowers, but careful watchfulness has to be kept constantly over it.

At the beginning or middle of June a good mulching with short stable manure, two or three inches thick, should be applied, as roses like a cool footing, and this is extremely helpful to the cultivation, preventing the soil from breaking or drying off, and it is the means also of retaining good foliage and a better quality of roses.

When the blooms make their appearance, great care should be taken of the common enemy, the rose bug, which is a very troublesome one in most localities, and they must be picked up and great watch maintained. The withered flowers must also be carefully picked up, and no petals left on the ground. This is a strict rule among well kept rose gardens. A watchful eye should be always kept on budded roses, as they often throw up suckers, which must be at once removed, or mischief will be the result, as I have once seen at Lenox, where a fine rose bed was neglected for two years, and on the third year there was nothing left but suckers, which had outgrown all the grafts. At the beginning of August the plants will have thrown root canes from three to five feet high. These should be cut back to three feet. This simple, light pruning will strengthen the canes for the following flower season, and at the same time will give the pleasing sight of a uniform harmony in the garden.

Winter Protection.

Winter protection, in this cold, heartless latitude, plays an important part. One who comes from south of New York would not think of protecting roses, as experience has taught us to do, all over the New England states, except where near salt water. At the end of November or December—in fact, as soon as we have heavy frost, or, rather, before such frosts arrive, standard roses are detached from their stalks and the crown is bent down, a hole in the ground made and the crown laid in it and partly covered with soil, with two cross sticks to hold them down. All ramblers are laid down in the same manner. Hybrid teas and hybrid perpetuals are bent half down, tied over each other, and as soon as heavy frost is in sight all the rose garden is covered with a light layer of leaves, and long straw manure or bad hay is placed all over the beds of climbing roses as well. One year we did not cover our ramblers, and in the spring they were all frozen to the very bottom. I find a little extra work will save lots of trouble and pay well in the end.

Geraniums

TROUBLE WITH GERANIUMS.

We had considerable trouble last spring with our geraniums, and the same trouble is beginning again this spring. The outer edge of the foliage dies, there often being a ring entirely around the leaf. Upon examination we find that the roots of these plants are also dead. Sometimes this happens with young plants in 3-inch pots before the pots are full of roots, and again with large plants in 5-inch and 6-inch pots. What is the cause and cure for this trouble?

R. F. C.

We are inclined to think that the trouble must lie chiefly in your soil. You do not say what your potting medium was. If you have used a too large proportion of bone meal or any chemical fertilizer, it would result in just such conditions as you describe. It is difficult, without knowing more of actual conditions, to do more than theorize on probable causes of your trouble.

Geraniums resent being treated as semi-aquatics. Too much moisture in the soil, having it in a constantly moist state, causes soft, flabby foliage, which easily becomes a prey to blight. Frequent overhead spraying should also be guarded against. We always like to allow our plants to dry out well between waterings. This induces a hard, stocky growth, and if your soil does not contain too much nitrogenous manure, such plants will flower with a freedom never attained by those differently treated. Use bone meal in preference to cow manure at the final potting. Use no manure of any sort at the earlier pottings, or let it be a small proportion, old and well pulverized.

Abundant sunshine, free ventilation, a night temperature of not over 50 degrees and a somewhat dry atmosphere are some of the factors making for successful geranium culture. C. W.

BLIGHT ON GERANIUMS.

I enclose some diseased geranium leaves. Can you tell what is the trouble with the plants? How shall I treat them, or should I throw them out of the house?

H. C. B.

This trouble is quite common in geraniums. The real cause of the disease can only be guessed at, without seeing the plants and knowing the growing conditions. We would not throw away the plants on which this trouble has appeared. Pick off affected leaves. Run the plants on the dry side. Keep them in full sunshine. Dust a little air-slaked lime over them. Let the temperature be as near 50 degrees at night as possible. Ventilate freely, and always avoid a close, stagnant atmosphere. In potting use no animal manure, unless thoroughly decayed, and be sure it is dried and well broken up. Bone meal is a better fertilizer than barnyard manure, and will give freer flowering plants, with a harder growth, than the cow or sheep manure you may have been using.

Remember that geraniums should not stand crowded together. This induces moldiness and blight. They should not be kept constantly wet at the root, but ought to be allowed to dry out well between waterings. They should not be sprayed overhead, as this tends to make the foliage soft and sappy, especially when they are kept too moist at the root. If you keep your plants pretty dry for a week or two, the trouble should gradually disappear, especially if the atmosphere of the house is not kept moist and stuffy. C. W.

THE CROSS OF ROSES.

The cross of roses shown in the accompanying illustration is noteworthy for the way its symmetry is preserved, the trio of cycas leaves placed at one side balancing the ribbon on the other. This is one of the series of designs by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia, who devotes especial attention to making the lettering, when demanded, as graceful as possible. His method in the present instance is an example. The color idea of this cross is white, Bride roses, lily of the valley, gardenias and Easter lilies being the principal flowers used. PHIL.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Executive Board Meets.

The first member of the S. A. F. executive board to arrive in Cincinnati for the annual meeting March 13 was President J. A. Valentine, of Denver. He was closely followed by Secretary W. N. Rudd, of Chicago; W. J. Vesey, of Ft. Wayne, and George Asmus, also of Chicago. These, with E. G. Gillett, vice-president and local member of the committee, failed to constitute a quorum and no meeting could be held on Saturday. In the evening Mr. Gillett escorted the gentlemen to a meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society. They arrived about 10 p. m., in time for the social part of the meeting. Each was called upon for a few words. President Valentine advised the local society not to try to do too much in the way of entertainment, as he was afraid that this rivalry among the various cities in the way of entertainment, and the great cost that it involves will, in time, be a detriment and keep many cities from extending invitations to the S. A. F. A general good time was had and the meeting adjourned very near the midnight hour.

Sunday marked the arrival of Eugene Dailledouze, of Flatbush, L. I., and F. H. Traendly, of New York city. The balance of the committee, including Treasurer H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg; Samuel Murray, Kansas City; J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Boston, and John Young, New York city, were unable to be present.

At the invitation of President J. A. Peterson, of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, the committee took Sunday dinner at his residence in Westwood and in the afternoon inspected his greenhouse plant.

Monday morning the real business was taken up. There were four meetings in all, held in the committee room at the Hotel Sinton. There was a great deal of work for the committee. A program which is said to be one of unusual interest was mapped out for the August convention. The report of these meetings will be announced in due time by Secretary Rudd.

Wm. Murphy, who was nominated by the Cincinnati Florists' Club, was appointed to the important office of manager of the trade exhibition.

A part of Monday morning was consumed by the committee in viewing the locations chosen by the local society for the trade exhibition and in which to hold the convention meetings. The members of the committee were well pleased with the facilities which the local society is providing. The exhibition hall is a large building and was built for the purpose of holding just such exhibitions. There will be ample space for everyone. Adjoining this building is the Odeon, in which the business meetings of the convention will be held. This is a small opera house, seating 600 persons. There is a good stage and comfortable opera chairs. This place was considered ideal for the meetings.

Monday evening a banquet at the Sinton hotel was tendered the committee by the Cincinnati Florists' Society. Altogether there were twenty-five persons present, including E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., members of the Cincinnati Florists' Society and Wm. Finch, who was present as a representative of the Cincinnati Industrial League. After the repast E. G. Gillett introduced Albert McCullough as toastmaster for the evening. Toasts were responded to by all the members of the committee and also by Wm. Finch, J. W. Rodgers, J. A. Peterson and R. Witterstaetter. E. G. Hill spoke in his usual entertaining manner. Especially interesting talks were made by Judge W. J. Vesey, who touched on various topics of interest, and B. P. Critchell, who told of the first meeting of the S. A. F., which was held in Cincinnati twenty-five years ago. E. G. Gillett was the last one on the program and he gave those present a little idea of what they might expect in the way of entertainment at the coming convention.

The business meetings of the committee were completed about noon on Tuesday. In the afternoon they journeyed to Price Hill to visit R. Witterstaetter's greenhouses. E. G. Hill went with them.

The various members of the committee left Cincinnati Tuesday evening, March 16, W. N. Rudd returning to Chicago, W. J. Vesey going to Atlanta, Ga., and J. A. Valentine, E. Dailledouze, George Asmus and F. H. Traendly to Buffalo to attend the convention of the American Rose Society.

NEWPORT, R. I.—Stewart Ritchie will open a retail flower store at 40 Broadway.

This method has been followed with splendid success for many years. And when later the rose bug or chafer appears, Slug Shot is used with splendid effect, and if water is at hand, can easily be cleaned off long before the lady of the house, or the gentleman either, wishes to visit the roses. There is nothing more inviting than to see a clean, well kept rose garden, with clean leaves and perfect flowers, but careful watchfulness has to be kept constantly over it.

At the beginning or middle of June a good mulching with short stable manure, two or three inches thick, should be applied, as roses like a cool footing, and this is extremely helpful to the cultivation, preventing the soil from breaking or drying off, and it is the means also of retaining good foliage and a better quality of roses.

When the blooms make their appearance, great care should be taken of the common enemy, the rose bug, which is a very troublesome one in most localities, and they must be picked up and great watch maintained. The withered flowers must also be carefully picked up, and no petals left on the ground. This is a strict rule among well kept rose gardens. A watchful eye should be always kept on budded roses, as they often throw up suckers, which must be at once removed, or mischief will be the result, as I have once seen at Lenox, where a fine rose bed was neglected for two years, and on the third year there was nothing left but suckers, which had outgrown all the grafts. At the beginning of August the plants will have thrown root canes from three to five feet high. These should be cut back to three feet. This simple, light pruning will strengthen the canes for the following flower season, and at the same time will give the pleasing sight of a uniform harmony in the garden.

Winter Protection.

Winter protection, in this cold, heartless latitude, plays an important part. One who comes from south of New York would not think of protecting roses, as experience has taught us to do, all over the New England states, except where near salt water. At the end of November or December in fact, as soon as we have heavy frost, or, rather, before such frosts arrive, standard roses are detached from their stalks and the crown is bent down, a hole in the ground made and the crown laid in it and partly covered with soil, with two cross sticks to hold them down. All ramblers are laid down in the same manner. Hybrid teas and hybrid perpetuals are bent half down, tied over each other, and as soon as heavy frost is in sight all the rose garden is covered with a light layer of leaves, and long straw manure or bad hay is placed all over the beds of climbing roses as well. One year we did not cover our ramblers, and in the spring they were all frozen to the very bottom. I find a little extra work will save lots of trouble and pay well in the end.

TROUBLE WITH GERANIUMS.

We had considerable trouble last spring with our geraniums, and the same trouble is beginning again this spring. The outer edge of the foliage dies, there often being a ring entirely around the leaf. Upon examination we find that the roots of these plants are also dead. Sometimes this happens with young plants in 3 inch pots before the pots are full of roots, and again with large plants in 5 inch and 6 inch pots. What is the cause and cure for this trouble?

R. F. C.

We are inclined to think that the trouble must lie chiefly in your soil. You do not say what your potting medium was. If you have used a too large proportion of bone meal or any chemical fertilizer, it would result in just such conditions as you describe. It is difficult, without knowing more of actual conditions, to do more than theorize on probable causes of your trouble.

Geraniums resent being treated as semi aquatics. Too much moisture in the soil, having it in a constantly moist state, causes soft, flabby foliage, which easily becomes a prey to blight. Frequent overhead spraying should also be guarded against. We always like to allow our plants to dry out well between waterings. This induces a hard, stocky growth, and if your soil does not contain too much nitrogenous manure, such plants will flower with a freedom never attained by those differently treated. Use bone meal in preference to cow manure at the final potting. Use no manure of any sort at the earlier pottings, or let it be a small proportion, old and well pulverized.

Abundant sunshine, free ventilation, a night temperature of not over 50 degrees and a somewhat dry atmosphere are some of the factors making for successful geranium culture. C. W.

BLIGHT ON GERANIUMS.

I enclose some diseased geranium leaves. Can you tell what is the trouble with the plants? How shall I treat them, or should I throw them out of the house?

H. C. B.

This trouble is quite common in geraniums. The real cause of the disease can only be guessed at, without seeing the plants and knowing the growing conditions. We would not throw away the plants on which this trouble has appeared. Pick off affected leaves. Run the plants on the dry side. Keep them in full sunshine. Dust a little air slaked lime over them. Let the temperature be as near 50 degrees at night as possible. Ventilate freely, and always avoid a close, stagnant atmosphere. In potting use no animal manure, unless thoroughly decayed, and be sure it is dried and well broken up. Bone meal is a better fertilizer than barnyard manure, and will give freer flowering plants, with a harder growth, than the cow or sheep manure you may have been using.

Remember that geraniums should not stand crowded together. This induces moldiness and blight. They should not be kept constantly wet at the root, but ought to be allowed to dry out well between waterings. They should not be sprayed overhead, as this tends to make the foliage soft and sappy, especially when they are kept too moist at the root. If you keep your plants pretty dry for a week or two, the trouble should gradually disappear, especially if the atmosphere of the house is not kept moist and stuffy. C. W.

THE CROSS OF ROSES.

The cross of roses shown in the accompanying illustration is noteworthy for the way its symmetry is preserved, the trio of cycas leaves placed at one side balancing the ribbon on the other. This is one of the series of designs by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia, who devotes especial attention to making the lettering, when demanded, as graceful as possible. His method in the present instance is an example. The color idea of this cross is white, Bride roses, lily of the valley, gardenias and Easter lilies being the principal flowers used. PHIL.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Executive Board Meets.

The first member of the S. A. F. executive board to arrive in Cincinnati for the annual meeting March 13 was President J. A. Valentine, of Denver. He was closely followed by Secretary W. N. Rudd, of Chicago; W. J. Vesey, of Ft. Wayne, and George Asmus, also of Chicago. These, with E. G. Gillett, vice president and local member of the committee, failed to constitute a quorum and no meeting could be held on Saturday. In the evening Mr. Gillett escorted the gentlemen to a meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society. They arrived about 10 p. m., in time for the social part of the meeting. Each was called upon for a few words. President Valentine advised the local society not to try to do too much in the way of entertainment, as he was afraid that this rivalry among the various cities in the way of entertainment, and the great cost that it involves will, in time, be a detriment and keep many cities from extending invitations to the S. A. F. A general good time was had and the meeting adjourned very near the midnight hour.

Sunday marked the arrival of Eugene Dailledouze, of Flatbush, L. I., and F. H. Traendly, of New York city. The balance of the committee, including Treasurer H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg; Samuel Murray, Kansas City; J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Boston, and John Young, New York city, were unable to be present.

At the invitation of President J. A. Peterson, of the Cincinnati Florists' Society, the committee took Sunday dinner at his residence in Westwood and in the afternoon inspected his greenhouse plant.

Monday morning the real business was taken up. There were four meetings in all, held in the committee room at the Hotel Sinton. There was a great deal of work for the committee. A program which is said to be one of unusual interest was mapped out for the August convention. The report of these meetings will be announced in due time by Secretary Rudd.

Wm. Murphy, who was nominated by the Cincinnati Florists' Club, was appointed to the important office of manager of the trade exhibition.

A part of Monday morning was consumed by the committee in viewing the locations chosen by the local society for the trade exhibition and in which to hold the convention meetings. The members of the committee were well pleased with the facilities which the local society is providing. The exhibition hall is a large building and was built for the purpose of holding just such exhibitions. There will be ample space for everyone. Adjoining this building is the Odeon, in which the business meetings of the convention will be held. This is a small opera house, seating 600 persons. There is a good stage and comfortable opera chairs. This place was considered ideal for the meetings.

Monday evening a banquet at the Sinton hotel was tendered the committee by the Cincinnati Florists' Society. Altogether there were twenty-five persons present, including E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., members of the Cincinnati Florists' Society and Wm. Finch, who was present as a representative of the Cincinnati Industrial League. After the repast E. G. Gillett introduced Albert McCullough as toastmaster for the evening. Toasts were responded to by all the members of the committee and also by Wm. Finch, J. W. Rodgers, J. A. Peterson and R. Witterstaetter. E. G. Hill spoke in his usual entertaining manner. Especially interesting talks were made by Judge W. J. Vesey, who touched on various topics of interest, and B. P. Critchell, who told of the first meeting of the S. A. F., which was held in Cincinnati twenty-five years ago. E. G. Gillett was the last one on the program and he gave those present a little idea of what they might expect in the way of entertainment at the coming convention.

The business meetings of the committee were completed about noon on Tuesday. In the afternoon they journeyed to Price Hill to visit R. Witterstaetter's greenhouses. E. G. Hill went with them.

The various members of the committee left Cincinnati Tuesday evening, March 16, W. N. Rudd returning to Chicago, W. J. Vesey going to Atlanta, Ga., and J. A. Valentine, E. Dailledouze, George Asmus and F. H. Traendly to Buffalo to attend the convention of the American Rose Society.

NEWPORT, R. I. Stewart Ritchie will open a retail flower store at 10 Broadway.

AURORA, ILL. Frank Shaffer, of Chicago, until two years ago a resident of this city, has purchased a half interest in the Aurora Greenhouse Co. from John H. Newhall and will return to Aurora. Mr. Shaffer was employed for several years by Joseph Stacy.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Lorraine Begonias.

Lorraine begonias, which were kept on the dry side for some weeks and cut back, are now throwing up a nice crop of cuttings from the bottoms. These will root without much trouble in a bottom heat of 75 to 80 degrees. The top heat need not be over 58 to 60 degrees. If the drainage is good and watering carefully attended to, few should damp off.

Leaf cuttings inserted early in the year will now be potted off and little shoots should be pushing from the base. Keep these in a house 60 to 65 degrees at night. If on a bench over heating pipes, they will do so much the better. Remove portions of the old leaves as they decay. Scratch over the surface soil occasionally, remove weeds and the little plants will appreciate such attentions.

From now onward cuttings are preferable to leaves for propagating purposes. The former root quicker and develop into plants which are, as a rule, dwarfer and more densely flowered than those produced from leaves. The main objection to Lorraine begonias is that they carry too much flower, as compared with their foliage. For this reason the looser and rather more thinly flowered stock produced from leaves is preferred by many.

Cyclamens.

The largest of the cyclamen plants in 2½-inch pots should now be ready for a shift into 4-inch. It is better not to use any manure in the compost, unless it be a little old, well pulverized cow or horse manure. Use a good proportion of sharp sand and some finely broken charcoal. Stand the plants on a light bench in a sunny house, where the temperature averages 50 to 52 degrees at night. No shading whatever is necessary for some time yet. Look over the stock once a week and remove any scumminess from the surface of the pots. Be sure thrips is not allowed to get any foothold. Next to the dreaded mite, it is the worst foe of cyclamens at all stages of growth.

Probably you have a number of old plants left over which you may be meditating on carrying over for another year. It will not pay you to bother with these. Throw them away and give your attention to the young stock, which will make much more serviceable plants.

Gardenias.

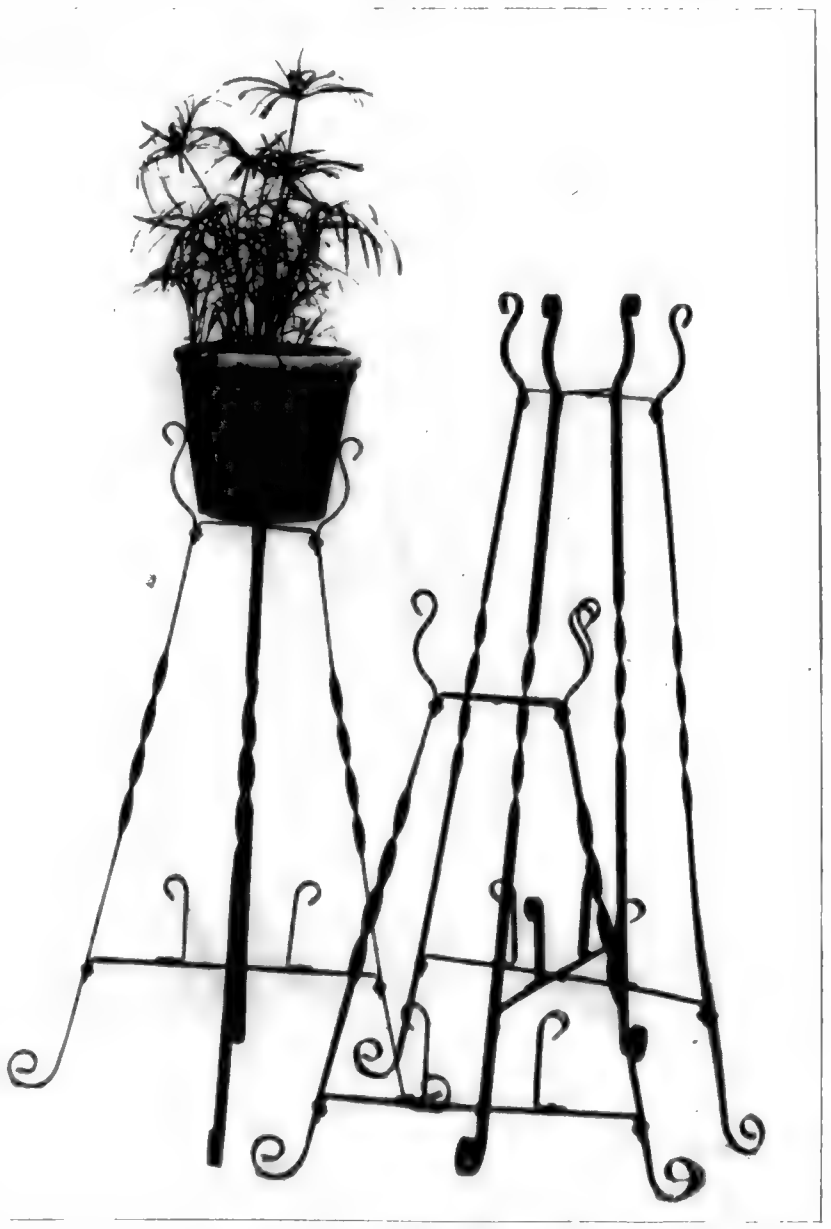
Now that the days are longer and temperature higher, gardenias, both in pots and on benches, are producing a good number of flowers, which we wish had opened two months ago. Prices in the markets are now on the decline, but even at existing rates they should pay well. The plants will now take more liberal water supplies and, if the benches are well filled with roots, a surfacing of well decayed manure will be found beneficial. A scattering of soot will also help to keep away the yellows, which are, however, usually caused by a sour condition of the roots or excessive waterings. Mealy bug breeds faster now, but a spraying once a wek through a fine nozzle will keep it in check.

Cuttings put in a month ago are now potted off and being grown in a small, close house, where the night temperature is 70 to 75 degrees. If you have not put in any cuttings yet, there is ample time to do so. There is no difficulty in rooting them if you have a brisk bottom heat and keep them constantly moist. Use a glass case if your house is not kept over 60 degrees at night. Keep a chink of air on all the time and do not allow any sun to strike the cuttings. If you have ample bottom heat, your cuttings should be fit to pot off inside of thirty days. Later in the season they will root in even less time.

Azaleas.

How are your azaleas coming along for Easter? All should have been started before now and if the buds are swelling and just showing color, they will be all right without subjecting them to any hard forcing. Use the hose freely on them until the flowers start to expand. If possible, remove to a somewhat lower temperature at this stage. Many growers have a special house for standing their Easter plants in as they come into bloom. Such a house is always attractive to visitors and, if neatly arranged, will go a long way towards selling your stock. The glass should be shaded in this house, to keep a lower and more uniform temperature.

Seed Sowing.



It is time to sow a good many annuals now, especially those which make such rapid growth that it is inadvisable to start them earlier.

Salvia splendens and its varieties, compacta, Zurich, Bonfire, etc., will make just as big plants as you want if started now. Many continue to rely on cuttings of salvias. These flower a little earlier, but do not possess the strength and vigor of seedlings.

Successional sowings of asters and stocks are now timely. Verbenas, if not yet started, should be sown at once, also Drummond's phlox, cosmos, Zinnia elegans, French and African marigolds and ricinus or castor oil plant. Give the seeds of the last named a brisk bottom heat. Soaking them in warm water twenty-four hours before sowing will insure quicker germination.

In the way of climbers, Cobæa scandens, Maurandia Barclaiana and Ipomœa grandiflora alba (moonflower), which are all more or less in demand as rapid growers, can be sown now.

Take advantage of every spare moment to pot off or place in flats seedlings of the earlier sown bedding plants of a size suitable for handling. It is astonishing how quickly these seedlings will spoil, especially where they have germinated thickly. Do not forget to shade newly transplanted stock on bright days with cheesecloth or newspapers.

Smith's New Folding Plant Stand.

Bench of Cyclamens Grown by Christ. Winterich, Defiance, O.

Hotbeds.

With the pressure on bench space by Easter plants, some of the bedding plants are liable to be neglected. Too often we see them stood pot to pot where they should be more widely spaced, and rows are even stood in the paths to make room. It is impossible to do plants justice under such conditions. One way to relieve the inside congestion is to transfer some of the bedding plants of the hardier varieties to frames. If these are closely built and can be dug out to the depth of two feet, and eighteen inches of warm manure mixed with leaves well firmed in the bottom, over which a layer of three or four inches of coal ashes is spread, they will accommodate a good many plants now being rather neglected in the greenhouses. The moist, genial heat in these frames is just to the liking of the majority of bedding plants and if your sashes are tight and you mat them over on cold nights, you will find they make splendid growth. Small pots, if plunged in the ashes a little, will grow all the better.

Of course it is yet too early to transfer such plants as coleus, cannas or alternantheras to frames, but many of the hardier sorts will now do better there than in the greenhouses. After April 1 the earliest lot of bedding geraniums will do finely in frames. All they require is a gentle bottom heat to take away the chilly feeling which otherwise exists if no fire heat is used.

Dahlias.

It is rather early to start dahlias yet, unless you are planning to work up a stock for some special purpose. As a general rule, dry roots planted directly into the field give as good or better results than those started under glass. The end of May and through June is as early as there is any need to plant out dahlias started inside, any time during May or June being all right for dry roots. There may be some sorts of which it is desired to increase the stock as much as possible. In such cases propagation of the shoots can be started at any time. Lay the roots out on a bed of moss, as suggested for cannas, spraying them over occasionally. Too much moisture will cause decay of the roots.

If you want to try a few dahlias for flowering under glass and have a piece of spare bench or bed with the necessary head room, plant out stock containing a single shoot each, twenty-four inches apart in the rows and eighteen inches between the plants. It is better to restrict each plant to one shoot rather than allow a bunch of straggling growths to start out. Put a stout stake to each shoot and be sure to keep them securely tied up. A temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night has given good results in dahlia culture indoors.

We have an idea that in the near future much more greenhouse space will be devoted to dahlia culture than in the past, especially where houses are customarily lying idle for several months in summer. Of course, the up-to-date florist plans never to have any benches empty longer than is necessary to empty, repair and refill them. Perhaps some of the vacant benches now seen in many places could be profitably utilized for the culture of dahlias, asters, gladioli and other marketable flower crops for at least a part of the summer.

SMITH'S PLANT STAND.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., of St. Louis, has a new plant stand, as shown in the accompanying illustration, which it contemplates putting on the market, believing that it will be useful to retail florists in arranging decorations and salable in flower stores to those who wish to elevate window plants, etc. The character of the stand is shown in the accompanying illustration, but the picture fails to bring out clearly that the stand folds on the bolts which attach the two sections at the center, top and bottom, so that it may be packed away in small space.

WINTERICH'S PLACE.

The accompanying illustrations afford two views of the establishment of Christ. Winterich, at Defiance, O., whose specialty is the cyclamen. The view of the exterior shows how well ordered his place is kept. He does a general local trade, producing the large variety of stock which is required for such a business, but as a wholesale specialty he grows cyclamens. One of the accompanying pictures shows a part of a bench of plants in flower. Through years of careful growing, he has built up a shipping trade of large proportions, extending all over the country. This year he is growing 55,000 plants of his own strain, worked up through long continued selection, and also a few thousands of the best novelties, in order that he may keep abreast of progress in this plant. He has his young stock now in hotbeds, which he has fitted with a ventilating machine, so that he can raise fifty sashes, each 3x6, with the operation of a single crank. He also has his frames fitted with the Skinner sprinkling system, and says he finds mechanical watering a great labor saver.

SPIDER ON PALMS AND PRIVETS.

Will you be kind enough to examine the inclosed sago and privet leaves and let us know what the growth on them is, with the remedy? A. B.

The leaves in question both appear to have been infested with red spiders, though the insects were dead at the time of examination. There were, however, a great number of the eggs of the insects on the privet leaf, and it would appear that both plants were supporting vigorous colonies of these pests.

Spraying with a good force of water is one of the best remedies for this trouble, and when persisted in at regular intervals is usually effective. Solutions of fish oil soap or Ivory soap are also used in fighting this pest. W. H. T.

CARNATIONS

TEMPERATURE FOR CUTTINGS.

After potting up rooted cuttings, what should be the temperature of the house? I believe more cuttings are ruined by too low a temperature than by a too high one.

I find white carnations more subject to disease than other colors. Is this so generally? G. O. K.

We have always contended that the young plants should have about the same temperature as the blooming plants. We find 50 degrees about right. In that temperature growth is moderate and thrifty, and sturdy plants are produced, if the light is good. If an extra early start is desired with outdoor planting, the temperature may be dropped some for a couple of weeks, to harden the plants, if they are well established, but not unless they are well established. To take a cutting from a plant growing in 52 degrees, and after rooting it subject it, before it is well established, to a temperature of 40 degrees, would be foolish.

We find that no color, as a whole, is more subject to disease than any other color. There are weaklings among all the colors, and sturdy ones, too.

A. F. J. B.

CARNATIONS IN SOLID BEDS.

I am growing carnations this year in a new house, with steam heat and solid beds. Will not all plants in solid beds require more heat than in benches? I find my Joost doing unusually well. I have counted twenty buds and twenty more shoots on some plants and there is no disease, with the temperature often up to 60 degrees at night. Other varieties are not doing so well, especially Enchantress, which does not do well in our clay soil. G. O. K.

We have been growing carnations in semi-solid beds for a number of years, and we cannot say from our experience that growing on that kind of beds makes any higher temperature necessary. We find no difference whatever in that respect. If we run our temperature up, we find our stems weakening just the same as they would on raised benches, and if the temperature drops, the calyxes split, etc. The only difference we find is in the watering. Evaporation being only from the top and no heat underneath, naturally the soil does not dry out so rapidly and we are not obliged to water so frequently as others who plant on raised benches.

We will digress from the question at issue long enough to speak a word about drainage of our beds, as compared with raised tables. Many carnation growers will remember the fine crop of carnations they saw growing at the experiment station at Washington last year, at the time of the A. C. S. convention. It was generally conceded that they were about as fine as any grower could wish for. The grower in charge, Mr. Keller, paid us a visit this winter, and, among other very interesting things, he told us of his observations along the line of drainage. This year he has all his carnations on beds constructed as we do ours, and he says they are still finer than they were last year. In examining the soil right after a heavy watering last year, he found that fully an inch of the soil at the bottom would be simply mud. This was because the water could drain through the upper soil readily enough, but at the bottom it would be arrested by the boards long enough to make the soil soggy. This year, with the cinder bottom, the water goes right down and the soil at the bottom retains the same condition as that farther up. He considered, and so do we, that this is very important to the plant, which has only a limited amount of soil to work in at best. This proves that, while evaporation is less rapid in the solid bed, the drainage is more perfect—just the opposite of what is generally contended.

You will find that the texture of the soil will make no more difference on solid beds than on raised benches, if you have proper drainage material underneath. Enchantress should do well in a heavy clay soil. We have found that the color will be deeper and the stems stiffer than in a light soil.

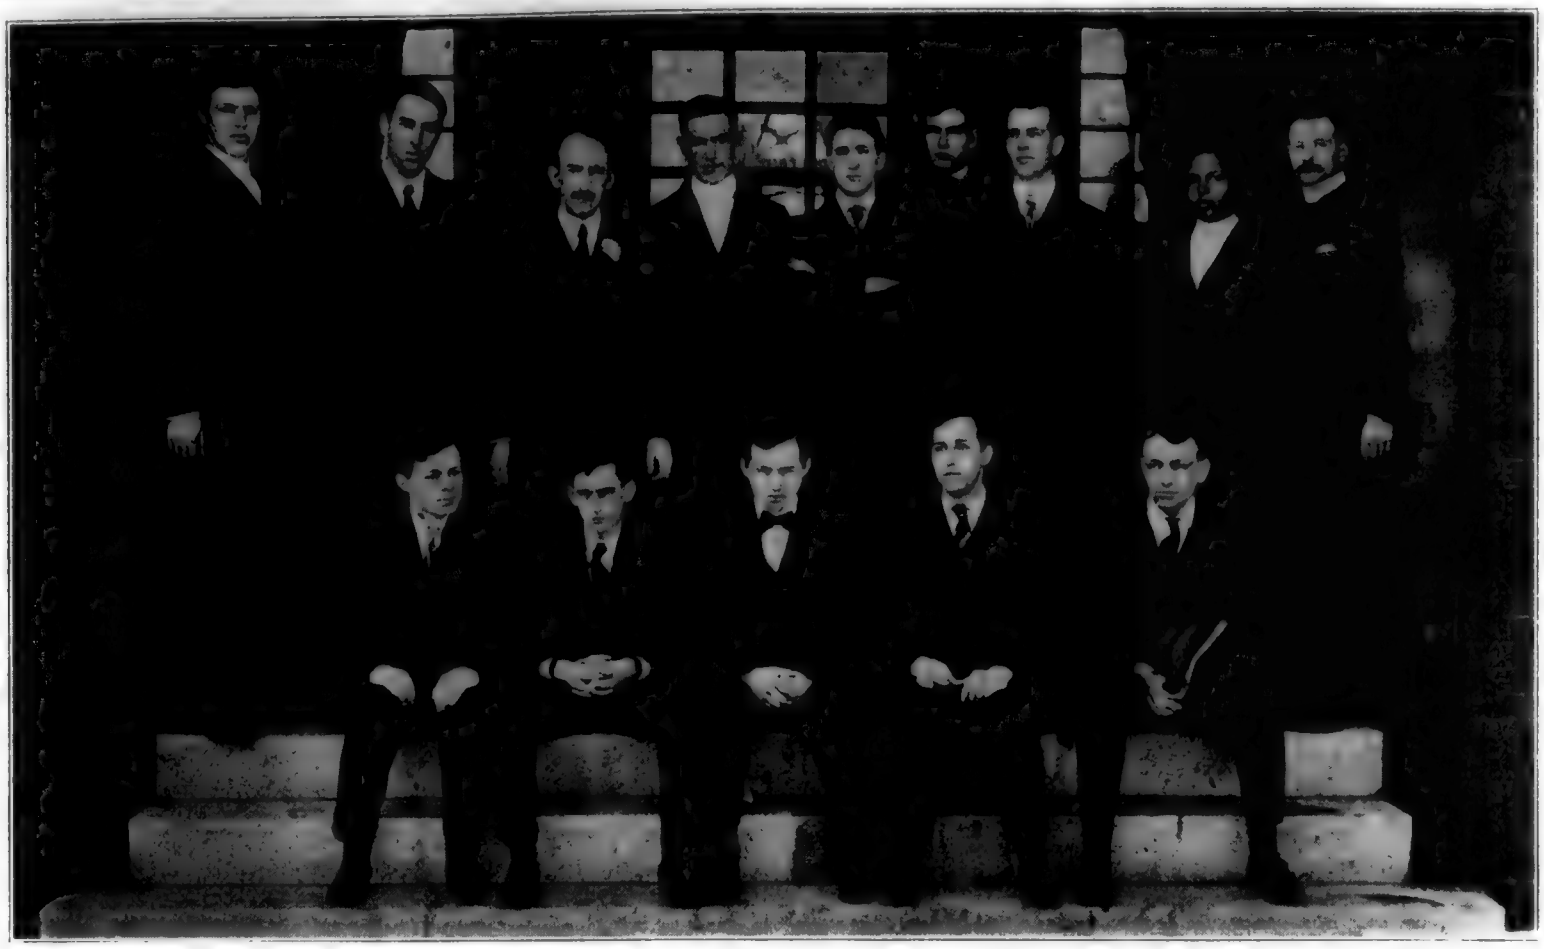
OBITUARY.



Louis M. Noe.

Louis M. Noe, a pioneer of the rose growing industry in New Jersey and one of the widest known growers in the United States, died at his home in Madison Thursday morning, March 11, at the age of 61 years. He had been ill for a fortnight with pleurisy, but his death is almost directly due to a fall sustained more than a year ago near Watertown, Wis., where he went in connection with some of his diversified business interests. At that time he so seriously sprained one of his knees that he never fully recovered, and the injury so undermined his general health that when he contracted a severe cold on a recent automobile trip he did not have the strength to throw it off.

Mr. Noe was born in Madison, where he spent his entire life with the exception of two years at school at Fort Edward, N. Y. He read law for one season, but many years ago saw the possibilities of growing cut flowers for the New York market and built one of the first ranges of greenhouses in what is now the great rose growing center of the United States. He has one son, Louis A. Noe, also engaged in the business, their establishments being side by side and practically one place. The combined ranges include thirty-six large houses. The Noes are among the largest producers of American Beauty for the New York market, the middle bench in practically every house being planted to Beauty, with teas on the side benches. Mr. Noe was one of the largest stockholders in the New York Cut Flower Co., and at the time when it needed his attention the personal interest he took in its affairs was a large factor in establishing its success.

When Mr. Noe was only 21 years of age he married the daughter of a neighbor, the sister of D. W. Brant, with whom Mr. Noe subsequently became interested in the greenhouse business at Forest Glen, a suburb of Chicago. The firm for years was Brant & Noe, a partnership, but a few years ago it was turned into a corporation, with L. M. Noe president and D. W. Brant secretary and treasurer. The large range is now devoted exclusively to carnation growing.

Mrs. Noe survives, with her son, L. A. Noe, and two daughters. One of the daughters is Mrs. Lincoln Pierson, wife of the president of the Pierson U-Bar Co. L. A. Noe and Lincoln Pierson have their homes adjoining the home of Mr. Noe. The other daughter is Miss Lillian Noe, a student at Wellesley.

Mr. Noe was an exceptionally successful business man. His foresight and judgment in business and financial matters were widely known and his participation was sought for many business enterprises, in order that they might have the benefit of his abilities. He had a large number of such outside interests and was one of the considerable property owners of Madison. He had not, however, for some years given his active attention to these outside interests, preferring to be merely a silent stockholder. But he continued to give his active attention to his dairy, which is one of the famous features of the town. From a small beginning a few years ago this dairy became so quickly successful that now 300 cows are kept. Everything is of most modern character and scrupulous cleanliness. Several hundred acres are required for the operation of the dairy, and delivery is made through Madison and the adjoining cities of Morristown, Chatham and Summit. Each one of the delivery outfits is said to represent an investment of $500.

Mr. Noe was a large man physically, being more than six feet tall and weighing over 300 pounds, but it was in character that he was greatest. He was prominent in church and civic work and took the broadest of views in all matters concerning the general welfare. During his entire life he contributed to the support of the home church of his parents at New Providence, N. J., and there are scores of young men in Madison and in New York city who owe their places in life to him. It always was a real pleasure to him to be of assistance to those who needed friendly help, but his deeds of charity never were ostentatious and few knew of them.

The funeral was held Sunday afternoon, March 14, and was largely attended, there being present, besides the townspeople, florists from all the adjacent territory and many from New York and greater distances. Many flowers were sent.

AMHERST, MASS.

The new greenhouses and instruction building for floriculture at the Massachusetts Agricultural College were dedicated March 12, with appropriate exercises, and at the same time a flower show was staged for the benefit of pupils and visitors.

A number of designs were made by the members of the class in floriculture, which included Odd Fellows, by H. B. Phelps; star, by John Noyes; anchor, by J. R. O'Grady; white pillow, by J. T. Oliver; Masonic emblem, by D. J. Caffrey; cross, by F. H. Wilson; galax wreath with lilies of the valley, by B. F. Barnes; ivy wreath with violets, by E. F. Hathaway; Maltese cross, by T. C. Waters. The arrangement of these designs was under the direct supervision of N. J. Fennelly, for several years with Thomas Galvin, of Boston.

Carnations were exhibited by F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown, N. Y., twelve varieties. E. B. Beals, of Springfield, displayed a number of seedlings. The Worcester Conservatories had the largest exhibit, having fifteen vases. Peter Fisher exhibited a number of seedlings. Another large display of ten vases was made by Patten & Co., of Tewksbury. William Sim, of Cliftondale, had a large exhibit of sweet peas, including fifteen vases of as many varieties, and three vases of violets. There was a large exhibit of roses by A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn. Eber Holmes, of Montrose, exhibited three large vases of roses, while W. H. Elliott, of Brighton, had a large vase of Killarney roses. Bride and Maid were exhibited by Robert Montgomery, of Natick, and a large vase of White Killarney roses was shown by F. R. Pierson Co. There were also eight baskets for table decorations exhibited by Edward MacMulkin, of Boston, and a display of fifty White Killarney on exhibition by the Waban Rose Conservatory, of Natick. Peirce Bros., of Waltham, sent several varieties of carnations, as did also H. H. Rogers, of South Sudbury, and J. W. Adams & Co., Springfield, Mass.

The short course in floriculture just ended has proved to be a success in every way. This has been largely due, according to Prof. White, to the splendid cooperation of the practical men in the trade who have contributed the results of their experience. In every case these have been given without financial remuneration. Nearly all of the young men who have taken the short course now have positions in commercial places.

The last day of the course Wm. Sim, of Cliftondale, gave an interesting and instructive talk to the floricultural classes on "Sweet Pea Growing Under Glass." Mr. Sim brought with him fifteen varieties of splendidly grown sweet peas, which made the talk especially valuable.

MICHIGAN CITY, IND.—Miss Lillian Bowes has removed to a store in the Ledbetter building, on West Seventh street, where she will have larger floor and window space and better facilities than formerly.

CARNATIONS

TEMPERATURE FOR CUTTINGS.

After potting up rooted cuttings, what should be the temperature of the house? I believe more cuttings are ruined by too low a temperature than by a too high one.

I find white carnations more subject to disease than other colors. Is this so generally? G. O. K.

We have always contended that the young plants should have about the same temperature as the blooming plants. We find 50 degrees about right. In that temperature growth is moderate and thrifty, and sturdy plants are produced, if the light is good. If an extra early start is desired with outdoor planting, the temperature may be dropped some for a couple of weeks, to harden the plants, if they are well established, but not unless they are well established. To take a cutting from a plant growing in 52 degrees, and after rooting it subject it, before it is well established, to a temperature of 40 degrees, would be foolish.

We find that no color, as a whole, is more subject to disease than any other color. There are weaklings among all the colors, and sturdy ones, too.

A. F. J. B.

CARNATIONS IN SOLID BEDS.

I am growing carnations this year in a new house, with steam heat and solid beds. Will not all plants in solid beds require more heat than in benches? I find my Joost doing unusually well. I have counted twenty buds and twenty more shoots on some plants and there is no disease, with the temperature often up to 60 degrees at night. Other varieties are not doing so well, especially Enchantress, which does not do well in our clay soil. G. O. K.

We have been growing carnations in semi solid beds for a number of years, and we cannot say from our experience that growing on that kind of beds makes any higher temperature necessary. We find no difference whatever in that respect. If we run our temperature up, we find our stems weakening just the same as they would on raised benches, and if the temperature drops, the calyxes split, etc. The only difference we find is in the watering. Evaporation being only from the top and no heat underneath, naturally the soil does not dry out so rapidly and we are not obliged to water so frequently as others who plant on raised benches.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

HENRY A. DREER, Philadelphia, acknowledges orders with a set of picture post-cards illustrating scenes at the nurseries at Riverton.

IT is reported that the new tariff bill introduced in congress this week provides for a material reduction in the duty on window glass.

J. H. BURDETT, Chicago, has begun the distribution of the third annual spring series of press notices for the National Council of Horticulture.

WELL, the ground hog was right, all right! The last six weeks have been as wintry as any part of the season. But now it's time for spring.

BRICKS at Chicago have advanced to $5.75 and $6 per thousand, an increase of over $1 within thirty days. Concrete can be used economically for almost every purpose for which florists employ bricks.

TURN through this issue of the REVIEW with the thought in mind that before you lies one of the plainest evidences of the recent rapid development of the florists' business. Note the volume of advertising. There is nothing "special" about this issue—it is all in the day's work—but the advertising in this issue would, not so many years ago, have been considered a good run of business for one of the periodical special numbers. Indeed, there are publishers, even at this day, who would congratulate themselves and their readers if they could occasionally gather up as great a showing of advertising for a "special" number. A thought may well be given to the great diversity of the trade offers appearing each week. A reader of the REVIEW can supply his every want from its columns, as, indeed, many of them do—you can buy of the advertisers anything from an iron-frame greenhouse to a microscopic wire staple for mending split carnation calyxes, from a pin for fastening ferns on mossed designs to a swell delivery wagon.

TWO SIDES.

There are many factors which may influence an advertiser part of the time, but it is actual results which influence him most of the time.

We are exceedingly well pleased with the advertisement we have been carrying in your paper and have received very satisfactory returns from same. Parker Mfg. Co.
Boston, Mass., March 5, 1909.

We are getting fine returns from the advertisement carried in the Review.
D. U. Augspurger & Sons.
Peoria, Ill., March 11, 1909.

We have had good returns from the advertisement in your classified columns.
Henry Field Seed Co.
Shenandoah, Ia., March 8, 1909.

But there is another side equally important from the viewpoint of the publisher:

I feel I cannot miss a single issue of the Review; it is a great help to every florist, young or old, and to experienced ones as well as to beginners. Joseph Schuler.
Newcastle, Ind., March 9, 1909.

I subscribed for the Review in January and bought 1,000 gladiolus bulbs from an ad in it last week. The paper certainly is interesting and all right and on this gladiolus purchase I saved more than enough to pay two years' subscription. J. W. Shepherd.

The Great Central Market.

Business improved steadily in the latter part of last week and made the week the best one since Lent began. There was an appreciable falling off the first few days of Lent, but business soon picked up and has been fully as good as it was in any earlier part of the season. This week opened with a scramble for white carnations. The extent to which these flowers are dyed for St. Patrick's day use is far beyond what anyone would have thought possible when the green dye first came into use. At the beginning of this week practically every shipping order called for quantities of white and all the local buyers required large numbers, so that prices advanced sharply. Good white was held firmly at 4 cents and any fair stock was thought to be worth 3 cents. Of course, there was more or less pickled stock that the wholesalers would not think of shipping and that the local buyers did not want, which pulled down the average; also, some growers made their heaviest shipments after the special demand had passed.

The weather for some days has been unfavorable for flower production and under the influence of the darkened skies receipts have fallen off in all departments. The possible exception is the American Beauty. Some houses are not yet able to report any increase in the cut, but others are favored with a considerable increase. Quality has improved little, but the demand is such that all Beauties sell. Of other roses, Killarney is more abundant and selling well. Prices average better than they did a week ago, although there is little change in the quoted rates. Some first-class Bride are seen.

Carnations have shortened, the same as everything else, and growers predict there will be no heavy supplies between now and Easter. Prices have improved in proportion to the falling off in supply. Some of the wholesalers who took advance orders for large quantities at low figures for shipment March 12 found themselves in a somewhat embarrassing position. The quality of carnations is excellent; indeed, no better stock on the average has ever been seen in this market.

The supplies of bulbous flowers are not now unwieldy. There has been no advance in the prices, but the shortening up of supplies in other lines has made a better market for the bulbous stock. Southern bulb stock, however, is slow sale. Lily of the valley is overabundant and prices are weak.

Sweet peas are less abundant. The fancy long stock, of which some growers still are cutting quantities, sells well, but the short stuff has hardly paid to bring to market.

Violets continue in large supply, both double and single, but their day is nearly done. An occasional large order helps the market materially.

Smilax strings are in demand for the spring decorations and the supply is less, so that prices are stiffer, especially when length of strings is considered. Fancy ferns have advanced to $2.50 per thousand.

Various Notes.

Mrs. P. J. Hauswirth was taken ill Friday evening, March 12, with appendicitis and was removed to the German hospital. Although she felt much better March 16, the doctors said an operation would be necessary.

John Zech spent Tuesday, March 16, being judge of registration in his ward.

Vaughan & Sperry are much interested in the reports of spring having received a setback down south, as one of their growers has a big lot of early peonies that are up far enough to be in danger from frost.

E. C. Amling comments that the average length of the lily stems gets shorter and shorter each year. He says he looks for this market to have an abundant supply of the short stock at Easter, but figures that the grower who has a fair proportion of long stems will be in luck.

George Reinberg is figuring on a fine crop this spring.

At Winterson's Seed Store counter trade is picking up and each time the sun comes out there is a nice little rush.

J. L. Raske, who was burned out on Jackson boulevard, again has his store in as good shape as ever.

Theo. Meyer, of Waukegan, was in town last week.

Brant & Noe, of Forest Glen, are preparing to add two more houses to their range, each 300 feet long. Carnations are grown exclusively.

The Eaton Flower Store has six weeks more in its present location. It has not yet been determined whether to continue the business, but it doubtless will go on if a suitable store can be found.

Damm Bros. will plant a house with White Killarney this season.

The Chicago Florists' Club bowlers will begin weekly meetings Friday evening, March 19, at Bensinger's alleys, 118 Monroe street. The pastimes committee consists of D. Erickson and A. Zech, and they have arranged for four alleys for the club's use each week. There will be bowling for the ladies as well as the club members.

It is reported that Marshall Field & Co. will use no cut flowers in their spring decoration this year. In previous seasons the cut flowers used have run into a sum which has been decidedly welcome in the market.

Alex. Newitt, of the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo., was called back to Chicago March 15 to attend the funeral of his brother, Joseph Newitt, who died March 12 at his home at Millard avenue and Twenty-second street.

John Poehlmann, president of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., says that a comparison of their records shows that prices are quite a little higher than they were last year at this time, but that the quantity of stock cut is so much less that general results are about evened up.

Andrew Benson, foreman for Bassett & Washburn, went to Buffalo March 16 with the firm's exhibit for the rose show. He had Maid, Bride, two exhibits of Killarney and one of Beauty, as well as the O. P. Bassett carnation.

EASTER Longiflorum Giganteums

Our reputation as to these flowers for Easter has been established for years. Grown by the most critical grower, from the most expensive bulbs. Packed at the greenhouse and shipped in original packages direct to the consumer. No bruised or inferior flowers. You can't afford anything but the best in this line at Easter time. Get our prices. They are no more than you will pay other places for an inferior article.

Killarney

A fine crop in all length stems. The heads are exceptionally long and large—with color. In saying they are the finest stock in Chicago, we voice the opinions of the most careful and critical buyers on the market. $4.00 to $12.00 per 100. We want your Killarney orders for Easter.

Maids

Something choice. They are their own best salesman. A trial convinces. $3.00 to $8.00 per 100.

Carnations

White Perfection, White Enchantress, White Lawson, Lady Bountiful. The best white on the market. Our Victory, a red, has not been out-classed yet. Lawson and Enchantress—Winsor—well grown and fancy stock.

White Lilac

$1.00 per bunch. This crop of lilac, now ready, is of the larger variety, and very fine stock. This price is one-third lower than we ever sold it before and we know it will meet with large demand, as it is the high-class spring flower of the market.

Violets

Eastern and Home-grown—single and double. Our wide experience in handling Violets—our choice selection of the best growers of fancy stock—the fact that we can always fill your orders with stock that is fresh—are reasons why everybody wants Randall's Violets.

Valley

A good grade, $3.00 per 100.

Tulips

Fancy varieties. $3.00 to $5.00 per 100. Double Yellow for Easter.

Weiland & Risch report their sales in Lent decidedly better than last year.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says he has never seen the equal of the way daffodils sold last Saturday—but the price wouldn't go up.

The wedding of Harry Lubliner and Miss Bernice Harmon took place Tuesday evening, March 16.

Peter Reinberg is again cutting quite a few Mrs. Field rose in good shape.

A good many of the wholesalers, whose places are located in the Atlas block, have been worrying for fear the McCormick estate would tear down the building to make room for a skyscraper. All the leases in the building recently have been written with a clause permitting the landlord to terminate the lease on ninety days' notice, which has looked as though building operations were contemplated. But now comes the report that the landlord will spend several thousands of dollars this summer in putting in a boiler and engine plant to operate the building, instead of renting heat and power, as in the past. Surely the estate has no immediate intention of tearing down the Atlas block.

E. H. Hunt now has four travelers on the road, taking orders for Easter supplies.

Frank A. Benthey, in charge of the erection of the new range of Hoerber Bros., at Des Plaines, has a force of men busy painting bars and making ready to rush construction as soon as the frost goes out of the ground.

A. L. Randall Co. reports a large sale on green carnation dye, a number of customers taking several gallons each.

Fred Lautenschlager is making a trip southwest for Kroeschell Bros. Co. When last heard from he was leaving Parsons, Kan., and still going west.

The funeral of Mrs. J. F. Kidwell, March 12, was largely attended, many florists being present, and many fine designs were sent.

The Coliseum Co. has just refunded the debt on the property, making a new mortgage of $500,000 at five per cent.

Among last week's visitors were the Hartman brothers, of Warren, O., who have sold out and are looking for a new location.

HAMMONTON, N. J.

The weather in this section has been warm for this time of the year, with little snow. The ground has been open almost all winter, which gave growers a good chance to prepare for the spring rush.

Wood & Healey have begun shipping home grown valley pips, which is one of their specialties.

William F. Bassett reports that inquiries for kalmias are coming in steady and probably will begin shipping shortly.

J. Murray Bassett has received an importation of dahlias from England. This consists of new varieties. Mr. Bassett is trying over eighty new varieties this season. Also reports many inquiries for kalmias, which he collects from a tract of over 1,000 acres. H. K.

Trade Conditions.

Business was about normal for the Lenten season last week. While the cut is not so large as generally, there has been sufficient stock to meet all demands and the outlook is promising for Easter. Harrisii for Easter may be short here, as many of the growers are not meeting with the encouraging prospects that could be wished, but of bulb stock there will be plenty. Violets continue to be the subject of bargain sales every Saturday, and many thousands are disposed of.

Various Notes.

On petition of creditors of F. Louis Ziegler, at 18 Broadway and during the summer season at 138 Bellevue avenue, Newport, Clark Burdick has been appointed as receiver of Ziegler's affairs. The petitioning creditors were Theophilus T. Pitman, for advertising in the Newport Daily News, $111.17; Richard C. and Mary B. Derby, for rent of store at 138 Bellevue avenue, $300, and John F. Chase, stock, $182.29. He will be succeeded at the Broadway store by Oscar Schultz, of Newport.

Shamrocks in 1-inch, 2-inch and 3-inch pots and chemically prepared green carnations are being generally shown in all the flower stores.

Henry Patry, for several months with John Wood, of this city, left March 9 to accept a position with M. Aitken, at his new store in Worcester, Mass.

John Davidson, who has been gardener for J. S. Burden, at Newport, for the last two years, has resigned that position and will soon move to Detroit, Mich., where he has accepted a more important position.

George Johnston, who has been sick since Christmas, is able to be out again. He was cordially greeted by his numerous friends.

Matthew Macnair had several pieces, March 9, for the funeral of Mrs. Almira E. Rose, of Block Island, mother of Almanza J. Rose, town treasurer of that place.

Edward F. Healy has entered the employ of George Johnson & Son as forester. This concern has the care of a large number of lawns and private places and employs an experienced forester to direct this part of the business.

Fred B. Luther has been on the sick list for a couple of weeks, with an attack of the grip.

town last week, booking orders for bulbous stock for Easter trade.

Stewart Ritchie has opened a retail store at 40 Broadway, Newport.

Charles Macnair was a visitor at New York the early part of last week.

William Hay is about to erect a propagating house, 20x100, on his new place at Oaklawn. The glass was received for the structure last week. He is contemplating putting up another rose house to duplicate that erected a few months ago, 40x300 feet.

Mr. Hamilton, of Joseph G. Neidinger's, of Philadelphia, was in town last week, taking orders for baskets, stands, jardinieres, etc., metallized in imitation of old-fashioned copper work.

Alexander Johnson, who was appointed city forester last summer, is preparing for an early crusade on tree pests and for other spring work.

T. J. Johnston & Co., for whom Edward Brooks is manager, have hung a valuable oil painting of orchids in their store. It is a canvas 3x5 feet, in a heavy gilt frame, and makes an attractive addition to the other decorations.

Mrs. Thomas Keller, who has been ill for several weeks, is able to be about.

F. R. Pierson and his traveling man, Mr. Frothingham, of Tarrytown, N. Y., were in town last week.

M. Serpa, who has a large flower and small market truck garden in Rehoboth, just over the line from East Providence, recently lost about $2,500 by a fire, which destroyed all the propagating frames, greenhouses and outbuildings on the place.

Miss Sellew, who has been with T. J. Johnston & Co., at the store, for many years, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of her mother, March 12. Miss Sellew has been obliged to devote much time to her parents during the last two years, as her father, who has recently resigned the postmastership of this city, has been ill during that time.

The Market.

Trade has been brisk for the last week or so, mostly funeral work, and there has been a scarcity of light colored flowers, making it hard at times to fill orders properly. Stock is coming in fine and is used up close from day to day. There will be a fine lot of azaleas here for Easter, and other stock looks promising.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held a meeting March 9, at Sherman Stephens' greenhouse, and afterwards was served with a nice lunch, with a little refreshment on the side, the compliments of Mr. Stephens. The next meeting will be held at C. A. Roth's greenhouses, March 23.

Jas. McKellar, of the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., had to finally submit to an operation for appendicitis at Grant hospital and is getting along nicely.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market showed a great deal of activity last week in both wholesale and retail circles, which goes to show that Lent has not interfered much with the business. Work for funerals has been especially plentiful and a great many large designs were worked up by the leading retailers.

Stock at the wholesale houses has not been any too plentiful. Carnations are cleaned up every day. They are coming in freely, but are in big demand. Monday, March 15, the price on white carnations was up to 5 cents and 6 cents for the best, owing to the demand for St. Patrick's day, when the trade will change their color to green.

Roses, too, are cleaned up at good prices. All varieties are scarce, except short Beauties. California violets are holding up well in quality and price. Bulbous stock also is selling well and there seems to be plenty of everything in season. Of callas and Harrisii there are more than enough. Sweet peas are fine, plentiful, and in demand. Southern bulbous stock is not bringing much at present. Smilax, asparagus, galax and adiantum have a good call.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting Thursday afternoon, March 11, in Bowman's hall. The meeting was fairly well attended, there being twenty present. Vice-president J. F. Ammann presided. The trustees, through W. C. Smith, reported that they had not as yet made arrangements for a new hall, but would do so by the next meeting. The committee on eliminating the crepe chasing made a lengthy report, showing how it could be done. On motion the club went on record condemning the practice of crepe chasing and the committee was continued, a copy of their report to be sent to the daily papers. The shooting and bowling committees are organizing teams for the S. A. F. convention. The resignation of Walter Retzer was accepted with regret.

The question of holding a flower show this fall was brought up for discussion and it was decided not to hold a show in opposition to the one given by the Horticultural Society, but that the club stood ready to work hand in hand with them and make the one a big success, and the secretary was ordered to write to the Horticultural Society and advise them of the facts.

Various Notes.

J. A. Valentine, of Denver, president of the S. A. F., was here last week on his way to Cincinnati to attend the executive committee meeting.

Gene Launey, of Chicago, visited the retail trade here last week.

E. J. Fancourt, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, is here this week.

The H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co. is mailing out a handsome spring catalogue. This firm is having an exceptionally large trade in nursery stock this year.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, is sending large consignments of roses to C. A. Kuehn and the stock is of the best quality.

It was learned Monday, March 15, that the Schaeffer Floral Co., which was recently opened at 111 North Sixth street, will close its place by the end of the week. Julius E. Schaeffer has accepted a position in the cut flower department with Adolph Brix, on St. Louis avenue.

Wednesday, March 24, the third annual spring flower show given by the St. Louis Horticultural Society will open in the banquet hall of the Grand avenue Masonic Temple. Preparations have been completed by the executive committee. Quite a large number of entries have been made and a successful show is looked for.

Plant decorations were quite numerous last week, for spring openings in the downtown stores. Schray & Sons, Charles Beyer, Young & Sons Co., and Sanders Nurseries have been busy with this kind of work.

The few warm days last week opened up the plant stands in Union market and business was quite rushing until the cold snap came along and closed them again.

Word has been received that the fine, new residence of C. C. Sanders, on the old Henly road, adjoining his greenhouse plant, was destroyed by fire Monday morning, March 15. The report is that it is a complete loss, but fully covered by insurance. The family escaped without injury and will return to the old home at the Delmar avenue place.

Bowling.

The Florists' Bowling Club rolled three games Monday night, March 15, and the scores will show great improvement:

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The feature of the market this week commented on everywhere is the scarcity of white carnations, desired, presumably, for St. Patrick's day. It did not appear that white carnations were so scarce, but when overyone wanted some for stock or to dye, the supply proved entirely inadequate, and prices advanced forthwith. The other features of the market are the increase in the fancy grades of American Beauty roses, the increase in quantity and corresponding decrease in price of Cattleya Schrœderiana, and the cheapness of violets and pansies. The market is in fair shape. There is quite a little business going, but it has to be courted, and prices wabble considerably. The tendency is downward, but the quality does much to check the decline. Further comments are superfluous, conditions being but little changed from a week ago, barring only St. Patrick's day, which was a major shamrock and minor floral festival.

The Duty on Roses.

Congress has been summoned to Washington in extra session this week to revise the tariff, a subject that has given anxious thought to men in all branches of business all over the country. Recommendations for an increase or duty, for a lower duty, or for placing on the free list, have been pouring in upon the Ways and Means committee for many weeks.

A feature of special interest to nurserymen and florists is the duty on roses. The present duty is 2½ cents a plant, intended to protect our home-grown stock from the more cheaply grown plants across the water. This duty, the nurserymen have almost unanimously agreed, should be raised to 4 cents a plant, with the idea of further protecting and fostering rose growing in this country. Some of the most influential importers object to this proposed increase, pointing out that it will simply work a hardship on them without in any way benefiting our growers.

J. D. Eisele, vice-president of H. A. Dreer, and one of the ablest and best informed men in our business, says that he is opposed to this increase in duty, because it would simply oblige the importers to pay money to the government out of their own pockets, without benefiting anyone else. Taking the total of four invoices, Mr. Eisele counted 56,000 roses imported from England and Ireland this season. Of these 33,000 were of varieties that cannot be obtained in this country; 7,500 were of varieties that can rarely be obtained in this country, making a total of 40,500 out of 56,000 rarely if ever procured here. These roses are catalogued at 50 cents each, $5 a dozen. It would not be practicable, Mr. Eisele said, to increase the price, as they are now sold on a close margin when all expenses are considered. This would therefore mean an additional expense of $800 on the rose business of one company alone, without any prospect of benefiting the home industry.

Roses on Own Roots.

P. Joseph Lynch, managing owner of the Dingee & Conard Co., takes issue with W. N. Craig in his reply to a recent inquiry regarding outdoor roses. Mr. Craig advocates budded or grafted stock for the best results in the garden. Mr. Lynch believes that garden roses should be on their own roots. He instances many of the finest gardens throughout the country, gardens which he personally has planned and planted all with American-grown roses. Mr. Lynch supports his views with the corroborative testimony from an army of amateurs and landscape gardeners. He further points out the danger of the outdoor rose deteriorating and the greater danger that in unskillful hands suckers will destroy the plants. Regarding quality Mr. Lynch says that he will defy the imported budded or grafted rose to meet the own-root rose grown outdoors in his North Carolina farm in friendly competition; the growth has been excellent, the buds large and well formed.

Discussing business conditions, Mr. Lynch said that the large plant orders from the wealthy almost entirely ceased last season and this, but despite this fact, accentuated by the numerous private gardeners out of employment, the plant mailing business has increased to a gratifying extent these two seasons. "The masses are using good roses on their own roots." Realizing that other lines of business are not particularly active, Mr. Lynch has endeavored to ascertain the cause for this increase from those well informed, but without success, the general verdict being that plants, being a luxury, would be apt to suffer at this time; that this is not the case is gratifying, showing conclusively the firm hold taken by the rose on the hearts of the American people.

The Plans at North Wales.

It has been rumored on the street for many moons that the Florex Gardens would add another big house by and by. The sharp decline in the glass market, and the low level reached in pipe has evidently appealed to the clear business mind of David Fuerstenberg, for it is given out this week that a new house, about 150x800 feet, will be erected during the present season, and completed in the spring of 1910. This house, it is understood, will be planted with American Beauty roses. The present mammoth house now in Beauties will then be planted with carnations, housing, it is estimated, somewhere in the neighborhood of 100,000 plants. Surveyors have been at work, and all the preliminary plans are made. The material for covering this additional ground will be furnished by the King Construction Co.

The Situation in Coal.

A representative of the most progressive florists' paper called on Smith, Lineaweaver & Co. to ask their opinion on the coal situation. Mr. Lineaweaver said that the firm knew no more than the general public, that he believed a strike would take place April 1, as planned, and hoped that it would be of short duration. There is no change in the quiet conditions in the bituminous region.

Various Notes.

The Robert Craig Co. is already booking orders for Easter plants. The stock this season is in exceptionally fine condition.

Michael Barker, of Chicago, was in this city last week, on his way home after attending the funeral of E. V. Hallock, Queens, N. Y.

Albert Pochelon, of the L. Bemb Floral Co., and G. H. Taepke, Jr., both of Detroit, were visitors here a few days ago.

Walter P. Stokes will do some rebuilding at his Floracroft Nurseries, Moorestown, N. J. Several old houses will be replaced by new ones, probably two houses 34x150 each, King Construction Co. material.

J. J. Cummings, Baltimore, Md., was in this city March 15.

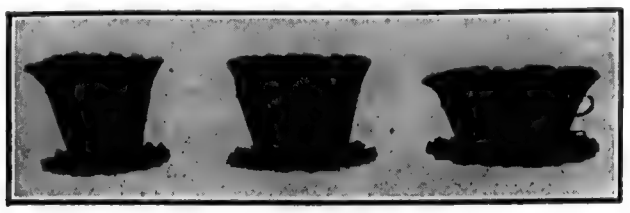
The Market.

For mid-Lent market conditions remain quite satisfactory. The principal call for flowers is for funeral work, but a steady demand exists which is much better than many looked for. In roses, fancy Beauties are scarce and high. Better grades of Killarney and Richmond are also bringing fine prices. Chatenay from one or two growers is good, as also are Bride and Maid. The rose market has been quite satisfactory so far this year. Carnations are bringing about the same prices as a week ago. On some days there is something of an overplus, but this seems to be relieved on succeeding days.

Violets are in heavy supply, but continue of good quality; 25 cents to 50 cents per hundred are ruling rates. Sweet peas are fine in quality and sell as well as anything on the market. Lilies and callas are sufficient for requirements. Of bulbous stock too much is now arriving, but conditions are much ahead of a year ago. About all the varieties of narcissi and tulips used for forcing are now seen. Some anemones, ranunculus, ixias and Spanish iris are also seen. Valley is not selling as well as it did. Some fine mignonette and snapdragons are arriving. English primroses are abundant, as are pansies. The call for Sprengeri, plumosus and adiantum does not vary much.

Club Meeting.



Robert Cameron had a large audience to hear his interesting illustrated talk on hardy perennial plants at the monthly meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, March 16, about 170 members being in attendance. The convention of the American Rose Society caused a few absentees. Mr. Cameron urged the more extended use of hardy perennials, of tulips, narcissi, lilies and bulbous plants generally in the hardy gardens and voiced the sentiment of all present at the sudden death of E. V. Hallock, who was to have addressed the club on "Bulbous Plants." A message of sympathy was ordered sent Mr. Hallock's family. There was a lively and interesting discussion participated in by K. Finlayson, John Farquhar, Jackson Dawson, F. E. Palmer, A. E. Thatcher and others following Mr. Cameron's paper.

An invitation was accepted to visit the North Short Horticultural Society March 19 and an invitation was received from W. W. Edgar Co. for the club to hold a field day at Waverley, April 3, also one from Elijah Cartwright, president of the Boston Coöperative Flower Market, inviting members to attend the show in the Music Hall Market, March 20. Announcement was also made of the coming spring exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and of its many interesting features.

Eight new members were admitted and there was, as usual, an interesting lot of exhibits.

Wm. Sim was awarded a report of merit for eighteen varieties of sweet peas, Pink Beauty being especially fine, Thomas Coles showed mushrooms and eupatoriums. Eber Holmes had cannas. Duncan Finlayson brought three varieties of schizanthus.

A resolution protesting against the proposed increase in the tariff on glass was ordered sent to all Massachusetts congressmen.

H. A. Barnard, of the English firm of Low & Co., was present and gave an interesting talk, praising American floriculture, particularly our roses and carnations, cyclamens and Primula obconica. Other visitors were G. E. Baldwin, of Secaucus, N. J., and R. Hummick, of Newport, R. I.

Various Notes.

Everything points to a fine exhibition at Music Hall market, March 20. The attractive list of special prizes offered by the Boston Co-operative Flower Market is certain to bring out a splendid lot of exhibits. Particularly keen will be the competition in the carnation classes. There is no charge for admission and a cordial invitation is extended to everyone to visit the show.

Edgar Bros., of Waverley, have two large houses of sweet peas just coming into crop. The varieties are Florence Denzer, Christmas Pink and Mrs. Alexander Wallace. Chrysanthemums and sweet peas are this firm's specialties. They are also planning to grow mushrooms for summer.

Among recent visitors were Albert Pochelon, of the L. Bemb Floral Co., Detroit, and Arthur Zirkman, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia. The latter did a heavy business in his firm's specialties.

All the stores have made specialties of shamrocks the last week and there was a heavy sale of them. Green carnations were, as usual, much in evidence, green roses and other flowers being also on sale for St. Patrick's day.

The six weeks have now elapsed since the ground hog made his initial appearance, so we may expect spring weather. Practically all frost and ice have disappeared from this vicinity, which is much earlier than usual.

J. W. Duncan is attending a meeting of the executive committee of the American Park Superintendents in Buffalo this week.

Visitors include H. A. Barnard, the veteran traveler for Hugh Low & Co., Enfield, England. Mr. Barnard has been with Low & Co. for forty-eight years, but this is his first American trip. He attended the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, March 16.

William Sim will have a heavy pick of single violets for Easter, from frames. The varieties Kaiser Wilhelm and Baronne Rothschild are both good with him.

Welch Bros. report business as showing a vast improvement over a year ago. They are anticipating a record breaking Easter. Lilies in pots in cases will be a specialty again this season. Of these they sold a big quantity a year ago.

The Boston Globe of March 14 contained an interesting illustrated article on the fine Japanese garden being constructed and planted by Farquhar & Co. for the spring flower show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which opens March 24.

W. N. Craig.

Toledo, O.—Krueger Bros. are arranging to build three more carnation houses at their country place, out on Woodville street. The houses will be 30x256 feet each.

Music Hall Market, March 20. Announcement was also made of the coming spring exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and of its many interesting features.

Eight new members were admitted and there was, as usual, an interesting lot of exhibits.

Wm. Sim was awarded a report of merit for eighteen varieties of sweet peas, Pink Beauty being especially fine. Thomas Coles showed mushrooms and eupatoriums. Eber Holmes had cannas. Duncan Finlayson brought three varieties of schizanthus.

A resolution protesting against the proposed increase in the tariff on glass was ordered sent to all Massachusetts congressmen.

H. A. Barnard, of the English firm of Low & Co., was present and gave an interesting talk, praising American floriculture, particularly our roses and carnations, cyclamens and Primula obconica. Other visitors were G. E. Baldwin, of Secaucus, N. J., and R. Hummick, of Newport, R. I.

Various Notes.

Everything points to a fine exhibition at Music Hall market, March 20. The attractive list of special prizes offered by the Boston Co-operative Flower Market is certain to bring out a splendid lot of exhibits. Particularly keen will be the competition in the carnation classes. There is no charge for admission and a cordial invitation is extended to everyone to visit the show.

Edgar Bros., of Waverley, have two large houses of sweet peas just coming into crop. The varieties are Florence Denzer, Christmas Pink and Mrs. Alexander Wallace. Chrysanthemums and sweet peas are this firm's specialties. They are also planning to grow mushrooms for summer.

Among recent visitors were Albert Pochelon, of the L. Bemb Floral Co., Detroit, and Arthur Zirkman, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia. The latter did a heavy business in his firm's specialties.

All the stores have made specialties of shamrocks the last week and there was a heavy sale of them. Green carnations were, as usual, much in evidence, green roses and other flowers being also on sale for St. Patrick's day.

The six weeks have now elapsed since the ground hog made his initial appearance, so we may expect spring weather. Practically all frost and ice have disappeared from this vicinity, which is much earlier than usual.

J. W. Duncan is attending a meeting of the executive committee of the American Park Superintendents in Buffalo this week.

Visitors include H. A. Barnard, the veteran traveler for Hugh Low & Co., Enfield, England. Mr. Barnard has been with Low & Co. for forty-eight years, but this is his first American trip. He attended the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, March 16.

William Sim will have a heavy pick of single violets for Easter, from frames. The varieties Kaiser Wilhelm and Baronne Rothschild are both good with him.

Welch Bros. report business as showing a vast improvement over a year ago. They are anticipating a record breaking Easter. Lilies in pots in cases will be a specialty again this season. Of these they sold a big quantity a year ago.

The Boston Globe of March 14 contained an interesting illustrated article on the fine Japanese garden being constructed and planted by Farquhar & Co. for the spring flower show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, which opens March 24.

W. N. CRAIG.

TOLEDO, O.—Krueger Bros. are arranging to build three more carnation houses at their country place, out on Woodville street. The houses will be 30x256 feet each.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The month of March is getting itself disliked rather more than usual. To date its average temperature has been lower than that of other years. The last week was cold, raw, rainy, blustery and disagreeable. The present week opens, however, with sunny skies and the shipments of roses, especially, have increased immensely. Prices have begun to recede and before the week ends will surely have found a considerably lower level. A few of the best Maid and Bride were held at 8 cents Monday, March 15, and Beauties were top at 50 cents, with the promise of greatly increased shipments before the week is over.

Carnations are abundant, as quotations indicate, and the stock of inferior quality finds a fickle and unresponsive market. The best white lilac holds steady and will, until the southern shipments increase. Violets have slipped another cog and 40 cents will secure the best in the market, while vast quantities are cleared to the moguls of the street at 15 cents per hundred. The sidewalks are blue with them. Orchids and gardenias are now society's only choice and are likely to remain so as long as present prices for them prevail. The southern daffodils are selling at 25 cents per hundred. The street handles the bulk of these. Of sweet peas, freesias and tulips the surplus daily is discouraging. There can be but little change for the better until April. Acacia seems abundant and popular.

Various Notes.

Every retail window is featuring the shamrock. Green carnations also appeared March 15.

The auction season is now open in earnest and every Tuesday and Friday at Elliott's and at Cleary's vast quantities of Easter plants, hardy roses, rhododendrons, retinosporas, bulbs and nursery stock are sold to the suburban public and to the retail florists of the big city at persuasive values. Hardy roses brought from 5 cents to 16 cents March 12. The attendance is encouraging, considering the early start and the continued frost. Nurserymen in this vicinity report a large demand already and all agree that no season has ever started in so early and so encouragingly.

In the department stores everything is in readiness for the spring demand and an encouraging feature is the better prices advertised, a sure indication of better times for the growers of nursery stock. Bulbs and flower seeds are far above the prices of other years.

The Retail Florists' Association of Brooklyn had its first public reunion Tuesday evening, March 16, a large attendance being present. The celebration included an evening's entertainment at the Orpheum theater, followed by an elaborate supper at one of the swell restaurants of the city. This society includes Robert G. Wilson, John V. Phillips, H. H. Jahn, S. Masur and many of the leading retailers of the city of churches.

Wednesday evening, March 17, the banquet of the National Association of Gardeners took place. A large attendance was present and an excellent exhibition was opened March 17.

There is a good attendance from New York and vicinity at the American Rose Society's Buffalo convention. Ex-President Traendly was at Cincinnati March 13 to 16, attending the meeting of the executive committee of the S. A. F., and will return via Buffalo, with Eugene Dailledouze. John Young, owing to the serious illness of his right-hand man, George Hildenbrand, was unable to attend.

T. Mellstrom, of Sander & Son, Belgium, arrived Monday, March 15, from Liverpool and will make his annual tour of the country.

L. I. Wertheimer, of Wertheimer Bros., has been having a happy holiday in the everglades and at Tallahassee, Fla., the old home of his mother. He returns this week to a more inhospitable climate.

L. M. Noe, of Madison, died Thursday, March 11, and the funeral services Sunday, March 14, were largely attended, many going from New York and vicinity to pay the last respectful tribute to his memory.

The Greater New York Florists' Association, Brooklyn, has installed a private exchange telephone system in its offices at 162 Livingston street, and has fitted up a directors' room handsomely and enlarged its office space and staff, a move made necessary, Manager Crawbuck says, by their increasing business.

One of the handsomest retail stores in Brooklyn is H. H. Jahn's, on Prospect place, a splendid corner, which he owns and on which he has built also a fine conservatory. This is one of the centers of æsthetic Brooklyn and growing rapidly. Mr. Jahn is deeply interested in the growth of the retail society and one of the prominent officials in the club's management.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Krombach, of Brooklyn, celebrate their silver anniversary Friday evening, March 19, at Bram's hall, Fifth avenue and Twenty-third street, an invitation event that includes many of the prominent florists of New York and Brooklyn.

John Young says the big 701-foot house at Bedford is now yielding daily a fine crop of Beauties.

The Fruit Auction Co. will begin daily auctions of plants, bulbs, etc., as soon as the supplies arrive from Europe. John P. Cleary will wield the baton and the result of his two months' selecting trip to Europe will keep the trade interested well into the spring.

George M. Geraghty, of Dunlop's, Toronto, will be in New York March 19 and 20, purchasing Easter novelties for his popular Canadian employer.

A. Hanig's new store at the corner of Nostrand and St. Marks avenue, under the management of Mme. Hanig, is proving an encouraging success. Mr. Hanig contemplates a trip to the coast this summer and says he will open a branch store in San Francisco.

Joseph E. Leikens has been laid up at home for two weeks with the prevailing influenza.

J. K. Allen is at home nursing a severe attack of lumbago.

Ordonez Bros. have an office at 41 West Twenty-eighth street, and August Millang receives and sells their shipments of cut orchids.

Peter F. McKenney, late with Charles Thorley, has leased the store at 503 Fifth avenue for a term of years and will shortly open an up-to-date flower shop there.

Bowling.

The New York Florists' Club's three highest bowling scores for March 15 were as follows:

Manda	157	178	156
Fenrich	150	133	140
Young	138	122	119
Zangen	114	117	132
Scott	196	166	155
Loretz	185	133	134
Henshaw	114	88	97

A larger attendance is necessary to insure the club's continuance. The old guard should sit up and take notice.

J. Austin Shaw.

Emil Lange, a florist, recovered a verdict of $1,267 against the city in the Supreme Court March 1, for injuries he received when he fell into a coal hole on one of the Staten Island municipal ferryboats.

F. W. O. Schmitz, of Prince Bay, has been on the road for several weeks, calling on his western customers. While at Cleveland March 11, he made a misstep and fell from a car. Outside of a good shaking up, he sustained no injury and was able to proceed on his way east.

SHORT-STEMMED SWEET PEAS.

Can I find out why my sweet peas have suddenly become short-stemmed? The blooms are grand and quite numerous, but very short-stemmed now.

The soil is a fairly rich garden loam, inclined to be sandy, to which was added a liberal quantity of bone meal, and later a top-dressing of superphosphate. The stems up to two weeks ago were all that could be desired, ranging from eight to thirteen inches long. Now they are two to four inches. My outdoor peas acted in the same manner last summer, and I am anxious to get at the cause and remedy, if there is any. Can peas be grown successfully in a light, sandy soil, if it is well enriched and plenty of moisture is supplied? W. D.

Lack of proper plant food is undoubtedly the cause of the sudden dwindling in length of the stems of your sweet peas. These annuals delight in a rich soil, one containing plenty of humus. While bone meal is useful as a top-dressing when the peas are in full growth, you would have much better results had you spread three to four inches of well rotted cow manure on your beds and spaded it in deeply. The most successful growers of sweet peas under glass use cow manure only in the soil, and later give top-dressings of bone meal and sheep or cow manure in pulverized form, which are lightly forked into the soil.

Some of the finest sweet peas it was ever our privilege to see were grown in sandy soil. If it is well enriched, a mulch applied when the flowering season starts and water freely supplied, just as fine peas can be produced in sandy soil as in any other. C. W.

WOOD-LICE OR SOW BUGS.

I am bothered very much with sow-bugs or wood-lice, which eat the carnation cuttings and other young plants, and wish you would give a remedy in the Review. I have lately found a cure for most evils of our line in the paper, but have not found above. W. J. P.

It is difficult to entirely free greenhouses from this pest. Keep as little decaying wood and other debris in the houses as possible, for these are ideal lurking places for them. They may be poisoned with a mixture of fresh bran and powdered sugar, to which is added some Paris green or white arsenic. Lay the mixture in small saucers in the evening and do not leave it around where animals or children can reach it. Turnips or potatoes, if scooped out partially and laid around, will form a trap for many. Look around daily and destroy all found on them by dipping in hot water. Boiling water, or as near boiling as possible, if poured under stages infested by them, will kill large quantities. Use a watering pot with a coarse rose in applying the water.

BEDDING PLANTS.

How may one best obtain stock for gradually working up a wholesale trade in rooted cuttings, principally of bedding plants? What is the best method of getting a mucky soil, now very wet and sour, into suitable condition for greenhouse work? Are leaf-mold and muck identical? A. B. R.

Secure rooted cuttings of varieties you can sell the best. The present is a suitable time to order these from some of the many specialists in this line who use the Review's advertising columns. Pot off and grow along such plants as you may purpose specializing in. Gradually harden off and plant out in nursery rows when danger from frost has gone. In the case of geraniums, which are always in strong demand, if you will devote a bench or portion of a bench to your stock plants, planting them out, you will get a constant crop of cuttings. The bulk of the regular bedding plants will give plenty of cuttings if a number of old plants are lifted each fall for stock, or flats of cuttings are taken in good season, the more tender sorts, such as coleus, achyranthes and alternanthera, being put in first. Plant out your cannas in rich ground and they will make big clumps, which will give you quantities of eyes for cuttings.

A muck soil and a leaf soil are not identical. As your land is sour and wet, it will probably be most improved by tile draining. Apply agricultural lime in the fall, at the rate of 1,000 pounds per acre. This tends to take acidity out of the soil. Do not use lime with your manure, as this lets loose too much nitrogen. C. W.

A beautiful showy McCray built-to-order of quartered oak with beveled mirror and galvanized iron drawers beneath for mosses, etc.

A Successful Florist whose stock is always fresh, fragrant and attractive, always uses a McCray Refrigerator. McCray Refrigerators have the proper system of cold air circulation, which is so strong and steady that there can be no stagnant air or dampness in a McCray Refrigerator. Less ice is used than in any other kind of refrigerator, and this results in a saving which pays for the McCray itself.

McCray Refrigerators

give your shop a look of elegance. They are made and finished in the most beautiful manner, and are lined with white enamel, opal glass, tile, mirrors or white marble, as you desire.

McCray Refrigerators are guaranteed to give satisfaction, and are made in regular sizes for immediate shipment, or are built to order for any requirement.

Send today for Catalog No. 71, which will show the beauty of the full line of McCray Refrigerators for flowers.

stages infested by them, will kill large quantities. Use a watering pot with a coarse rose in applying the water.

BEDDING PLANTS.

How may one best obtain stock for gradually working up a wholesale trade in rooted cuttings, principally of bedding plants? What is the best method of getting a mucky soil, now very wet and sour, into suitable condition for greenhouse work? Are leaf-mold and muck identical? A. B. R.

Secure rooted cuttings of varieties you can sell the best. The present is a suitable time to order these from some of the many specialists in this line who use the Review's advertising columns. Pot off and grow along such plants as you may purpose specializing in. Gradually harden off and plant out in nursery rows when danger from frost has gone. In the case of geraniums, which are always in strong demand, if you will devote a bench or portion of a bench to your stock plants, planting them out, you will get a constant crop of cuttings. The bulk of the regular bedding plants will give plenty of cuttings if a number of old plants are lifted each fall for stock, or flats of cuttings are taken in good season, the more tender sorts, such as coleus, achyranthes and alternanthera, being put in first. Plant out your cannas in rich ground and they will make big clumps, which will give you quantities of eyes for cuttings.

A muck soil and a leaf soil are not identical. As your land is sour and wet, it will probably be most improved by tile draining. Apply agricultural lime in the fall, at the rate of 1,000 pounds per acre. This tends to take acidity out of the soil. Do not use lime with your manure, as this lets loose too much nitrogen. C. W.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

There is little change in the condition of the flower market. Prices are about as low as they can go, so there is little cause for alarm on that score. There have been intermittent periods when the market had the appearance of life, but a close investigation proved that there was but little to it. There is considerable activity about some of the leading retail stores, but with the great volume of good stock pouring into the Exchange, it is not nearly what it should be. The weather has been cloudy, with several days' rain.

Bulbous stock, as expected, weighs heavily on the market and will continue to do so until the season is over. Carnations are absolutely undesirable stock, for which no terms are low enough to induce more than the smallest purchase. There is another heavy glut of jonquils on the market from the south, at two dozen for 5 cents.

Club Meeting.

Following its annual meeting and election of officers at the Florists' Exchange hall, the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore gave a dinner on Monday night, March 8, at the Caswell hotel. The toastmaster, Edwin A. Seidewitz, introduced the speaker of the evening, Senator J. M. Brown, of Allegany county, president of the State Horticultural Society, who, in his address, invited the members of the club to participate in the society's exhibition, which will be held at the Fifth Regiment Armory in December. The club decided to act upon the invitation at a future meeting.

Members of the club responded to the toasts, as follows: Robt. Brown, "Trade Expansion''; G. O. Brown, ''The Gardener''; Richard Vincent, ''European Floriculture''; J. J. Perry, ''The Gardeners' Club''; George Morrison, ''The Private Gardener,'' and Noah F. Flitton, ''The Parks.'' E. A. Seidewitz read several humorous telegrams, which contained hits at different members of the club.

At the meeting which preceded the dinner reports of the various committees were read, showing that the organization was in a flourishing condition. Then the election of officers for the ensuing year took place. All of last year's officers were reëlected. They are: J. J. Perry, president; George Morrison, vice-president; Fred G. Burger, treasurer; Noah F. Flitton, corresponding secretary; George Talbott, financial secretary, and C. M. Wagner, librarian. The auditing committee, which was appointed by the president, consists of Robert Graham, Charles Cook, Philip B. Welch, Harry J. Quick and Harry Wagner.

Various Notes.

The summer meeting of the State Horticultural Society will be held at Mountain Lake park, in Garrett county, Maryland, July 30 and 31 and August 2.

Harry J. Quick was honored March 14 by a visit to his greenhouses by Mrs. T. S. Sharretts, the wife of Gen. T.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. Twenty-seventh annual convention, Niagara Falls, Ont., June 22 to 24, 1909.

THE Hollander cabbage, if the demand for it keeps up, will be in the sold out class before long.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, New York, will remove May 1 to the corner store across the way from 14 Barclay street.

THE Burpee's Bush Lima bean is too scarce for comfort. The same may be said of Lazy Wife and Kentucky Wonder in the pole varieties.

MAIL order seed business keeps coming right along, and from all reports it looks as though March will hold its record as being the best month for the seedsmen.

A COLONY of fifty Italian families recently left Chicago to locate in Clare county, Michigan, and grow beans. A similar colony of sixty families is forming for the same purpose.

CUCUMBER seed for pickling purposes is high in price and decidedly scarce. It is thought that a great deal of business is yet to come from the pickle men for this year's supply, as many have held off for lower prices.

THE canning trade now is a large user of beet seed, as well as the other sorts that are known as canners' varieties. There seems to be no limit to packing and canning of vegetables and the canner is now looked upon as one of the best customers of the seedsman.

TRADE in all lines of the seed business is reported entirely satisfactory. Many of the standard sorts of garden seeds are short of the demand, according to the wholesalers, but other kinds are taken in place of them. The market gardeners' seedsmen report an especially large call for cabbage seed, carrot, beet and tomato, with a holding off on onion, celery and some other items for which there has not been a ready sale of the product wintered over from last year's plantings. It is hoped that the onion market may advance in time to induce the market gardeners to buy their usual quantities of seed, as this article cuts quite a figure in the market garden seedsman's business.

CONSIDERING that Montgomery Ward & Co. were not able to find a profit to justify maintaining a seed department, and dropped it this year, after operating quite heavily for several seasons, one can imagine the pleasure it will afford the heads of that great concern to read in the government Crop Reporter that in 1908 they sent out adulterated Kentucky blue grass seed. The government bought two samples of them, each of which contained less than twenty-eight per cent of the real article, and more than forty-six per cent of Canada blue grass, with more than twenty-three per cent inert matter. Those in the trade can well believe that Ward & Co. find themselves in this position through some employee's slip, with absolutely no thought they might place themselves in such a predicament, but this doubtless will make no difference to the country editors, who lie awake nights thinking up some way of taking a crack at the big Chicago mail order houses. They haven't had so fine a chance in many a day.

THE frontispiece of No. 3 of The Progressive Planter, the house organ of the Texas Seed & Floral Co., Dallas, Tex., is the portrait of H. W. Fisher, the editor, who formerly was manager of the seed department of Montgomery Ward & Co., Chicago.

THE pea and bean growers are arranging for their usual acreages for the coming year. Scarcity of stock seed of peas will cause some trouble, probably. No trouble to get enough acreages is reported, but higher prices, to the farmer, have been given in many cases.

ONION sets are becoming pretty well cleaned up.

HARRY V. LAWRENCE has opened a new seed store on Depot avenue, Falmouth, Mass.

S. F. LEONARD, Chicago, expects to sail for Europe June 15. Mrs. Leonard and Miss Bessie are to accompany him.

AN extended cold snap over the southwest during the early part of the month shortened up the demand for onion sets in that section and caused a little scare among some of the dealers. The prices held firm, however, and now that the demand has again strengthened, a sharp advance in price is likely to result.

AT the big convention of the National Canners' Association at Louisville last month, steps were taken to raise a large fund for publicity, to educate the consumers to the high quality of canned goods, and at the meeting of the Western Canned Goods Association at Chicago last week a similar committee was appointed. The packers feel that the consumption of their product will be greatly increased when the public appreciates the purity and healthfulness of the goods, and the seedsmen feel that the greater the consumption of canned goods, the less effort will be required to educate the packers to paying better prices for seeds.

CLOVER SEED.

C. A. King & Co., of Toledo, have collected the following data relative to clover seed:

Michigan — Large counties — Farmers more inclined to let go, but recent drop will cause them to hold for a while, hoping for a little better price. No trouble from weevil at present. Lots of seed in farmers' hands now, but they are holding for better prices. Think about twenty-five per cent is in farmers' hands. Will probably sell this month.

Canada—Trade in red clover has been very good recently. If weather continues favorable think there will be a lot of seed bought during this month.

Indiana—Large counties—If farmers sow freely and weevil eat up the surplus, October seed ought to be all right. Farmers not anxious to sell at $4.50 and grading is very uncertain. Weevil has done no injury here. Farmers not willing to sell much yet.

Indiana—Small counties—Weevil not doing any damage now. It did considerable before clover was cut and hulled. Growing crop no good, plowing it under. Think good to carry over at present prices. Receipts nothing; farmers not selling. Spring demand should be on soon.

Ohio—Small counties—Lots of seed in the country, but considerable will be held over. Holding stubbornly, waiting for $5. Plenty of seed on hand; some will be held over.

Ohio—Large counties—Some farmers still holding. Most of it has gone to market. Country offerings light. Some FARMERS OPPOSE FREE SEEDS.

At its recent meeting at Rockford the Illinois Farmers' Institute adopted the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, There are collected, put up, and distributed yearly, by the United States government, on congressional orders, 40,000,000 packages of miscellaneous vegetable and flower seeds, and

WHEREAS, Because of the great quantity required for this distribution, the seeds obtained can be of standard sorts only, such as are to be found everywhere for sale in the open market, and consequently no practical object is gained by such work; therefore,

Resolved, That the Illinois Farmers' Institute in annual meeting, do hereby request our representatives in the United States congress to use their influence and their votes to the end that the practice may be abolished.

A seedsman who was a silent but interested visitor at the meeting says: "When the farmers resolve that the free seed distribution is a fake there is some hope for its discontinuance."

ADULTERATION OF SEEDS.

In the Crop Reporter for March the Department of Agriculture makes the report required by law with regard to the adulteration and misbranding of the seeds of alfalfa, red clover, orchard grass and Kentucky blue grass. In previous years this publication has been by circular, with limited distribution. The Crop Reporter goes much farther. The report is by Prof. B. T. Galloway, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, with the approval of Secretary James Wilson. The report says:

"During the calendar year 1908 grass, clover and alfalfa seeds were obtained in the open market, in accordance with the following paragraph in the act of congress making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture:

> The Secretary of Agriculture is hereby directed to obtain in the open market samples of seeds of grass, clover or alfalfa, test the same, and if any such seeds are found to be adulterated or misbranded, or any seeds of Canada blue grass (Poa compressa) are obtained under any other name than Canada blue grass or Poa compressa, to publish the results of the test, together with the names of the persons by whom the seeds were offered for sale.

"In carrying out the provisions of this act, 1,471 samples of seeds were secured and analyzed, and publication is here made of the analysis of the 102 samples found to be adulterated or misbranded, together with the names of the seedsmen by whom they were offered for sale.

"ALFALFA.—Of the 358 samples of alfalfa seeds secured, eighty-six contained seed of sweet clover, seventy-eight seed of yellow trefoil and in 107 cases dodder was present in varying amounts from a trace to a sufficient quantity to sow 3,600 seeds per square rod when seeding at the rate of sixteen pounds of alfalfa per acre. Only eight lots of alfalfa seed were obtained which contained yellow trefoil seed in sufficient quantity to be considered an adulterant."

Then follow the names of four seedsmen from whom the eight samples of adulterated seeds were obtained, with the analyses of the samples. In each case two samples were obtained, one by mail and one by purchase. Only one of the four firms named is a general seed house.

"RED CLOVER.—Of the 413 samples of red clover seed secured only two were adulterated with yellow trefoil seed. A trace of yellow trefoil seed was present in 164 samples and dodder was found in 223 samples. Many samples contained large quantities of weed seeds. In seeding one lot at the rate of eight pounds of red clover seed per acre, 679 dodder seeds would be sown per square rod and by the use of other lots more than 3,500 buckhorn and plaintain seeds and 2,600 green foxtail seeds would be sown per square rod."

The one "seedsman" from whom the two adulterated samples were procured was a firm in Washington, D. C., that handles seeds as a side line.

"ORCHARD GRASS.—Of the 343 samples obtained as orchard grass seed, two samples contained no orchard grass seed, two were orchard grass seed adulterated with chess, and forty-nine were orchard grass seed adulterated with seed of rye grass or meadow fescue, or both."

The list of twenty-seven firms from which the fifty-three adulterated sam-

Cut Dahlia Flowers Pay

If You Have the Following Varieties

After considerable consideration and observation, and "talks" with the trade, we have decided to offer the following Dahlias to florists this season. Our retail Catalogue, which will be mailed free, contains a larger collection, but few are superior to the following and all are good size, divided clumps that have been field-grown and are strong and healthy.

Price of all the below-named varieties of Dahlias, large divided clumps or roots, except where noted, 10c each, $1 per doz., $7.50 per 100, $70 per 1,000.

Jack Rose. (Decorative type.) The variety Jack Rose is rightly named and is a florist's Dahlia, "from the ground up." The color is similar to the Jacqueminot rose, and is a unique color in the Dahlia, which lights up beautifully at night. The habit of the plant is stocky, very free-flowering. Producing its blooms in great profusion, upon erect, long stiff stems, making it invaluable for cutting. You cannot afford to be without it, if you sell cut-flowers. Price, green plants, ready April 1, 1909, 50c each, $5 per doz., $35 per 100.

Decorative Dahlias

Sylvia. Best described as a Giant Nymphæa, being stronger, larger and deeper colored. Flowers 4 to 6 inches in diameter, of fine form and full to the center, which is white, shaded to soft pink on the outer petals. One of the best cut-flower varieties.
Admiral Dewey. Brilliant imperial purple.
Black Beauty. A beautiful dark velvety maroon.
Blue Oban. A sport of the Decorative Dahlia Oban, and the nearest approach to blue found in Dahlias. 25c each, $2.50 per doz.
Catherine Duer. Strong-growing, free-flowering crimson-scarlet.
Clifford W. Bruton. Best yellow; immense size; perfect form
Frank L. Bassett. Color, bright royal purple, shading to blue.
Grand Duke Alexis. Very large, white, tinted pale lavender.
Henry Patrick. Superb pure white; long stems; fine for cutting.
Lyndhurst. One of the best bright scarlet.
Maid of Kent. Cherry-red, tipped white.
Mrs. Winters. Very large; pure snow-white.
Nymphaea. Color, clear, light shrimp-pink.
Oban. Very large rosy lavender.
Orange King. Rich glowing orange; early and profuse.
Perle (Perle de la tete d' Or). The grandest white Decorative Dahlia to date; very large and of beautiful shape.
William Agnew. Rich, dazzling red; immense size.

Cactus Dahlias

Aegir. Petals are twisted and color bright rich crimson-scarlet.
Countess of Lonsdale. A pleasing blending of amber and salmon.
Dainty. The ground color is lemon-yellow, which shades lighter as the season advances, at which time the color approaches canary-yellow at the base of the petals.
Earl of Pembroke. Bright plum. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Floradora. Color, dark velvety crimson. The best dark crimson for cutting, as the flowers are borne on long, erect stems and keep for a long time. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
General Buller. Color, deep, rich, velvety maroon, tipped white. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Harbor Light. Flowers are of immense size, outer petals extending to 7 inches across; long, slender, twisted and incurved; color, orange-red.
Jealousy. Purest pale canary-yellow.
J. H. Jackson. The largest of the deep, rich velvety maroons.
Keynes White. One of the best white Cactus Dahlias.
Kriemhilde. One of the finest pink Cactus Dahlias.

Cactus Dahlias

Mrs. H. J. Jones. Incurved portion of the petals are deep crimson; the broad stripe of white running through the center of the petals extends almost to the center.
Standard Bearer. Brightest scarlet; profuse bloomer. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Strahlein Krone. Intense cardinal-red.
Victor Von Scheffel. The color is a fresh, delicate pink, shading to deep rose-pink. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Winsome. Flowers white, very large, beautiful Cactus form.

Show and Fancy Dahlias

A. D. Livoni. Beautiful soft pink; early and profuse bloomer.
A. Pefferhorn. Rosy crimson.
Arabella. Pale primrose, tipped and shaded old rose and lavender.
Camelliaflora. A fine large pure white.
Glowing Coal. Brilliant red.
Green's White. One of the best whites for cutting.
Harlequin. Brilliant crimson, striped and tipped white.
Lemon Beauty. A grand yellow.
Menheddy Beauty. Fancy buff, with crimson spots, free, long stems, large bloom. 8c each, 80c per doz., $6 per 100.
Olympia. Color is deep rose-pink, striped and penciled crimson.
Progress. The color is a clear, soft rosy lake, beautifully penciled and spotted glowing crimson. Very valuable as a cut-flower. 15c each, $1.50 per doz., $12 per 100.
Queen Victoria. Deep yellow; fine for cutting.
Red Hussar. Pure cardinal, red flower, very free bloomer, splendid for cutting.
Storm King (Blizzard). A companion for the superb pink Dahlia, A. D. Livoni. Flowers are snow-white; extremely early and a free-bloomer. This is the florist's ideal white. 15c each, $1.25 per doz., $10 per 100.
White Swan. Snow-white, with long stems.

Single Dahlias

THE 20TH CENTURY. Intense rosy crimson, with white tips and white disk around the yellow center.

Dahlias to Color

We can also furnish, without names, in mixture, all colors separate, or all colors mixed, as follows:
Mixed Pinks, Mixed Whites, Mixed Reds, Mixed Yellows. 8c each, 75c per doz., $6 per 100, $55 per 1,000.
Mixed, all colors. 60c per doz., $5 per 100, $45 per 1,000.

ples were obtained (two from each firm in all cases except one, one by mail and one by purchase) contains some good names. A round dozen of them are firms regularly engaged in the seed trade, and seven or eight are in it largely enough so that they ought to know what they are doing.

"KENTUCKY BLUE GRASS.—Of the 357 samples of Kentucky blue grass seed obtained, twenty-five were found to contain Canada blue grass as an adulterant, twelve were practically all Canada blue grass, containing only a trace of Kentucky blue grass seed, and two were meadow fescue misbranded and offered for sale under the name of Kentucky blue grass seed."

The list of twenty firms from which the thirty-nine samples of Kentucky blue grass seed were obtained again contains some good names. In each case, except one, two samples were obtained, one by mail and one by purchase. Seven of the firms whose names are published are in the seed business as their main issue. Three of those who supplied adulterated Kentucky blue grass seed also supplied impure orchard grass, but of these only one is a regular seedsman, and not a large one.

The report concludes:

"It is encouraging to note the falling off in the trade in adulterated seeds since the line of work reported upon was begun. The importation of yellow trefoil seed and its subsequent use as an adulterant of red clover and alfalfa seed has practically ceased, 214,000 pounds being imported in the three fiscal years 1905 to 1907, and only 10,000 pounds in the fiscal year 1908.

"Only one-half as many lots of orchard grass seed were found to be adulterated in 1908 as were found in 1905, when the last collection of orchard grass seed was made.

"In 1908 only thirty-nine samples of Kentucky blue grass seed were found to be adulterated or misbranded, as contrasted with 110 samples in 1907.

"As has been previously stated in its publication, the Department of Agriculture, through the Seed Laboratory, will examine and report promptly as to the presence of adulterants and dodder in any samples of seed submitted for that purpose."

SEED FOR LAWN.

I am about to construct a lawn of 10,000 square feet. Could you tell how much grass seed to put in to make it nice and bushy the first year? A. C. L.

The best landscape gardeners figure that a pound of properly mixed lawn grass seed will sow 400 square feet. To get a nice, bushy lawn the first year from seed it would be well to sow somewhat heavier than this. On this basis, which I may add is the seedsman's basis also, thirty-five pounds of properly mixed choice lawn grass seed would be sufficient to sow 10,000 square feet. J. C.

The Market.

A slight improvement in business can be reported for last week. Perhaps it was due to a large amount of funeral work, or can it be that as Lent progresses the general public are less prone to observe it? At any rate, there was a better demand and fairly good prices, and on Saturday afternoon there was a clean-up that left scarcely a flower in the wholesale houses. All the traveling men from the eastern states report a decided improvement in the tone of business in that locality, beginning just before the holidays. Perhaps that condition has just moved westward this far.

We have been having some poor growing weather. It has been warm and springlike one day and cold and raw the next. This has a tendency to shorten the cut and to soften the growth to such an extent as to greatly lower the quality of stock. The supply in carnations has been heavy, but there have been signs of a let-up in it. Roses are not coming so strong. Lilies are fairly scarce and sell well. Violets are not quite so plentiful and good single ones sell well. Sweet peas are good property and find a ready market most of the time, but the price does not average as high as it should. White carnations are all ordered up now till after St. Patrick's day. This demand has doubled the price of them and there are not enough to go around.

Green goods of all kinds are selling well. This is a good market for cheap green goods.

You Need These Seeds

They are the right kinds for Florists, produced in the right way by the world's best growers. To have choicest cut flowers during the summer, sow now:—

PLUMED CELOSIA Reid's Perfection, a dazzling scarlet of great beauty. Each "plume" produced is a small bouquet itself, and 3 or 4 will make a large, brilliant bunch. Trade packet, 25c; per oz., $1.50.

ASTER, EARLIEST SNOWDRIFT The best for early cutting; very free flowering. This sort will grow money for the florist who plants it. Trade packet, 25c; ¼ oz., 75c.

SWEET PEAS New Orchid-flowering Sorts, Mixed. Should be planted largely for critical trade. Your customers will like those lovely, wavy, gigantic flowers much more than the smaller ones of the older sorts. 15c per oz., 80c per pound.

You'll Want SOME of These BULBS

They sell readily in your store, and the customer who buys them will be reminded of you throughout the growing season.

club room, drew the largest attendance in years. There can be no question but that interest in the society has been awakened by the coming of the S. A. F. Everyone is taking a lively interest in all that is going on, and all are willing and anxious to lend their services wherever they can be of assistance. The various committees are doing their work in a thorough manner and are leaving no stones unturned to have everything in just the shape it should be in. This, to say the least, is encouraging to the officers of the society, and the peace and harmony which are everywhere in evidence cannot do otherwise than bring all the work attempted to a satisfactory end. Cities in the past have set a high standard in the entertainment afforded the members of the national society when gathered in convention. They have set a standard for lavishness that it would be a hard thing for the local society to exceed. But lavishness is not everything. Our aim is one of hospitality and good will. It is to make every florist who visits this city next August feel that we not only wanted him to come, but that we would have been disappointed if he had not come. There will be no lack of entertainment, either. And it is the aim of all committees to have this of such a novel nature that it will remain in the memories of those who honored us with their presence for many years.

During the business session of the meeting, reports were heard from the various committees, and there was considerable discussion on all points of interest. The finance committee reported several large subscriptions during the past week. At about 10 p. m., E. G. Gillett escorted the executive board of the S. A. F., which was in session in this city, from the committee room at the Hotel Sinton to the club room of the society, and the business meeting was immediately adjourned for a social session. All the members of the executive committee were called upon and made short addresses. Addresses were made by various members of the local society, including R. Witterstaetter, C. E. Critchell, Albert Sunderbruch and E. G. Gillett.

Refreshments were then served by C. E. Critchell and Wm. Gardener, and it was near the midnight hour before anyone thought of starting toward home.

Various Notes.

Fred Gear and Geo. E. Tromey report a large demand for the green carnation dye this year. From this it would seem that there would be more green carnations than ever. Artificial green carnations will be used a great deal also, but they will not have much influence on the demand for the natural product.

A. M. Stearns, of the Lockland Lumber Co., Lockland, O., is in Spanish Honduras, where he is looking over a large banana plantation in which he is interested. As this plantation is some twelve miles square, they must be producing some bananas.

A couple of dozen seedling carnations from W. E. Hall, Clyde, O., attracted a great deal of attention at the club meeting. It was on the order of Prosperity, though much more heavily colored. It has a large flower on a long stem and is altogether a good thing.

A. J. Horning, of Toledo, O., has taken over the greenhouses of Mrs. Wm. Cunningham, 935 Ludlow avenue, Clifton, and with the stand in the flower market is doing a good business.

E. J. Fancourt, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, was a caller. His recent adventure into matrimony has certainly agreed with him.

The executive committee of the S. A. F. held the annual midwinter session in this city March 13 to 16, at the Sinton Hotel. A detailed account of this meeting will be found elsewhere.

C. J. OHMER.

The recent sleet storm caused a loss of several hundred dollars' worth of stock in the greenhouses of John A. Hansen, at Clifton. On the morning after the storm the overhanging branches of a tree, being loaded with sleet, fell through the roof of one of the houses and the plants were frozen before the accident was discovered.

TULIPS NOT FLOWERING.

Can you assign any reason for the blasting of our Yellow Prince? They were treated exactly the same as our other tulip bulbs, which have developed into as fine blooms as any we ever grew. When taken from the bulb cellar, the Yellow Prince appeared as healthy as any other plant, but it throws out no flowering stalk, though its foliage appears like that of the other tulips.

A. H. D.

Occasionally we have had this same trouble with Yellow Prince, Pottebakkers and some other tulips, more particularly when forced early. The usual cause for the buds blighting is a lack of moisture at the roots. The top of the soil may appear moist, but the balance may be quite dry. With good drainage, tulips can hardly be afforded too much water. Too many growers give their bulbs a soaking after placing them in pots or flats, cover them with ashes or loam and imagine the moisture afforded will carry them until they are wanted for forcing. There could be no greater mistake. More failures in tulip culture are brought about by insufficient moisture at the roots than by all other causes combined.

C. W.

SHORT-STEMMED LONGIFLORUMS.

Why is it that our longiflorum multiflorum lilies have stems that are only from six to fifteen inches in length? This is the first time we have tried them, and it may be because we do not treat them right. We have handled them with some Harrisii, giving both the same treatment, and our Harrisii seem fine in every way. We have seen longiflorums in two other places this season, and they seem to have the same fault as ours. We have two sizes, 7 to 9 and 9 to 11, both sizes giving us fine, heavy stalks, with excellent foliage, but very short.

F. P. F. C.

Your trouble seems to be general this season. Japanese longiflorums appear to be dwarfer than usual. If, however, they are healthy, we would not worry about their being short-stemmed. If you are anxious to lengthen them somewhat, you can do so by standing them for a week or two in a warm, shaded house. The trouble with longiflorums too often is that they are lanky, and if you have fifteen inches of clean stem below the buds, your plants are all right. C. W.

New Rose White Killarney

GROWN BY

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown=on=Hudson, N. Y.

NEW ROSE

White Killarney

We Know You Will Want to Buy White Killarney

Every live, progressive, up-to-date grower who has seen it is buying it; but when you buy White Killarney, be sure you get the right White Killarney [the Waban variety]. When you buy from us, you get the variety that has been exhibited and certificated, and the one that has attracted such favorable attention. There have been several white sports of Killarney, which are very much inferior to the White Killarney that we have been offering and exhibiting—the one that has made the reputation for White Killarney. The superiority of our sport is admitted even by those who have the other sports.

It may seem strange, but the bud of White Killarney is much larger and fuller than the bud of the pink Killarney.

If you are in the vicinity of New York, we should be glad to have you call and see White Killarney growing at our Scarborough range, and you will say at a glance—as everyone has who has seen it growing—that it is by far the best white rose that has ever been placed on the market.

It is not only a good winter-flowering rose, but is good the entire year, for which reason it will supersede Bride and Kaiserin, neither of which covers the entire season. In addition to this, it is a splendid shipper. We have shipped flowers as far as Dallas, Tex., and they have reached destination in perfect order. In confirmation of this statement, we take pleasure in reproducing a letter recently received from Mr. Willis N. Rudd, Secretary of the Society of American Florists, dated January 18, in which he writes as follows:

DEAR MR. PIERSON:

I cannot refrain from writing you and expressing my admiration for the White Killarney as shown at Chicago on Thursday. It is an exquisitely beautiful thing, and attracted much attention. I took half the blooms home with me, and they were finer on Saturday than they were at the show. The record is that these blooms were shipped from Tarrytown, staged and exhibited during the afternoon. They were then carelessly wrapped up in a box, and remained in that box until 1 o'clock Friday morning, at which time I reached home; improved in quality up to Saturday, and were in fairly presentable condition on Sunday.

In addition to being the most beautiful white rose of its class which I have seen, this demonstrates its splendid keeping and shipping qualities.

W. N. RUDD.

We were awarded Silver Cup, National Flower Show, Chicago

PACIFIC COAST.

Portland, Ore.—J. J. Butzer reports business exceptionally good this spring.

Dan McRorie, formerly with W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., is now located at 721 Crocker building, San Francisco, handling horticultural supplies.

George Guy Paine, proprietor of the Golden West Nursery, at Los Gatos, Cal., has been declared bankrupt, and A. Berryman has been appointed trustee, with authority to offer, at private sale, the bankrupt's nursery stock, plants, tools and other personal property.

Vancouver, B. C.—The Royal Nurseries & Floral Co., Ltd., has been incorporated under the laws of the province of British Columbia and a prospectus has now been issued, inviting the public to subscribe to 10,000 shares of its authorized capital, the shares being $1 each and the authorized number 100,000. Forty acres of land have been secured near Vancouver and greenhouses with a glass area of nearly 60,000 square feet are now nearing completion. The president is W. D. S. Rorison.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather has turned very dry for a change, and rain has been replaced by high north winds. Flowers are again plentiful, with the exception of roses, which are in rather short supply. Violets, after having been the great standby of the retailers, are now on the wane, and the limber stems and lighter shaded flowers show that the end of their season is near. Late flowered daffodils are now at the height of their season and half a dozen varieties of tulips are assisting materially in the florists' show windows. Freesias hold on well and have proven to be good sellers this season. Valley does not move as quickly as it should and L. longiflorum and Harrisii are in the same position.

Wild flowers have made their appearance, and good California poppies, wild ranunculus and buttercups are being handled extensively by some dealers. Good maidenhair and asparagus are both scarce, but we are receiving such a quantity of the wild varieties that the shortage is not materially felt.

Business, with the exception of funeral work, is scarce, there being but little in any other line worth mentioning. From reports of several of our leading shippers, it appears that the Easter trade may be better than that of last season. In another couple of weeks, however, we can tell better what to expect, and act accordingly.

Various Notes.

A. Ringier, representing the W. W. Barnard Co., of Chicago, has left town for a trip through the northern country. He reports plenty of business for the season.

Fred Seulberger has been reappointed horticultural inspector for Alameda county, with headquarters at Oakland.

Martin Reukauf, of Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, is visiting the local retailers with samples of many good things in the florists' line.

The store of H. M. Sanborn, of Oakland, was burglarized for the second time within three months, on the night of March 10. There was nothing of value taken, although considerable damage was done to the safe and office furniture.

Asparagus Plumosus Nanus

Last year, owing to the almost total failure of the Asparagus Plumosus to seed, I was unable to fill my orders, but this season I am to the front with about 2,000,000 seed.

The plants, after a year's rest, blossomed freely and matured a heavy crop of what I believe will be the strongest seed ever sent out of California. The Asparagus Plumosus grown here needs no introduction to you, however, as you are already fully acquainted with its merits. You can get seed promptly, as they are being harvested now, and can be delivered upon receipt of your order.

Seeds will be sold by count, with the usual guarantee as to germination, and I will again sell at my usual low, cash-with-order prices as per following list:

1,000 seeds	$ 2.00	13,000 seeds	$20.00
6,000 seeds	10.00	25,000 seeds	35.00
50,000 seeds			62.50

I shall be glad to receive your order and know you will be pleased with the results.

PACIFIC COAST SHRUBS.

Under separate cover I am mailing you samples of a shrub which grows profusely here, in Oregon, along the seacoast, thriving fairly well even in the face of the prevailing cold northwest winds in summer. Any information regarding it would be very acceptable, as would also a list of shrubs and trees suitable for seaside planting on the Pacific coast.

D. M.

The sample sent by D. M. is a Rhododendron macrophyllum, one of the characteristic varieties of which there are several on the Pacific coast, the best probably being the R. Californicum, which is not found in profusion as far north as the upper part of Oregon, but in the more southern division, as well as in northern California, it forms one of the most beautiful of the distinctively coast flowers. The R. gymnocarpum is neither so abundant as the other varieties, nor is it as fragrant or showy, but it grows most beautifully in the dense shade of the larger trees.

All of the rhododendrons are among our most valued natural productions and it is a pity they have been so much neglected by the gardening fraternity. They succeed best on high ground that is well drained and at the same time has plenty of moisture. They are somewhat difficult to transplant unless taken at the season when they are practically dormant, which is very late in the fall.

In localities like Oregon and Washington, where there is such a quantity of natural growths and where the landscape gardener has such a variety of conifers to select from, there is little to be suggested in the making of selections. If, however, he wishes to plant things that are not seen in the natural condition in his immediate neighborhood, he has a large list to select from. In flowering shrubbery the acacia family offers half a dozen sorts, at least, that are showy and will stand any quantity or quality of sea breezes. There are also the bromus, the wild azaleas, the several sorts of cornus, the Ribes glutinosum, the Heteromeles arbutifolia, the giant lupines, blue and white ceanothus and manzanita. All of these, with the exception of the acacias, are well known indigenous Pacific coast flowering shrubs, which will grow in any exposed place. Should the planter wish to extend his list, there is practically no end to the varieties that can be planted along the flowering shrubbery line. If evergreens are desired, the natural growths along the coast line of Oregon and Washington offer the most magnificent selection to be found anywhere and the gardener has no need to go any farther than what will be found at home.

All the flowering shrubs I have named are to be found in abundance along the Pacific coast lines. With such an assortment of color and growths, the gardener has only to arrange in a systematic way that which nature has so abundantly provided and he will have a garden that will cost but a little time and labor and for beauty cannot be excelled in any part of the country. CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The conditions of last week's market were varied in the extreme. The early part of the week found trade slow, with quantities of stock of all kinds on hand, but the latter part of the week found flowers well cleaned up, and in some lines there were not enough to fill orders. White carnations were scarce all the week, and sold readily for better prices than colored stock. The receipts of roses are on the increase, but as yet there has been no overstock. Heavy funeral orders locally and good shipping trade has used up all available good roses. Sweet peas are coming in more freely and are picked up at sight. Lilies, valley and violets were all in good demand.

Beauties are still scarce and the quality is none too good. Asparagus, adiantum and smilax have all been moving fast of late.

Various Notes.

Westman & Getz report having booked an order for a large wedding this week, including both the decorations for house and church.

The F. R. Williams Co. is sending in a fine cut of Beacon carnations, also some fine sweet peas.

Mrs. L. Warnke has been confined to the house with an attack of rheumatism.

Max Naumann has opened a pretty store at the corner of East One Hundred and Fifth street and Superior avenue.

Carl Hagenburger, of Mentor, has been sending some good Prince of Wales violets to this market. B.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

THE Southwestern Nursery Co., Troy, O., has been incorporated, with $10,000 capital stock, by L. A. Coppock and others.

H. W. HENRY, proprietor of the La Porte Nursery, La Porte Ind., is reported to have taken his own life March 7.

A MUNICIPAL nursery will be started by the Park Board in Sherman park, Milwaukee. About 150,000 plants will be purchased with the appropriation of $2,000 made for the purpose.

A CERTIFICATE of incorporation has been filed by the Rosemore Co., of Litchfield, Conn. The capital stock is $15,000 and business will be begun with $10,000. The incorporators are William T. Marsh, John L. Buel and Alice T. Buckeley, all of Litchfield.

ELLWANGER & BARRY'S principal novelty this season is Rose Veilchenblau, or Violet Blue, a seedling of Crimson Rambler, the color of which is described as reddish or purplish pink on first unfolding, then amethyst and finally steel blue as the flower fades.

THIS is again the open season for the exportation of nursery stock to Canada. From March 15 to May 15 fumigated nursery stock is admitted by the Dominion government if shipped via the ports of St. Johns, N. B.; Niagara Falls, Windsor, Winnipeg or St. Johns, Que.

F. H. STANNARD, of Ottawa, was a member of the Kansas entomological commission, the law, now in its third year, providing that one member shall be a nurseryman actively engaged in business in the state, to be appointed by the governor. Mr. Stannard is now in the state legislature.

CHICAGO is to have a city forester, an appropriation of $2,000 having recently been provided to take care of the newly created official. A civil service examination to fill the office is to be held March 29. Applicants must file their applications at the Civil Service Commission before noon March 27.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

For Lenten season last week was good. Decorations for churches, openings, etc., have been on the carpet, and stock has moved very satisfactorily. Everything in the bulb line is plentiful and good. White roses are scarce, but there are plenty red and pink. Carnations are plentiful. The demand for white carnations was noticeable the latter part of the week, to be colored for St. Patrick's day. Easter plants are coming on in good shape, and the promise is for a good supply for the holidays.

Various Notes.

C. A. Schnell, of Chicago, is the new manager of the cut flower department of the L. S. Donaldson Co.

Oscar Carlson has bought out his partner, Mr. Sandberg, and is now sole owner of the range. He is cutting some extra fine roses, all colors, and has a good stock of bulbs coming in for Easter.

Miss Whitted did a rapid business last week, for funerals and decorations. Among the funeral orders were four blankets, made up respectively of violets, valley, Beauties and lilacs, and combinations of these flowers. The decoration of the new Plymouth church is booked for the first part of the coming week for dedication services.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. is cutting some fine long-stemmed single violets, and some Emperor that are worthy of mention. Easter plant orders are already being shipped out here, and every day's mail brings in a new list.

R. A. Latham reports business good for last week, and he has sold a number of plants. The alterations and repairs on the store are completed, and the addition of a rock-masonry fish pond is an attractive feature.

Rice Bros. find white roses scarce, but other stock plentiful, and out-of-town business is good with them.

O. C. Swanson had in stock some fine sweet peas, long-stemmed, and finds the sale on lilacs quite popular. He had a decoration representing a Dutch cottage, using Dutch hyacinths, bulb stock, etc., which was very unique. The O'Brien-Douglas wedding, one of the largest of the season, was another event of last week with this firm.

E. Nagel & Son have about 1,000 fine Primula obconica for Easter.

Otto Will, still on his honeymoon trip, left Japan February 20 and is on his way to Ceylon. From there he will go to Naples, expecting to reach that point about April 1. Thence he will make a Mediterranean cruise, and come home by way of New York city, where he will stop over to visit his brother. He is not expected home before June.

Souden & Desmond have booked six good decorations for the coming week, and report business excellent.

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held here March 12. The evening was observed as a special carnation night. The new carnation, Mrs. Pfeuffer, was exhibited by John L. Pfeuffer, of Irvington, N. J. It is a seedling of Prosperity x Floriana, of Daybreak shade, with a full calyx and dented petals, and is very fragrant. Its owner claims that it is of superior merit as a commercial variety, being a heavy cropper and free bloomer during the months of December and January.

Henry Hornecker, of East Orange, made an exhibit of some well grown Victory, receiving a certificate of merit.

There was the usual array from private estates.

Lager & Hurrell exhibited a collection of orchids, among which a hybrid lælia was particularly fine.

A paper upon the cultivation of the carnation, by William Lyons, gardener at Spring Brook Farms, Morristown, was read by the secretary. Mr. Lyons was prevented from coming by sickness in his family.

Totty on mums will be a feature of the next meeting. J. B. D.

HILLSDALE, MICH.

Carl Hirsch has recently been doing some substantial work in the repairing and remodeling of his greenhouses. Cement was largely used in the renewing of the posts and benches. A system of patent sprinklers has also been installed.

When Mr. and Mrs. Hirsch came to Hillsdale from Germany fifteen years ago, Mr. Hirsch borrowed his first dollar with which to enter business. He was then 29 years of age. His greenhouses now contain 30,000 square feet of glass.

Mr. Hirsch is gardener for the Lake Shore railway west of Toledo and has been elected president of the American Association of Railway Gardeners.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—T. L. Metcalfe has almost completed another addition to his greenhouses. With this added space, Mr. Metcalfe now has 26,000 square feet under glass.

Olney, Ill.—The Wilson Floral Co. has a climbing rose of a creamy white color in one end of its greenhouse, that runs up and around one end and corner of the house, yielding a profuse crop of fine flowers each season. Sometimes as many as 100 flowers have been cut at one time. The plant is 14 years old and has been in its present position all that time. The flowers come in handy for design work.

The good old English variety. 75c for 5, $12 per 100.

Baby Rambler Roses

BABY DOROTHY. The same in habit as Baby Rambler, but the color of the flowers is similar to Dorothy Perkins. This variety has created quite a sensation when exhibited at the English National Rose Society's and other shows. "Baby Dorothy," when planted out, flowers perpetually from spring until autumn. It makes an excellent pot plant for forcing. Price for strong, field-grown plants, $1.50 for 5, $25 per 100.

CATHERINE SEIMETH. A very important novelty. A White Baby Rambler Rose, larger and better flowers than the type. White with yellowish center. It has the true rose perfume. $1.25 for 5, $20 per 100.

MRS. WM. H. CUTBUSH. A grand acquisition to the Baby Rambler class. Color intense crimson, and exceptionally free-flowering. $1.25 for 5, $20 per 100.

MME. NORBERT LEVAVASSEUR (Baby Rambler). Strong, field-grown plants, $1.25 for 10, $12 per 100.

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER. (Grown as a Standard.) The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. 35c each, $3 for 10, $30 per 100.

BABY DOROTHY. (Grown as a Standard.) For description, see above. $1.50 each, $15 for 10.

A Good Polyantha Rose, Perle des Rouges

A polyantha variety of unusual merit. Color velvety crimson, with reflex petals of bright cerise. 75c for 5, $12 per 100.

Ramblers and Other Climbing Roses

CRIMSON RAMBLER. American Grown. The only stock for forcing. Large heavy plants, two years old, mossed and packed in bundles of 10. 2 to 3 feet, $1 for 10, $7.50 per 100; 3 to 5 feet, $1.25 for 10, $10 per 100; 5 to 6 feet, $1.75 for 10, $15 per 100.

TOMATO RUST.

The Tomato's Chief Enemy.

A fungous disease (Cladosporium fulvum), known as "tomato rust," is giving hothouse tomato growers much trouble and seems to be present in all parts of the country where tomatoes are grown under glass. It is evident that it is here to stay, much as is mildew on roses, and must be considered as the chief of all the diseases to which tomatoes are subject.

As compared to mildew, it is similar only by being of moldy appearance and in spots on the foliage. Its color is brown and its growth is found on the under side of the leaf, instead of on top, like mildew.

Although it is not generally known, the real growth of all such fungi is inside the leaf, between the upper and lower skin of the leaf. The growth that we see is simply the bloom and seed of the hidden plant, breaking out thus that the spores may be carried on the air, or otherwise, to new places.

Fungous Growths Explained.

The mushroom might be taken as a good example of this hidden growth. The real plant of the mushroom (mushrooms and toadstools belong to the fungoid families) is underground, running all through the manure like tiny cotton threads for weeks before breaking through above into mushrooms, which are really the bloom and seed of the underground plant. If a mushroom is allowed to open up flat, then is picked and the stem removed from the flat or upper part, and if this part is placed on a piece of white paper overnight, top side up as it grew, it will be found upon lifting it in the morning that the print of the under side of the mushroom is left plainly on the paper, and by close examination this will be found to be spores or seeds of the mushroom, which fell from the blades or gills of the mature mushroom.

So it is with other fungous growths, like mildew and the tomato rust of which we speak. The plant is really on the inside of the leaf. Each of the threads of the mold-like growth has a head on it, like a straw of grain. This is a spore, which, when carried to another plant, will infest the leaf and spread the growth of the fungi, as weed seed from a few weeds will seed a whole field.

First Signs of the Disease.

In this tomato disease the first signs are pale or yellowish spots on the leaves, and for a few days nothing can be found on either surface of the leaf, but soon a downy fuzz will appear underneath and in a few days it will grow and come to minute heads.

There is no doubt but that infection takes place on the upper side of the leaf, where the spores are more likely to alight, but it does not break out on the upper side of the leaf, like mildew, because it is not the nature of this particular fungus to do so. It always breaks out underneath; never on top.

This fungus flourishes in almost exactly the same conditions that mildew likes, and the same preventive, good and careful ventilation from the start, is applied to both.

Remedies.

But preventives and remedies are different. If an attack of tomato leaf rust sets in, the best thing to do first is to spray the upper sides of the foliage with either Bordeaux mixture or the ammoniacal carbonate of copper solution, and the spores will be prevented from germinating when they alight on the poison. It is also well to spray the under sides of any leaves that are already attacked, so that the spores will be killed before they spread, as in pulling and burning a thistle when in bloom, before the seed gets scattered. The latter named fungicide is the more suitable if the plants have fruit on, as it will not soil the fruit as Bordeaux does, but it is not considered as lasting as Bordeaux.

Spraying, unless done thoroughly, is time and money wasted. The best kind of sprayer for greenhouses is a compressed air sprayer, pumped up like a bicycle tire, and it should be under good pressure in order to make a fine, mist-like spray. It takes a good sprayer, a good pressure and a good man to do it, if any benefit is to come from it.

H. G.

NEW ORLEANS.

Current Comment.

If the Harrisii lilies growing almost wild around here could be forced at will to bloom at a certain time, few bulbs would be imported. They multiply here, when left in the ground, at an astonishing rate. This year they will be just in time for Easter, when they seem to be more in demand than ever before. Disease is not known among them, and although not producing so many flowers on a stem they are just as perfect as the best ones coming from Bermuda or Japan.

The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. has issued its new catalogue. They handle field grown roses in quantity and devote 75,000 feet of glass to cut roses. American Beauties are grown on solid beds. It is the most planted. Mr. Papworth says that his bills for northern roses are reduced to almost nothing now, and that he often has a surplus to dispose of here at wholesale. A large portion of two houses is now planted in cucumbers. It is a paying crop. No matter what kind of artificial heat you will use in northern latitudes, they will never attain the same perfection as here under our bright, hot sun. In the nursery about 25,000 hardy palms are planted. The company has just been filling a contract to furnish the Southern Land Co. with a large quantity of palms and trees and is figuring on another big order. A new piece of ground has just been purchased by the company, with the expectation that it will be needed in the near future.

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

Shamrocks are much in demand at present. Erie florists have a good supply for St. Patrick's day. Green carnations, roses and tulips are seen in abundance, and they attract a great deal of attention in the florists' windows. The sale of these green flowers increases each year.

Various Notes.

Miss Borden, formerly saleslady at John V. Laver's store, has returned to her home in Boston.

C. H. Burdick, of Conneaut, O., was in the city last week, purchasing stock for his new store, which was opened in Conneaut March 11.

The Baur Floral Co. is adding several greenhouses to the one built on the new place last summer. The glass has been delayed on account of the glass strike.

B. P.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

The cut flower trade here is good, with plenty of outside orders to keep stock well cleaned up. Retail trade also holds up well and shows little effect of the Lenten season. The number of inquiries received for Easter stock indicates that there will be an unusual demand.

G. Van Bochove & Bro. have broken ground for another range of houses. Their stock, as usual, is in fine condition.

S. Batson is just in the midst of a heavy crop of carnations and snapdragons, which find ready sale.

A. Grofvert's place is looking well. He says his new pink seedling carnation is surely a winner. ROLA.

RIVES JUNCTION, MICH.

E. E. Stewart, the gladiolus grower of this place, seems to be marked for trouble. Two weeks ago he had the misfortune to take a fall which fractured one of his ribs. He was just beginning to recover from this, when last Saturday, March 13, in driving a hoop from a barrel, a piece of steel struck his eye, which caused a painful, though not serious, injury. He will have to keep his eye bandaged for several days. This, as well as his other injury, is especially unfortunate, coming, as it does, in the season of rush orders.

WARREN, O.—Hartman Bros., vegetable growers, who have done both a local and shipping trade, have sold out to J. F. Davis, of Wardner, Ida., and are looking around for a new location in the greenhouse business.

New Carnations--1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The color of Mrs. Chas. Knopf is somewhat darker than Enchantress during the winter months. The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal; closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Immediate delivery.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50 00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Announcement

We beg to announce that we will grow and disseminate A. C. Brown's new seedling, SANGAMO, jointly.

Sangamo is the new, brilliant, glistening pink carnation shown at Indianapolis and awarded the A. C. S. certificate of merit, attracting the attention of every carnation grower on account of its very pleasing color, long, stiff stem and well formed flowers, measuring 3 to 3½ inches. The calyx is strong, and as a producer it cannot be excelled.

Orders booked now for January, 1910, delivery.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The dark weather of last week shortened the supply in all lines, and as there was a good demand, business showed a decided improvement. In fact, carnations were scarce Friday and Saturday, and this gave the bulbous stock a fair show for once. At this writing the call for white carnations for St. Patrick's day is heavy, and it looks as though there will be a shortage in this line.

Various Notes.

The North Milwaukee plant formerly owned by C. Johanson, which has been managed by four different parties in the last two years for the Wisconsin National Building & Loan Association, has now been purchased by Albert Groth. Up to the time of buying, Mr. Groth conducted a grocery store near the city limits.

The damage caused by the storm three weeks ago at the Edlefsen plant in North Milwaukee, which destroyed four houses of his best carnation plants, has been repaired and all is now in shape for business. Sweet peas are coming up in several benches, while young stock of carnations, mums and bedding stock fills one house.

The Mueller & Schroeder Co. will grow White Perfection carnations exclusively for white the coming season.

Manke Bros. like Beacon, as grown by their neighbor, N. Zweifel, so well that they will put in several benches to replace the old Cardinal.

Charles Menger supplied valley, callas and Easter lilies for the third flower service at the Wesley Methodist Episcopal church last Sunday.

Visitor: Fred Rentschler, of Madison, Wis. E. O.

Kansas City, Mo.—Edgar Bunyon, 40 years old, fell from the steps of a building at 1505 Grand avenue recently, and broke his right arm.

Milwaukee, Wis.—A large flower show is to be held in this city next fall. The committee of arrangements consists of H. V. Hunkel, C. C. Pollworth, William Zimmerman, Nic Zweifel, J. G. Heitmann, August F. Kellner and C. Dallwig.

LEXINGTON, KY.

The Market.

There is a satisfactory demand for both cut flowers and plants here.

Roses and carnations are good and plentiful and meet with a brisk demand. Violets are producing abundantly and have ready sales. Quantities of jonquils are now on the market and sell fairly well. Other bulbous flowers are good and plentiful. Sweet peas are rather scarce at present, but will be in good supply in a few weeks. Green goods, such as fern leaves, galax, asparagus and smilax, are in good supply and demand.

All the florists are as busy as they can be with Easter and spring stock. Lilies will be scarce this year for Easter.

We have had an abundance of rain in this vicinity in the last two weeks.

Various Notes.

Miss Elizabeth Lyle, formerly with William Bell, of this city, has accepted a position with Naumann & Sons, of Cleveland, O. Miss Lyle is a skilled designer and the florists here wish her much success in her new field.

Honaker Bros. are busy building three new houses at their place on Jackson street. They have bright prospects for Easter this year. Their spring stock is also in excellent condition.

Anderson & White have as good a stock of geraniums as can be found in this vicinity. Frank McMullen is in charge of their place and is kept very busy.

Keller Bros. contemplate building another large house for carnations in the near future. Their place consists of 40,000 square feet of glass at present, devoted to a general line of stock.

S. S. Kelley has received a large shipment of flower pots from the north and is preparing for a large spring business at his place on Clifton Heights.

The Michler Bros. Co. is cutting some excellent violets. They have a good stock of Easter and spring plants.

Blue Grass.

Afterglow...

Rooted cuttings ready now, at $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. Prices on larger lots on application.

HEADQUARTERS FOR

ARAUCARIAS

"By Jingo!" was the remark the other day of a bright looking gentleman, as he stepped, with his lady friend into our Araucaria houses, "If these aren't the best shaped and finest looking specimens of Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa I have ever seen, then I'm a mark. What a sight for this time of the year!"

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa. Our reputation of being one of the largest importers and shippers of this beautiful evergreen decorative plant is so well known, dating far back into the 19th century, that our name, as well as the Araucaria itself, shall never die out, and is still fresh in people's minds, same as when we first started. Why the Araucaria is so popular is because it is an ancient plant, kept by Greeks and Romans as a special favorite in their household, as a good omen.

Araucaria Robusta Compacta, specimen plants, 7 to 8-in. pots, 4 to 5 years old, 3, 4 and 5 tiers, 20, 25 and 30 inches high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca. This is a beautiful blue variety, very graceful and beautiful. Specimen plants, 6-in., 7-in., 8-in. pots, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 20, 25, 30 and 32 in. high, same in width, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa, 3, 4 and 5 years old, 4, 5, 6 and 7 tiers, 6-in pots, 20, 25, 30 and 35 in. high, an Elephant for only 75c; a Jumbo for $1.00 and a Holy Terror for $1.25 to $1.50.

Current Comment.

Retailers report business holding its own, with about enough stock to supply the demand.

E. A. Nelson has the contract to furnish the plants for Woodruff Place this year.

Alfred Pahud surprised the craft by getting married last week.

Hans Kipke, of A. Wiegand & Sons, has been on the sick list for the last week.

Woerner & Coy, who recently opened a store at Sixteenth and College avenue, report business good. This firm is cutting callas in quantity.

Smith & Junge will build a new house this year and devote it entirely to orchids.

Albert Pettit is contemplating adding another house this year.

The Florists' Club had its regular monthly meeting at the Walhalla March 10, with a good attendance. The club intends to send a bowling team to Cincinnati this summer. You can rest assured that it will be a good one, for we have some star bowlers.

George Wiegand returned this week from a week's stay in Washington. He reports a fine time, notwithstanding the slush.

W. W. Coles, of Kokomo, was in town March 13 to attend the quarter century ceremonial and the laying of the corner-stone of the new Shrine temple.

H. L. W.

NEWBURGH, N. Y.

Funeral work has kept the craft busy of late and used up all available stock. At the funeral of a prominent lady the Yuess Gardens Co. had the family order and executed what was conceded to be the most handsome pieces seen here. The seed branch of this firm's business is in full swing. An order from a town in the western part of the state, for 12,000 packets of seed, following a large order for bulk seed from a neighboring city, for the purpose of distribution among the school children, is evidence of the growing popularity of gardening with the youngsters, and it should be encouraged by the craft to the fullest extent.

PREPARE FOR EASTER

FROM WHOM WILL WE PURCHASE OUR EASTER SUPPLY?

From our old friend, Godfrey Aschmann, of Philadelphia, of course. He was our man of the past and he shall be our man this Easter, and, as long as he ships us good plants, he shall be our man in the future. He always treated us right before and we can rely upon him. What he advertises is true and is no bluff.

If you would know the fairest sight your eyes can ever see,
Where the most perfect plants are grown, to Aschmann's come with me.
Why! Ne'er since flowers began to bloom was such a glorious show
Of all the best that florists need found in one place to grow.
The lilies are the very best yet seen on Easter day,
Azaleas are whole sheets of flowers, perfect in every way.
The Araucarias matchless are, so are the ferns all green,
With bulbs, and plumed Spiræa, the best you've ever seen.
And Aschmann gives a challenge, let every florist hear,
For flowers or prices, either, no rival does he fear.
If you wish to gather dollars like violets in the spring,
Then send your largest order, his plants the cash will bring.

An immense stock of choice Easter plants, blooming Easter week, or earlier, if desired, are now ready for immediate shipment. Come yourself or mail your order direct to headquarters.

Our reputation in growing Easter plants for the wholesale market, to which we ship all over the entire country, Canada and Mexico, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Oceans, for many years past, is sufficient guarantee to prove our ability.

Go to Headquarters for Azaleas

Azalea Indica is a specialty with us, grown for us under contract by an Azalea specialist in Belgium for the last twenty years. Have three houses full of the choicest. Only best well-known American varieties are imported, and are now in excellent condition, covered with buds, just right for Easter. We ship only good stock, full of buds and flowers.

What is the name of the best double pink azalea? Mme. Van der Cruyssen is the name, originated by the well-known azalea specialist Mr. Van der Cruyssen of Belgium. Millions are raised every year and shipped to every point of the globe from Belgium. We have a big stock on hand of this so well-known and favorite variety in tip-top condition. Every plant is as round as an apple, covered with buds, just right for Easter trade. 6 to 7-in. pots, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Deutsche Perle. This is the best pure double white, 6 in. pots, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50. Outside the Deutsche Perle we have no white to offer in small sizes, because the other varieties, Niobe and Bernard Andrea alba, of which we had a large stock, during transportation across the sea and during winter lost all their buds and have to be carried over for another year. This first variety the year imported does not do well, but makes fine plants the next year. All the varieties, except these two whites, are in fine condition, full of buds and flowers and A-1 stock.

Bernard Andrea alba (white). We have mostly big plants, $1.50, $2.00, $3.00 to $3.50 each; a few smaller sizes, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25. Niobe, also white, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Vervaeneana, De Schryveriana (double variegated), 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Dr. Moore and Memoire de L. Van Houtte (double pink), $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Professeur Wolters, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Empress of India, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Apollo (red), 50c, 60c, 75c to $1.00. Other good varieties, such as John Llewellyn, Empereur du Bresil, Talisman, Helene Thelemann, etc., 75c, $1.00 to $1.25. When we are out of one color, we send the next similar color; also, if we are out of the size ordered, we send the next size either above or below the price mentioned.

Easter Lilies, Lilium Multiflorum, the genuine Japanese Easter Lily, directly imported by us. We have a friend in Japan who looks after our interests there. He picks out for us only the good, healthy ones, and marks them while they are growing, the 10-in. bulbs, and therefore he ships to us the cream of the plants of Japan. We have lilies this year to burn; can supply, if nothing happens, every customer and others who want lilies. If you see them growing in our greenhouses you must all admit they are "crackerjacks." We sell them cheap, too. Where other florists get 15c per bud, we only charge you 10c per bud, for plants in 6-in. pots, having 5, 8, 10 and more buds to the plant. Plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud, 6-in. pots.

Tournesol Tulips, best double tulips, variegated, three bulbs in a pot, $1.80 per dozen pots; $14.00 per 100.

Begonia, new, improved Erfordii, 5-in. pots, $2.50 per dozen. Flambeau, 5-in., $2.00 per dozen.

Primula obconica, 5-in., $2.00 to $2.50 dozen.

Yellow and White Daisies, 5-in. pots, $2.00 dozen.

Cineraria hybrida grandiflora. Henry F. Michell Co.'s new improved strain. Our plants and flowers of this strain are twice the size of those of other years, with perfect green foliage, almost as big as a bushel basket, 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each.

Spiraea Gladstone. This variety, owing to the dry summer in Holland last year, will be very scarce this Easter, but we, fortunately, secured enough to fill one house full, and they are now in fine condition, full of buds, 6-in. to 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c to $1.00 each. Spiraea Floribunda, Compacta, Japonica and Superba, 6-in. pots, 25c, 30c, 40c and 50c each.

Hybrid roses, grafted, such as John Laing, Brunner, and Magna Charta, 6-in. pots, 30c; 3 ft. high, 50c, 75c to $1.00. Hermosa, 5-in., 30c to 35c. Rambler Dorothy Perkins, 6-in., 50c to 75c.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white moonflower, for which we have a world-wide reputation, now ready, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Hyacinths, four best colors, King of the Blues (dark blue), Grand Maitre (light blue), Gertrude (best pink), La Grandesse (best white), right for Easter, in cold frame, 4-in. pots, 10c to 12c.

Daffodil Von Sion, double-nosed bulbs. This is the best double yellow narcissus in existence, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3 bulbs in one pot, $2.50 to $3.00 per dozen pots.

Areca Lutescens, 4-in. pots, 3 plants in a pot, 25c.

Ficus Elastica (rubbers), 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25c, 30c, 40c and 50c.

Two houses of ferns. Whitmani ferns, 8-in. to 9-in. pans, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50; 7-in. pots, very large, $1.25 to $1.50.

Boston Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in. pots, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Scottii Ferns, 5½-in. to 6-in., 7-in. and 8-in., 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Amerpohlii, very fine, 6-in., 50c to 75c.

Wilsoni in pans, 35c.

Asparagus Plumosus, large, 3-in. pots, $5.00 per 100.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5 good leaves, 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c and 75c; 4-in. 35c.

Kentia Forsteriana, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25, 30, 40 to 45 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each; 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 20 to 25 in. high, 50c to 60c.

Hydrangea Otaksa, for Easter, pot-grown, 6 to 7 in., 35c 50c, 75c to $1.00.

Hermosa roses, 6-in. pots, 30 to 36 inches high, 50c.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

Please state if you want stock shipped in or out of pots.

All bulbs are now under cover in cold frame and will bloom in two weeks from time of bringing them in the greenhouse

The Market.

Business has been brisk. There has been a heavy run of funeral work and St. Patrick's day created a big demand for white carnations, which, naturally, went up in price. All stock is moving nicely.

Various Notes.

At the club meeting March 15, C. Plumb read a paper on "Dutch Bulbs." The meeting was fairly well attended.

Charles Plumb is exceptionally well pleased with some White Killarney stock, Waban variety, which has just been received.

Messrs. Pochelon and Taepke have returned from a very pleasant eastern trip. Boston, New York and Philadelphia were visited. Mr. Pochelon had shipped from Wm. Sim, Boston, a bunch of 200 of Boston single violets. The flowers were by far the largest ever seen here, with stems fully nine to twelve inches long.

J. F. Sullivan's brother, Mark Sullivan, is one of the editorial staff of Collier's Weekly and two of the leading articles in the Inauguration number were from his pen.

A vase of Shasta carnation, from Baur & Smith, Indianapolis, caused much favorable comment at the club's meeting March 15. The flowers carried fine. Shasta has a very wiry stem that carries the good-sized, nicely-formed, pure white flowers well. The well-shaped calyx was especially commented upon.

Some of the finest Beacon and Enchantress seen are being shipped in by Thos. Browne. H. S.

SPARTA, WIS.

Alfred Clemens, the night fireman at the establishment of Z. K. Jewett & Co., lost his life early Wednesday morning, March 10, in a fire which partly destroyed the greenhouses. His body was found under a pile of rubbish near the boiler, and was charred and disfigured almost beyond recognition.

The boiler shed was burned and part of the glass in each end of four houses was broken. All of the stock was ruined, either by the flames or by exposure to the cold, as the temperature was then 8 degrees below zero. Two of the houses are not considered worth repairing. The loss is estimated at $2,500, with no insurance.

Beaumont, Tex.—C. J. Axelson has built several large greenhouses on the L. P. Ogden property at 1608 Bibb avenue.

DECORATOR

This Grand Geranium is a decided improvement on the old standard variety, Alphonse Ricard. The floret is larger and is produced in equally large trusses. The color is a full shade brighter, and the plants bloom much quicker after shifting into the flowering pots, and are also much freer. A grand bedder.

DAYTON, OHIO.

State of Business.

While no one is complaining to any great extent, yet business has taken a step backward. This, however, is no more than what the florist expects to contend with at this season of the year. March has brought with it its same old style of weather, windy one day and springlike the next. The warm days have affected the outside bulbs, such as Dutch hyacinths, tulips, etc., and in many cases stock that was intended for Easter trade will be ready long before that time. The market at present is well supplied with bulbous stock, which sells fairly well.

White carnations are the flower of the hour for this week. The cut on these is heavy, but the demand is heavier than the supply. Dayton florists are not only coloring white carnations and other suitable white flowers, but find that the Trumpet Major also makes a beautiful St. Patrick flower. Stock of all kinds is in fine condition at present. The florists have found Lilium album to be a good seller this season; the public seems to favor it in floral designs. After the Lenten season business will, of course, take on new life.

Various Notes.

The Dayton Floral Co. is among those who have been obliged to move their bulbous plants from the frames and put them in cooler places.

Mrs. Elizabeth Young is reported to be improving, but is still confined to her home.

Several of our large stores are having their spring openings, and Herman H. Ritter reports several large decorations along this line.

Paul M. Halbrooks, manager of the greenhouses of the Livingston Seed Co., and William Underwood, of Underwood Bros., of Columbus, O., visited the Miami Floral Co. last week.

A. M. Miller, of Chicago, who has just completed a trip through Michigan, was a visitor last week. R. A. B.

JACKSON, TENN.—As the result of a prize contest, T. L. Metcalfe's greenhouses, at the corner of Church and Baltimore streets, will hereafter bear the name of Jackson's Pride. Mr. Metcalfe offered a prize for the most suitable name, and the name chosen was one of several that were submitted.

HORTICULTURAL BOOKS

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price.

Pronouncing Dictionary.

A list of plant names and the botanical terms most frequently met with in articles on trade topics, with the correct pronunciation for each. 25 cents

The Dahlia.

By LAWRENCE K. PEACOCK. A practical treatise on the habits, characteristics, cultivation and history of the dahlia with a descriptive list of all the best varieties. Copiously and elegantly illustrated. 30 cents

Handy Manual.

By J. W. JOHNSON. Illustrated with plans for greenhouse heating and ventilating, by a practical steam and hot water engineer of long experience. 128 pages. $1.00

The Rose—Its Cultivation, Varieties, etc.

By H. B. ELLWANGER. Directions for cultivation—for planting, pruning, propagation, the treatment of diseases and insect enemies—particularly valuable for its classification. Alphabetical and descriptive list of nine hundred and fifty-six varieties. Cloth. $1.25

Mushrooms—How to Grow Them.

By WM. FALCONER. This is the most practical work on the subject ever written, and the only book on growing mushrooms published in America. The author describes how he grows mushrooms and how they are grown for profit by the leading market gardeners, and for home use by the most successful private growers. Engravings drawn from nature expressly for this work. Cloth. $1.00

The Nursery Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. A complete guide to the multiplication of plants. The book comprises full practical directions for sowing, the making of all kinds of layers, stools, cuttings, propagation by bulbs and tubers, and very complete accounts of all the leading kinds of budding, grafting and inarching. An alphabetical catalog of about 1500 plants—of fruit, kitchen-garden, ornamental and greenhouse species—with directions for their multiplication. Cloth. $1.25

The Propagation of Plants.

By ANDREW S. FULLER. Illustrated with numerous engravings. Describing the process of hybridizing and crossing and also the many different modes by which cultivated plants may be propagated and multiplied. Cloth. 369 pages. $1.50

Greenhouse Management.

By PROF. L. R. TAFT, of Michigan Agricultural College. A manual for florists and flower lovers on the forcing of flowers, vegetables and fruits in greenhouses, and the propagation and care of house plants. It treats of all the plants commonly cultivated by florists and amateurs, and explains in a thorough manner the methods that have been found most successful in growing them. Particular attention is paid to the growing of cut flowers, the growing of fruits under glass, etc. Of special value will be the directions for treating plants when attacked by insects and fungi. The preparation of the soil, the use of various manures, composts and fertilizers, watering, ventilating and heating receive careful and minute attention. Cloth. 400 pages. $1.50

The Pruning Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. This is the first American work exclusively devoted to pruning. It differs from most other treatises on this subject in that the author takes particular pains to explain the principles of each operation in every detail. Specific advice is given on the pruning of the various kinds of fruits and ornamental trees, shrubs and hedges. Considerable space is devoted to the pruning and training of grape vines, both American and foreign. Cloth. 530 pages. Illustrated. $1.50

Insects and Insecticides.

By CLARENCE M. WEED, D. Sc. A practical manual concerning noxious insects and the methods of preventing their injuries. Profusely illustrated. A generally useful handbook on noxious insects. It covers the whole field of insect pests very thoroughly and is especially valuable for its complete and up-to date methods of fighting insects. The work is intensely practical. All the important insect pests are described and remedies for them, and methods of preventing their injuries described in detail. Cloth. $1.50

Handbook of Plants and General Horticulture.

By PETER HENDERSON. This new edition comprises about 50 per cent more genera than the former one, and embraces the botanical name, derivation, natural order, etc., together with a short history of the different genera, concise instructions for their propagation and culture, and all the leading local or common English names, together with a comprehensive glossary of botanical and technical terms. Plain instructions are also given for the cultivation of the principal vegetables, fruits and flowers. Cloth. $3.00

Commercial Violet Culture.

By B. T. GALLOWAY. An illustrated, comprehensive and complete treatise on the commercial culture, growing and marketing of violets for profit. Of interest to the amateur as well as the commercial grower. Cloth. 224 pages. $1.50

Handbook of Practical Landscape Gardening.

By F. R. ELLIOTT. Designed for city and suburban residences and country schoolhouses, containing designs for lots and grounds, from a lot 80x100 feet to a 40-acre plant. Cloth. $1.50

Practical Floriculture.

By PETER HENDERSON. An illustrated guide to the successful propagation of florists' plants. A detailed account of the requisites to success and a clear explanation of improved methods. For the amateur and professional florist. 325 pages. Cloth. Postpaid. $1.50

Bulbs and Tuberous Rooted Plants.

By C. L. ALLEN. A complete history, description, methods of propagation and full directions for the successful culture of bulbs in the garden, dwelling or greenhouse. The illustrations which embellish this work have been drawn from nature, and have been engraved especially for this book. Cloth. $1.50

Greenhouse Construction.

By PROF. L. R. TAFT. A complete manual on the building, heating, ventilating and arrangement of greenhouses, and the construction of hotbeds, frames and plant pits. Lucid descriptions and 118 diagrams and illustrations make every detail clear to the amateur and professional gardener and florist. Cloth. 218 pages. $1.50

Gardening for Profit.

By PETER HENDERSON. The standard work on market and family gardening. The successful experience of the author for more than thirty years, and his willingness to tell, as he does in this work, the secret of his success for the benefit of others, enables him to give most valuable information. The book is profusely illustrated. 376 pages. Cloth. $1.50

The Horticulturist's Rule Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. In no other volume can there be found such a quantity of valuable information in such a handy form for florists, fruit growers, truck gardeners and others. The chapters on insecticides and fungicides, plant diseases, seed tables and planting tables, cements, glues, etc., will all be found exceedingly valuable. Cloth. 302 pages. 75 cents

The Chrysanthemum.

By ARTHUR HERRINGTON, formerly president of Chrysanthemum Society of America. The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. 50 cents

The History and Culture of Grafted Roses for Forcing.

By ALEX. MONTGOMERY, JR. The most important contribution to the modern literature of the rose. Of much interest to every rose grower and of utmost value to growers of grafted roses. Containing practical description of the process of grafting with full details of planting and culture; also directions for treatment to carry the plants a second year. 25 cents

Henderson's Picturesque Gardens and Ornamental Gardening.

By CHARLES HENDERSON. A volume containing half-tone illustrations of the prettiest and most famous gardens and parks of the world, vividly portraying lawn, garden and landscape effects, plant and tree groupings, decorative bedding, herbaceous gardens and borders, formal gardens, lawn gardens, Italian, Japanese and English gardens, rock gardens, wild gardens, bog gardens, subtropical gardens, sunken and terrace gardens, rosariums, hardy ferneries, arches, columns, festoons, etc, picturesquely draped with vines, as well as numerous other garden embellishments. Each illustration is described and explained. Cloth with gold. $2.50

Cabbage, Cauliflower and Allied Vegetables.

By C. L. ALLEN. An explanation of the requirements conditions, cultivation and general management pertaining to the entire cabbage group. The chapter on seed raising is probably the most authorative treatise on this subject ever published. Insects and fungi are given due attention. Illustrated. 128 pages. Cloth. 50 cents

Greenhouse Heating.

THE COAL MARKET.

The fuel industry has been in a depressed state all winter, and greenhouse owners have, as a rule, bought their coal cheaper this season than for several years. It is worthy of consideration that the production of bituminous coal in this country is practically a million tons for each working day, while the production of anthracite is about a million tons for each Sunday of the year; in other words, six times as much soft coal is mined as is produced in the hard coal district.

In both fields the overproduction this year has been large. In the soft coal market there is no prospect of any immediate advance in prices; it appears that the approaching summer will be one of the dullest in the history of the soft coal industry, and prices will be low, particularly on the cheaper grades. The higher grades of bituminous coal are coming into more general use all the time, and more rapidly than ever since prices have been low, and the higher the grade of the coal the better it is likely to maintain its market and its price this summer.

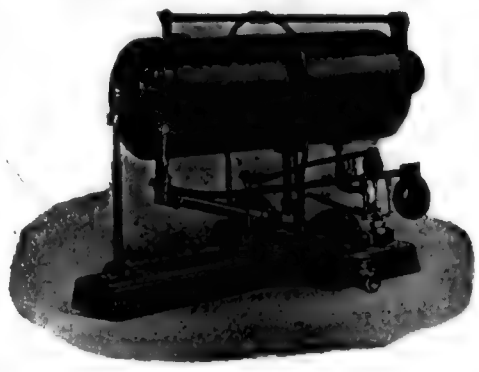
The hard coal miners are just now negotiating with the mine operators for a renewal of the labor contract, and dealers and consumers are taking the precaution of putting in stock to insure themselves against the unlikelihood of a labor war. But even if a strike should be called, of which there is only remote prospect, the price of hard coal could not soar, because of the large stocks which have accumulated.

GREENHOUSE AND STORE.

We are about to build a greenhouse at the back of our store. It will be twenty-four feet nine inches wide, seventy-five feet long and eight feet to the gutter. The floor of the greenhouse will be three feet higher than the store floor, and the basement will be four feet below the store floor. Which heating system would you recommend—steam or hot water? We would prefer hot water, as it does not need so much care. We wish to heat both store and greenhouse. The weather here, in eastern Minnesota, gets 30 degrees below zero, and in many winters still lower. We want 60 degrees of heat.

Kindly give us a plan of piping and state what boiler would give the best satisfaction. Our store is sixty-five feet long, and we intend to put the boiler in the basement at the back of the store, four feet below the store floor and right where the greenhouse starts. That will put the boiler between the two buildings, so that the piping will be sixty-five feet in the store and seventy-five feet in the greenhouse. We want a heating system that we will not have to crowd in cold weather. E. B.

Under your environment I would not advise using a boiler rated at less than 2,500 square feet of radiation. The greenhouse will require nearly 1,000 feet, and the store almost as much more. If the greenhouse is piped with eighteen 2-inch pipes it should provide the temperature desired with hot water, which under your conditions will prove best, without doubt. There are many makes of boiler that would prove satisfactory. We cannot say that any particular style is best under these conditions, since there are so many that would answer. I would advise you to write to the advertisers in the Review, study their catalogues, and make your own choice. L. C. C.



STEAM FOR COMPLETE RANGE.

My greenhouses are located in the southern part of British Columbia. They run east and west, facing the public street on the north and east and running back to a back street or alley on the west. Between the west end of the main houses and the back street, however, is a shed, extending north and south. At the northeast corner of the grounds is the dwelling house. West of the dwelling house, at the northwest corner of the range, are three short houses. No. 1, beginning at the north, is 18x60; No. 2 is 15x60, and No. 3 is 10x60. South of this are two more houses, Nos. 4 and 5, each 25x110. South of No. 5 I am planning to build two more houses, Nos. 6 and 7, each 30x110.

The boiler-house at present is on the back street, southwest of house No. 5, but I propose moving it south, so as to place it at the southwest corner of the completed range. The grade of the land in the length of the houses, from the shed to the front street, is four feet. The grade of the land from No. 1 to No. 7 is twelve feet. The front end of all the houses will be glass, and there will be three feet of glass in the south wall.

Would you kindly let me know how you would propose to heat these houses, by steam? State the number of 1¼-inch pipes required to heat them to 60 degrees in zero weather. Give the best arrangement of these pipes, the size and number of the main pipes and the size of the return. I am thinking of putting in a steam trap. Do you think it would draw the condensed water up the 4-foot grade, and would a back pressure valve be needed?

The boiler I have is a marine boiler, seven feet long and five feet in diameter, with a steam dome two feet by one foot six inches. It has fifty 2½-inch tubes, a round firebox and a grate surface of two feet six inches by four feet. It has been tested to seventy-five pounds of pressure. Do you think it is large enough for the work?

Could I connect the return pipe from houses 1, 2 and 3 into one of the pipes in No. 4, or would they need a separate pipe to the boiler? How could I get a pipe to heat the dwelling house? Have I arranged right for my boiler, or should it be at the other end of the houses? Of course, it is more convenient to have it on the back street, but if it would be any decided advantage to have it at the other end I would put it there. I think it is likely I will turn the shed into a lean-to. Would I have to sink my boiler any? S. G. T.

From what you say, I judge the proposed site for the boiler house is four feet higher than the opposite end of the houses. If this is the case, it will be greatly to your disadvantage, unless the fall in the other direction is sufficient to overbalance this. It would be best to locate the lean-to on the opposite end of the houses, provided it is lower, and set the boiler in a pit so the water line in the boiler will be at least three feet below the grade of the lowest radiating pipe in the system. If, for sufficient reason, the boiler must be placed on higher ground, sink it lower and carry the return at the opposite end of the houses and carry it back by means of a water-leg running from the far end of the greenhouses to the boiler-room, but even with this plan it will be well to have the water-leg two to three feet below the lowest heating pipes in the houses. Otherwise, you will require a feed pump or a trap, and a hot well.

Carry a 4-inch riser to the center of house No. 5; from there to the middle of house No. 3 use 3-inch, and from there on 2-inch. Use eighteen 1¼-inch pipes in each of the houses 6 and 7; fourteen 1¼-inch pipes in houses 4 and 5; six in No. 3; nine in No. 2, and twelve in No. 1. If the water-leg does not prove satisfactory, empty all condensation into a hot well in the boiler-room and return the hot water by means of a trap or feed pump. I think your boiler can handle this load, but during severe weather will probably require constant care.

MONTREAL.

Current Comment.

We are having splendid weather now, with plenty of sunshine. The snow is slowly disappearing and the roads are in bad condition.

Business has been rather slack lately, owing, perhaps, to the Lenten season.

Most of the stores are fitted up with harps, green ribbon and shamrocks, in readiness for St. Patrick's day. In this case, P. McKenna & Son deserve special mention for the pretty window display they have.

Everything is looking bright for Easter. There seems to be no cause for worry, but plenty of everything in both plants and cut flowers.

Mrs. White has begun business again. Her store is fitted up prettily with green woodwork, etc., and looks nicer than before the fire—which means a lot.

Campbell's are showing some splendid violets and sweet peas, and they have plenty of work at all times.

J. Bennett, P. McKenna and others spent the week end in Ottawa, where they found everything and everybody flourishing.

T. White, of Lachine, left last week for England, to take charge of a large seed business there.

Building operations will begin soon, and C. Smith, of Lachine, intends adding to his present establishment.

HAMMOND'S GRAPE DUST

MILDEW ON ROSES, CARNATIONS, ETC. IT IS SIMPLE AND EASILY APPLIED.

Staatsburg, N. Y., May 25th, 1908.

MR HAMMOND. Dear Sir:
Replying to your inquiries regarding Grape Dust, would say that we use it solely on Roses, Carnations and Chrysanthemums. As a fungicide we have not found anything to equal it; it is simple and easily applied. We close down the ventilators and fill the house with dust blown through the bellows; when the dust has settled down we ventilate again, putting on a little air as requir d. We have been using your Grape Dust with good results for the last 14 years. Yours truly,
JAMES BLAIR.

The Market.

Business conditions generally have not changed in this city, nor can any special improvement be noticed in the flower trade in particular. At least, that is the information one gets on inquiry, but on observing the wholesale houses one can see stock getting more plentiful every day and still it disappears by night. The commission men say that the lower prices make it possible for the smaller dealers to dispose of more stock and that they have no complaint to make. There has been no change in prices, except in white carnations, which have advanced, owing to the demand for stock to color for St. Patrick's day. The weather has been nice in spots—sunshine and rain, snow and freezing every twenty-four hours, and you can pick your choice out of it and enjoy yourself.

Beauties are getting more plentiful, but bulbous flowers have almost disappeared, except southern narcissi, which have been quite abundant. There are also more callas than there have been for some years.

Various Notes.

The retail stores have lately been making their window decorations principally of blooming plants. In some cases the plants are so handsomely dressed that one would think the florist was copying the fashionable modiste, as some of the plants have full skirts, others tucked in a little, while in some instances the fashionable sheath gown is shown to good effect on some poor, innocent plant.

R. J. Daschbach and H. E. Klunder, who have charge of Randolph & McClements' Penn avenue store, arranged a bride's table in their window last Saturday. The table was set with the silver and china, which was white and gold. The centerpiece was of yellow larkspur, lilac and lavender primula, the ribbons coming out on the table. The place cards were cards in the form of roses, tied with lavender ribbon, with the monogram of the bride and groom and the name of the guest in gold letters painted on the ribbon. The effect was beautiful and artistic. The window was crowded with fashionable women until late in the evening. The young men were recipients of many compliments from interested young ladies.

The boys in the trade have been trying to get up a bowling league, with teams from the north side, east end and downtown retailers, and a wholesalers' team. They figure that a four-team league would make it interesting and bring the boys together oftener. LENOX, MASS.

Horticultural Society.

The regular meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held Saturday, March 6, with President A. Jenkins in the chair. George W. Allwood and D. Ferguson were elected active members of the society.

The following exhibitions will be held under the auspices of the society: Annual and perennial, July 28, and the fall exhibition, October 26 and 27. Schedules are printed for these and can be had upon application to the secretary.

A. J. Loveless was awarded a diploma for a display of amaryllis flowers, some of them being very rich in color, and also gave a short talk on their culture.

The following question was asked: "What is the cause of disease in Lilium Harrisii?" An interesting discussion took place, but no definite conclusion was arrived at. Several instances were cited where large commercial growers had thrown away thousands of diseased plants.

Saturday, April 3, will be rose and carnation night, and it is safe to say that competition in the various classes will be keen, as carnations are grown quite extensively in and around Lenox. After business is disposed of, there will be a smoker, when members who were not asked to sing at the dinner will have a chance to show their vocal talent.

The annual dinner was held at the Curtis hotel Thursday, March 4, and was a decided success, about eighty members and friends being present. The night was far from being ideal, as a blizzard was raging at the time; otherwise the attendance would have been larger. After justice had been done to the good things provided by Landlord Curtis, President A. Jenkins spoke on behalf of the society, and introduced A. McConnachie as toastmaster for the evening. Thomas Grey, in a very humorous speech, spoke on behalf of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Boston and the North Shore Horticultural Society, and said that gardeners as a class were the biggest set of "grafters" that he knew. During the course of the evening a telegram was read from A. T. Boddington, of New York, regretting his inability to attend and wishing the members a pleasant time. Various other persons contributed to the success of the evening, namely, J. Clifford, George Mote, W. Glennan, F. Howard, W. Jack and W. D. Curtis. Upon a suggestion from the toastmaster, a rising vote of appreciation was accorded W. D. Curtis for the splendid banquet. The meeting was closed with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" by the entire party. G. H. INSTONE, Sec'y.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The last monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held on the evening of February 26, which had been set apart as carnation night. There was an unusually large attendance of the members, who all seemed mesmerized on seeing such a display of carnations.

The prize offered by Mr. Marshall, of Katonah, for three varieties, six of each, brought forward heavy competition. First honors went to James Stuart, Mamaroneck, who put up Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress and Victory in great shape. Robert Angus was second, and Thomas Aitchison and W. Jamieson each received an honorable mention.

F. R. Pierson Co. exhibited two promising seedlings, one pure white and the other pink, and both were awarded certificates. William Roberts, of Ossining, also received a certificate, for a good dark seedling. Francis Gibson received a cultural certificate for a magnificent bunch of single violets.

The evening was largely devoted to revising the schedules and fixing the dates for the June and fall shows.
